AN EXHIBITION OF ORIENTAL AND EUROPEAN MANUSCRIPTS

WITH the removal of the exhibit on city planning, a part of the collection of manuscripts and rare books has been installed in the main exhibition room at the central building. In selecting the material, special prominence has been given to manuscripts which antedate the era of printed books, and to a description of these the following article has been restricted.

In the method of arrangement, an effort has been made to show the history of writing and book-making by the Babylonians, Egyptians, Hebrews, and other oriental nations, and in western Europe, from the earliest times down to the sixteenth century A. D.

The earliest writing shown, that of the Babylonians, dates from the twenty-fifth to the sixth century B. C. The oldest example exhibited is a cone of baked clay bearing an inscription commemorative of Gudea, patesi or priest-king of Lagash in southern Babylonia, about 2450 B. C. The text is written in the old Babylonian wedge-shaped characters and in the language known as Sumerian or pre-Semitic. A very clear example of this writing is shown in the inscription on a limestone slab commemorative of the building of a temple by Gimil-Sin, king of Ur, following a victory over the Semitic Amorites, about 2200 B. C. Following the above in arrangement are sixteen small tablets of baked clay incised with lines of cuneiform characters, most of them in the Sumerian language. Seven come from Nippur, where excavations have brought to light large quantities of such tablets. The inscriptions chronicle the commercial relations of various temples, a record of whose business transactions was commonly kept in this way. Two are of special interest for their state of preservation; they are enclosed in clay envelopes, a corner of one of which is broken off so as to show a portion of the inscription on the enclosure, and the envelope of the other is broken and loose so as to show the contents when removed. The inscriptions on these envelopes usually indicate in a shortened form the nature of the text enclosed.

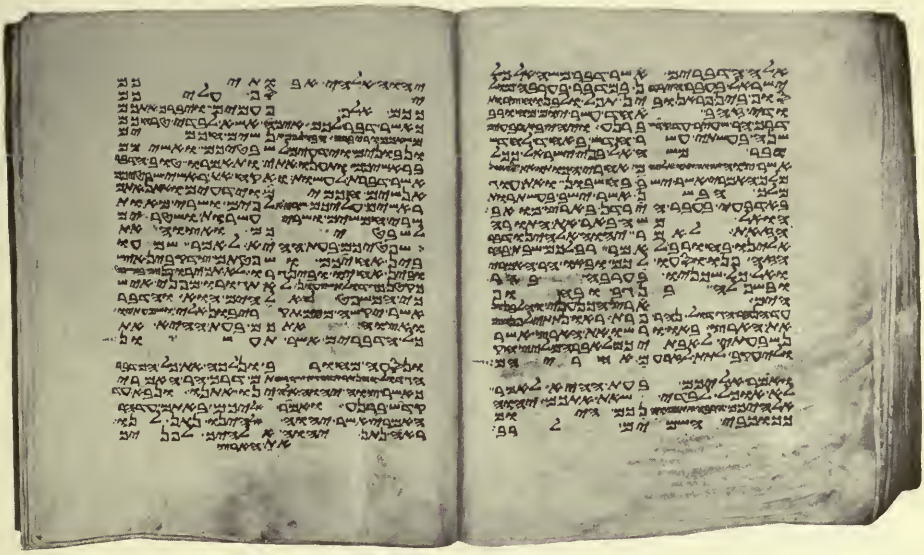
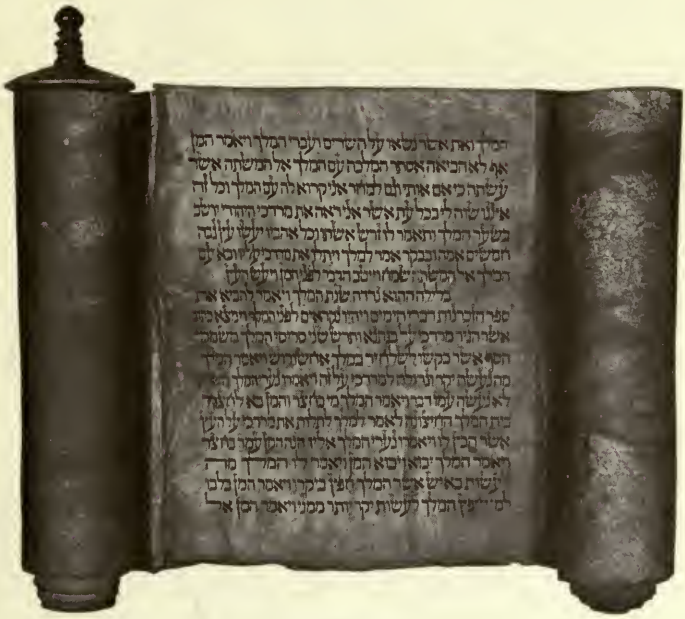
To a somewhat later period belong portions of two slabs from Nineveh incised with parts of the "standard inscription" of Ashurnasirpal, king of Assyria, in cuneiform characters in the Assyrian language. An excellent specimen of Neo-Babylonian script is shown on a truncated cone cylinder of baked clay dating from the time of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, B. C. 604-561. It was the custom of the Babylonians, on the erection of a new building, to place a number of these cones in the foundations and walls in apertures left open to receive them and afterwards sealed up. The practice still survives in a modified form in the ceremonies of the present day at the laying of corner-stones in public buildings. Two examples of early Egyptian writing are on view: the first, a fragment of black basalt, said to be part of a pedestal from a statue of the Egyptian god Horus, with an inscription in hieroglyphic characters; and the second, a small fragment of an Egyptian papyrus roll, with text in hieratic characters.

In the second case are specimens of Hebrew writing from the second to the eighteenth century A. D. The earliest examples are in the form of gold and silver amulets from ancient graves in Irbid in the Hauran and date from the first centuries of the Christian era. These amulets were usually inscribed with charms to ward off the evil eye and were carried on the body as a protection against calamities and demons. One of the gold amulets is still accompanied by the small cylindrical beaten gold case in which it was worn. The text is on narrow pieces of foil varying in length from two to five inches and in characters so minute as hardly to be legible without the aid of a lens.

Two examples of Hebrew rolls are shown, one much older than the other. The first and earlier, a Pentateuch roll, has an interesting history. It comes from China and belonged to that tribe of Jews who migrated north and settled at K'ai-Fêng Fu in 1163. Here for a long time the colony flourished, having its own rabbis and observing the religious ceremonies of the Jewish faith. At last it fell upon evil times; in 1850, of the seven hundred original families, only seven remained, and the settlement is now practically extinct. The roll probably dates from the fifteenth century. It is on goat- or sheepskin and measures 70 feet 5 inches in length by 23 inches in width. Unfortunately it is imperfect, lacking in all after Leviticus XVIII. This scroll, with others, was brought by its owners to Peking and there sold to Mr. S. Wells Williams, who presented it to the American Bible Society in 1868. The second roll is the Megillah, or roll of Esther, written on goatskin, perhaps in the seventeenth century. Another copy of the Hebrew Pentateuch is shown in a vellum manuscript in book form of the year 1231-1232 A. D.



SAMARITAN PENTATEUCH



HEBREW MEGILLAH ROLL

The text is in the old Samaritan characters still in use by a remnant of this Jewish sect in Nâblus, the ancient Sichem, in Palestine. Our information in regard to the date is derived from a cryptogram at the beginning of Deuteronomy, composed of single letters selected from successive lines of text and so arranged as to form a central column, one letter above the other. It reads: "I, Abraham, son of Israel, son of Abraham, son of Joseph the prince, king of Israel, have written this copy of the Holy Law for myself in the name of my son in the year 629 of the Ishmaelites, which is 3200 years after the Children of Israel settled in the land of Canaan and 5993 years after the creation of the world." The Samaritan Jews claim to be descendants of the ten tribes, to possess the orthodox religion of Moses, and to have transmitted their Pentateuch with the utmost care as to the letter of the text from the time of Nehemiah, i. e., about 432 B. C. If this be so, we have here at least an approximation of the original Samaritan Pentateuch as received from the Jews after Ezra's reforms of 444 B. C., and the earliest external witness to the Hebrew text.

Two manuscripts, on paper, give illustrations of Syriac writing of the thirteenth or fourteenth century and of the nineteenth. The earlier manuscript is a copy of the Evangelistarium, i. e., the four gospels, arranged in lessons of the Jacobite (Monophysite) Syrian Church. The text is largely that of the revision made by Thomas of Heraclea, bishop of Mabug in Mesopotamia in 66 A. D. The manuscript is written in the Estrangela Syriac characters of the eighth or ninth century. It was given by a Syrian priest at Mosul to Dr. Asahel Grant, missionary to the Nestorians, in May, 1842, and by him presented to the American Bible Society in 1843. The later manuscript is a collection of charms to cure disease and contains some very curious illustrations in colors.

Ethiopic writing is represented by an amulet roll, on vellum, containing magical prayers and several pictures in colors; and by a Psalter and Manual of prayers, both on vellum, of the seventeenth and eighteenth century respectively. Accompanying the Psalter is an old leather travelling case into which the book was put and then slung over the back and carried from place to place.

A single Armenian manuscript shows writing of the eighteenth century in that language. It contains philosophical treatises and a commentary on the New Testament written in a fine regular hand.

The third case is devoted to manuscripts in Arabic, Turkish, and Persian. The oldest of these are three fragments of the Koran in Arabic in old Kufic and Neshki characters. All three are on vellum and date from the eighth to the eleventh century. Other exhibits, on paper, include illuminated manuscripts of the Koran, a collection of Mohammedan prayers, and writings concerning the prophet. Of special interest among the Arabic manuscripts is the Anwār al-Tanzīl (The lights of revelation), a commentary on the Koran. The text, on the opening pages, is written in white ink on a background of full gold and surrounded by borders of the most delicate frets and tracery in pale blue, green, and other colors. The execution of this manuscript was completed in 976 A. H., 1568 A. D. The binding is of colored and gilded leather cut out by hand. From Persia the book was brought by Mr. S. G. W. Benjamin, at one time minister from the United States to that country, and presented to the Astor Library in 1885 by Mr. John Jacob Astor. Two Persian manuscripts, of the sixteenth and eighteenth centuries, are also fine specimens of oriental art in illumination and binding. The first is the story of the two Bedouin lovers, Layla and Majnūn, by the celebrated Persian poet Nūr al-Dīn 'Abd al-Rahman Jamī. The text is written in a beautiful Nastalik script obliquely across a small strip of colored paper that is inlaid in the middle of the page. The borders are tinted in delicate shades and the illumination is heightened throughout with gold. There are thirty-nine numbered folios and six numbered full-page miniatures. Of the miniatures the first four are signed "Work of Mahmūd," and the last two "Work of Khoja Nakkāsh." The whole was written by the well-known calligrapher Sultan 'Alī Meshhedī, called the "Sultan of calligraphers," who died in the year 919 A. H., 1513 A. D. This manuscript was formerly in the library of the Mogul Emperors at Delhi and bears the stamp of Shah Akbar and Shah Jahān. It was brought from the East by Mr. Benjamin and given by Mr. John Jacob Astor in 1885 to the Astor Library. The second Persian manuscript, the "Shāh-nāma" or Book of Kings, written by Firdousī, is a series of heroic poems containing the history of Persia from the earliest times up to the conquest of that empire by the Arabs. It contains four illuminated opening pages and sixty-six miniatures and is bound in the modern Indian decorative style.

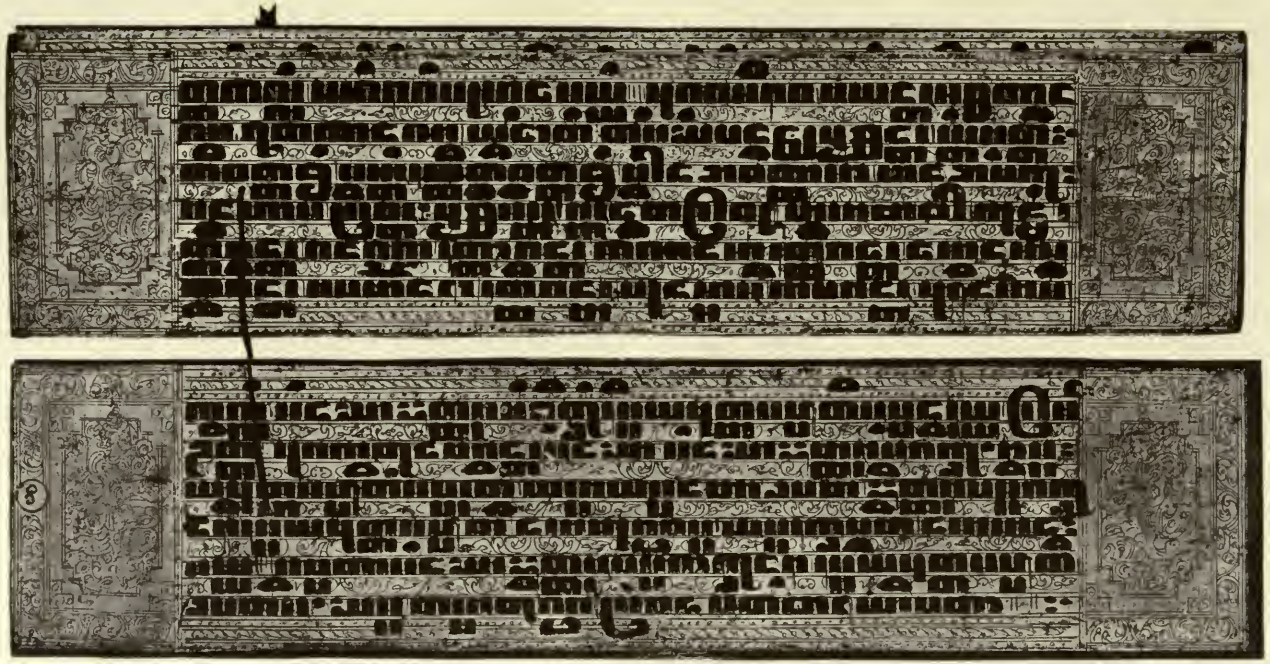
A characteristic form of writing as practised in India and adjoining countries is seen in the palm leaf manuscripts in the next case. Seven such manuscripts are shown. The languages represented are Sinhalese, Tamil, and Pāli, in Burmese and Cambodian script. The Pāli manuscripts are all selections, more or less lengthy, from the sacred books of Pāli literature. Perhaps the most beautiful of these is one written on lacquered leaves in square Burmese characters quite different from the other examples of Burmese script. The Tamil manuscript is a small dictionary of that language, and the Sinhalese, an ethical poem known as the Lovedasangarava. In most of these manuscripts the characters are scratched on the dry palm leaves with a style and in some cases made clearer afterwards by coloring. The leaves are then tied together in sections between wooden boards and commonly lettered with gilt and decorative marking-sticks. With these manuscripts are shown the coverings in which they are preserved — in one case, a box, painted with a floral design; in another, a wrapper of soft figured India silk; and in a third, a papier maché bottle.

Two manuscripts — long pieces of paper folded into leaves — show the development of book-making among the Siamese. The paper of one of these has been colored black and the text written in yellow ink; the paper of the other has been left in its original state and is painted with pictures in bright colors.



PALI PALM LEAF MANUSCRIPT

By the side of the Siamese manuscripts is a soothsayer's book from northern Sumatra. It is written in the Toba dialect of the Batta language on a species of bark folded fan-shape into leaves and is arranged to show several of the rude illustrations which occur here and there in the text.

The exhibit of orientalia ends with one of the greatest rarities in Chinese literature, namely, one of the 11,100 volumes of the Yung Lo Ta Tien, the most gigantic encyclopaedia ever compiled. This volume, containing sections 15,957 and 15,958, was saved from the fire which destroyed the Imperial Library at Peking, on the twenty-third of June, 1900, during the siege of the legations by the Boxer rebels. An eye-witness writes, "An attempt was made to save the famous Yung Lo Ta Tien, but heaps of volumes had been destroyed, so that the attempt was given up." A knowledge of the history of this publication and the vicissitudes through which it passed adds to the interest of this particular volume. The third emperor of the Ming dynasty, known as Yung Lo, A. D. 1403-1425, issued a commission for the production of an encyclopaedia which should embrace all that had ever been written in the four departments of (1) the Confucian canon, (2) history, (3) philosophy, and (4) general literature, including astronomy, geography, cosmogony, medicine, divination, Buddhism, Taoism, arts, and handicrafts; and in 1408 such an encyclopaedia was laid before the throne, received the imperial approval, and was named Yung Lo Ta Tien, or The Great Standard of Yung Lo. To achieve this, three commissioners, with five directors, twenty sub-directors, and a staff of 2141 assistants, had labored for the space of five years. Its contents ran to no fewer than 22,877 separate sections, to which must be added an index filling 60 sections. Each section contained about 20 leaves, making a total of 917,480 pages for the whole work. Each page consisted of 16 columns of characters averaging 25 to each column, or a total of 366,992,000 characters, to which, in order to bring the amount into terms of English words, about another third would have to be added. This extraordinary work was never printed, as the expense would have been too great, although it was actually transcribed for that purpose; and later on, two more copies were made, one of which was finally stored in Peking and the other with the original, in Nanking. Both the Nanking copies perished in the fall of the Ming dynasty [in 1644]; and a similar fate overtook the Peking copy, with the exception of a few odd volumes, at the siege of the legations in 1900. The latter was bound in 11,100 volumes, covered with yellow silk, each volume being 1 foot 8 inches in length by 1 foot in breadth, and averaging from 1 to 2 inches in thickness.

The development of writing in occidental countries is now taken up in the exhibition. Of the writing of the first eight centuries after the birth of Christ the library has no original documents, but photographic facsimiles of various texts, made from the originals in European libraries, give an excellent idea of writing from the fourth century to the beginning of the eighth. The earliest of these is the Codex Vaticanus 1209 of the Greek New Testament, a manuscript of about the year 380 A. D., the original of which is now in the Vatican Library at Rome. The second manuscript, of about the year 410, is the Codex Alexandrinus of the Greek New Testament and Clementine epistles, of which the original is in the British Museum. This latter and the preceding manuscript are among the oldest written versions of the Scripture known to exist. The two following manuscripts are examples of early writing in Latin. One is the Codex Vindobonensis Latinus 15, of the works of Livy, of about the year 550; and the other, the Codex Vossianus Oblongus, of the works of Lucretius, of about the year 700. The originals of these manuscripts are preserved in the Imperial Library in Vienna and in the library of the University of Leiden, respectively.

The oldest original occidental writing in the library belongs to the ninth century. It is a Latin lectionary of the gospels, a Carlovingian illuminated manuscript on vellum, one of the oldest and finest in America. There are three hundred and ninety-five leaves, with headings in fine Roman capitals, large uncials, or rustic capitals and many pages written in gold on a purple ground. The artistic decoration of this manuscript was probably executed for Charles the Bald, whose fondness for manuscripts of this kind is well known to students of palaeographical history. From the prominence given in the text to the festival of the dedication of Saint Michael's Church, it seems likely to have been written in a monastery dedicated to that archangel, and, as there was such a monastery near Verdun which fell to the share of Charles the Bald at the partition of Lorraine in A. D. 870, it may be that this manuscript was written there and at about that time. In the large miniatures, it is evident, from the manner in which the illuminator has depicted Saint Mark and Saint Luke, that the chrysography in this volume was effected with an ordinary pen dipped in fluid gold. The richness and artistic value of the illuminations in this volume, together with its great age and perfect preservation, make it one of the finest existing productions of the revival of learning and taste under Charlemagne, and give it preëminence in the library's collection. The volume was given to the Astor Library by Mr. John Jacob Astor in 1884.

A photographic facsimile of a tenth century manuscript of the works of Terence and an eleventh century manuscript of the works of Tacitus fill the gap between the Carlovingian manuscript and the twelfth century. From this period on, the library can show originals, and there are on view twenty-four illuminated manuscripts covering in time the period from about 1180 to about 1540.

Of the writing of the twelfth century, the example on view is a copy of the Latin gospels of Saint Matthew and Saint Mark, in a French hand. A note on one of the fly-leaves records the passage of the volume by gift from the hands of the chanter and canon of the Cathedral of Saint Maurice at Vienne, in the south of France, on April 16, 1486.

Of the writing of the thirteenth century, there are on exhibition three Latin Bibles showing the style of the script of that time in England, France, and Italy, respectively.

CARLOVINGIAN ILLUMINATED MANUSCRIPT, ABOUT A. D. 870

Ten manuscripts of the fourteenth century give an excellent idea of the writing in several countries and at different periods during the century. Of these ten, five are copies of the Latin Bible or parts of the Latin Bible, of which the most noteworthy is the large Italian folio with its finely executed miniatures and unusual borders and designs. Of all the fourteenth century material on view, the most interesting, perhaps, is the copy of the Wycliffite translation of the New Testament into English. Of the seventeen genuine copies of Wyclif's Testament which are known to exist, only eight are perfect. In 1884, when the volume was given by Mr. Astor to the library, it was stated that only three copies were known of a date earlier than 1400, and of these three, the only perfect one was the copy now on exhibition. Of the one hundred and seventy manuscripts which pass under Wyclif's name, only the seventeen mentioned above have the right to bear it. They contain the New Testament, the translation of which he completed about 1380, most copies of which, on the judgment pronounced against him as a heretic in 1381, were mutilated or destroyed. The manuscripts usually met with are copies of an independent and different version executed some thirty or forty years afterwards, the success of which caused the codices of Wyclif's genuine work then existing to become still scarcer than before. Of the Old Testament there exist likewise two different versions, the earlier of which was in a similar manner effaced by the latter. Among the Egerton manuscripts in the British Museum there is a Wyclif Bible which originally belonged to Humphrey, duke of Gloucester, and which bears his arms. This circumstance, taken in connection with the words "A vous me ly Gloucester," which are written on the first page of our manuscript, seems to favor the supposition that we have here the autograph of the "Good Duke Humphrey," pledging himself to protect the owner of the book at that time. Wyclif's New Testament was a perilous piece of property at that period, and only to be kept in secret; even so, the holder strove to win assurance of protection from one more powerful than himself. The copy on view comes from the library of Thomas Banister; it is described as Codex S in Sir Frederick Madden's critical edition of the Wyclif Bible.

Of all the early manuscripts on exhibition those of the fourteenth century, from the number and variety of their illuminations, attract most quickly the attention of the casual observer. The most elaborate of these manuscripts are prayer-books, missals, and books of hours of the Roman Catholic Church. Some of those shown are in the original monastic bindings of smooth or stamped pigskin and a few still retain clasps of wrought metal. In contrast with the books just mentioned is the German Biblia pauperum, a manuscript on paper, with more than one hundred and eighty colored drawings of subjects taken from the Old Testament, rudely executed in the German style of the early block-books. This early version of a portion of the Old Testament (Pentateuch, Judges, Ruth, Chronicles, and Books of Kings) is very curious. At the end of Judges is the name of the scribe: "finitus est liber iste per me Cunradum Schlapperitzi." The rude drawings are very interesting;

many of them are the full size of the page, and others occupy more than half The volume opens with twelve large designs representing the Creation an the story of Adam and Eve, on the last of which, in contemporary hand writing, is the famous triplet:

Do Adam rut un eua span
Wer was do ain edel man
Dem got soliche eren gan.

When Adam delved and Eve span
Who was then a gentleman,
In whom from God such honor ran.

The story of Samson is illustrated by twenty-five drawings, the book o Ruth by six, and the other portions of Scripture by the remainder. In addi tion to the one hundred and eighty-seven large drawings are numerous other of bordered capitals, historiated borders, etc., composed of figures of animals fruits, flowers, and grotesques. On the fly-leaves at the end, also in a hand writing of the period, are recorded the years of scarcity from 1608 to 163 inclusive, the price of corn, visitations of the plague, war, etc. The greates importance of the book lies in the possible relation which it bears to the histor of printing. The initial letter, representing the Annunciation, is printed fron a woodcut; one of the pictures bears the date 1445, and, if this be really th date of the completion of the manuscript, this initial woodcut affords a example of printing which antedates the invention of typography.

One of the finest examples of Italian art of the period is the sixteent century vellum manuscript which chronologically ends the exhibition of writ ing. It is the volume commonly known as the "Towneley lectionary." Th illumination is by Giulio Clovio, 1498-1578, who is generally conceded to b the greatest of miniature painters of the Italian school. The pictures portra the life of Christ, and consist, in addition to six miniatures of the evangelists eight historiated borders, and four headings with figures for intitulations, o six full-page paintings representing the following subjects: the Adoration o the shepherds, the Sermon on the mount, Saint Peter holding the keys o heaven given by Christ, the Resurrection, the Descent of the Holy Ghost and the Day of Judgment. Of these six paintings, only one is supposed t be entirely the work of Clovio, but this, the final picture, called the Da of Judgment, is considered his masterpiece. The work is without date, bu was executed during the period when the artist was under the protectio of Cardinal Farnese and was given by the latter to Paul III., pope fron 1534-1549. This is the most beautiful example of the illumination of manu scripts in the library and one of the finest in existence.

From the stone tablets of the Babylonians to the illuminated manuscrip of Clovio, from twenty-five centuries before Christ to sixteen centuries after the efforts of various nations to record in some permanent way their deed and thoughts, and to express them in written symbols, are shown in th present exhibit. It is hoped that the wealth and scope of the library's resource in manuscript material may in this way become more widely and better known and a larger public may be interested.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

Readers and Visitors

In the main reading room of the central building 16,296 readers consulted 66,764 volumes. Special reading rooms in this building were used by 38,778 readers, making a total for the whole building of 55,074 readers.

Visitors to the building numbered 219,720.

Gifts

During the month the following noteworthy gifts were received:

From Hon. John L. Cadwalader, the Grolier Club publication, "Baziliologia, a booke of kings, Notes on a rare series of engraved English royal portraits from William the Conqueror to James I," published under the above title in 1618, New York, 1913; from Miss Ruth B. Moran of New York, four etchings by Mrs. M. Nimmo Moran; from Hon. George L. Rives, "Proposed improvements for Newport, a report prepared for the Newport Improvement Association by Frederick Law Olmsted," Cambridge, Mass., 1913; from the Boston Book Company, a collection of periodicals consisting of 2,826 pieces; from Mr. Dwight Mallett of New York, 55 volumes and pamphlets of public documents; from the New York Herald, a miscellaneous collection of histories, biographies, novels, etc., 952 pieces in all; from Hon. L. E. Quigg, 675 volumes and 525 pamphlets of government documents; from Miss Schwab of New York, a collection of histories, biographies, novels, text-books, etc., consisting of 782 pieces; from Mr. Charles H. Stebbins of New York, the Encyclopaedia Britannica, Edinburgh, 1842, 21 volumes; from Miss Abby Stevens of Newport, R. I., 24 volumes in Moon type for the blind.

From the following authors were received copies of their own publications:

Mr. Bion J. Arnold of Chicago, Dr. Rocco Bellantoni of New York, Mr. Louis D. Brandeis of Boston, Rev. David James Burrell of New York, Rev. Herbert G. Coddington of Syracuse, Mr. Henry Coyle of Roxbury, Mass., Mr. Joseph G. Giambalvo of Brooklyn, Mrs. L. Haffkin of Karkoff, Russia, Mr. Thomas W. Lawson of Boston, Mr. Alexander M'Allan of Brooklyn, Hon. John Skelton Williams, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

From Miss Ruth Shepard Granniss of New York came a copy of her privately printed book (one of 50 copies printed), "An American friend of Southey;" and from Mr. Frederick Towne Proctor of Utica, New York, a copy of his work, "The Frederick Towne Proctor collection of antique watches and table clocks," Utica, N. Y., 1913.

Additions to the Library's genealogical collection were received from the following persons:

Mr. Robert M. Darbee of Rockville Centre, N. Y., Mr. Louis P. De Boer of New York, Mr. Oswald G. Knapp of Inwood, England, and Mr. Harry Walters Sheldon of Yonkers, N. Y.

Exhibitions

The exhibition illustrating the "Making of an etching," in Room 321, has attracted an unusual amount of attention, evidently having interested the general public as well as print lovers and connoisseurs. This exhibition was inspected by 20,104 persons during December.

In the Stuart Gallery, the fifteenth and sixteenth century engravings and the Brangwyn etchings have remained on view. On December 13, the etchings by A. T. Millar were replaced by wood engravings by Henry Marsh, who died in November. This memorial exhibition was made in accordance with the usual custom of the Library. Besides a number of prints showing Marsh's delicate and exact rendition of textures in the delineation of insect life, the exhibit includes some engravings after drawings by John La Farge, and several after J. Carter Beard, who also died recently.

From January 9 until February 10 there was shown in the Central Children's Room an exhibit of Louis Rhead's illustrations for "Gulliver's travels," of Paul Bransom's illustrations in color for Kenneth Grahame's "The wind in the willows," one of N. C. Wyeth's illustrations for Stevenson's "Kidnapped," and other original illustrations.

December Work

During the month of December there were received at the Library 26,976 volumes and 6,738 pamphlets, of which 4,991 volumes and 6,738 pamphlets were credited to the reference department and 21,985 volumes to the circulation department.

Of the reference department receipts 1,483 volumes and 264 pamphlets were purchases, 3,504 volumes and 6,474 pamphlets were gifts, and 4 volumes were exchanges. For the circulation department 21,839 volumes were purchases and 146 were gifts.

The reference department catalogued 4,473 volumes and 3,112 pamphlets; for this work were written 5,165 cards, 4,034 copy slips for the printer, and 369 slips for the duplicating machine. From these 369 slips 2,959 cards were manifolded. Cataloguing of 1,027 volumes and 555 pamphlets was completed by addition to 2,641 cards.

In the printing office 7,974 titles were set, from which 93,984 cards were printed.

The circulation department cataloguing force wrote 1,861 cards for the union catalogue, entered 7,539 volumes in the union catalogue and shelf list, classified 679 volumes. At the branches 5,913 cards were written.

SAMUEL J. TILDEN AND THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

THE ninth of February witnessed the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Samuel Jones Tilden. In commemoration of this event, an exhibition of books and other material relating to Mr. Tilden and to his connection with the Library has been opened in the Stuart Gallery. The exhibition includes a few manuscripts and printed works by Mr. Tilden, biographies and works relating to him, a large number of prints and photographs of him, his home, and the proposed Tilden Trust Library. The material will remain on view through February and March.

In spite of the fact that the public never received a penny directly from the estate of Mr. Tilden, it is nevertheless due in part to his will and to the subsequent litigation by which the will was broken that the present consolidation of the Astor, Lenox, and Tilden foundations exists.

Just how long before his death Mr. Tilden had in mind the gift of a free public library to the city of New York, it is not easy to say, but that his plans for such a project had been maturing for some time is evident.

The late John Bigelow, in an article in "Scribner's Magazine," September, 1892, states that it was at the time of the debate over the new plans to be adopted for the National Library at Washington that Mr. Tilden first considered a definite location and design for the library he purposed to give to the city. The plans submitted to him had been drawn for presentation to Congress as a design for the new Congressional Library building then under consideration. They won Mr. Tilden's approval and he expressed the hope that they might be adopted by Congress. The plans were forwarded to Washington, but they failed to arrive until the plan which has since been carried out had been decided upon by the committee.

The proposed plan may be briefly described as a cross adapted in dimensions to a location in Bryant park. Most of the space in the library was to be given to stacks. At the intersection of the arms of the cross, provision was made for a large rotunda and four adjacent pavilions, three of which were to be used as reading-rooms for men, women, and children, and the fourth for whatever purpose it should prove most needed. The total shelving was estimated to provide for the accommodation of about 1,200,000 books.

Such, in brief, was to be the Tilden Trust Library, to the planning of which Mr. Tilden gave much of his time and thought and for the erection of which he intended to leave his residuary property, amounting to from four to six millions of dollars.

Mr. Tilden died in August, 1886, leaving a will dated in April, 1884. He left surviving him as his only next of kin and heirs at law, one sister, two nephews, and four nieces. The testator's estate consisted chiefly of personal property; about one tenth in houses and lands, and another tenth in iron mines in New York and Michigan. His will provided for the establishment of free libraries at New Lebanon and Yonkers, at a cost of somewhat beyond $100,000; and set apart $10,000 for "keeping in repair, improving, and adorning the cemetery in the town of New Lebanon."

The substantial residue of his estate he disposed of as follows: "XXXV. I request my said Executors and Trustees to obtain as speedily as possible from the Legislature, an Act of Incorporation of an institution to be known as the Tilden Trust, with capacity to establish and maintain a Free Library and Reading-Room in the city of New York, and to promote such scientific and educational objects as my said Executors and Trustees may more particularly designate. Such corporation shall have not less than five Trustees, with power to fill vacancies in their number; and in case said institution shall be incorporated in a form and manner satisfactory to my said Executors and Trustees during the lifetime of the survivor of the two lives in being upon which the trust of my general estate herein created is limited, to wit.; the lives of Ruby S. Tilden and Susie Whittlesey, I hereby authorize my said Executors and Trustees to organize the said corporation, designate the first Trustees thereof, and to convey or apply to the use of the same, the rest, residue, and remainder of all my real and personal estate not specifically disposed of by this instrument, or so much thereof as they may deem expedient, but subject, nevertheless, to the special Trusts herein directed to be constituted for particular persons, and to the obligation to make and keep good the said special Trusts, provided that the said corporation shall be authorized by law to assume the obligations. But in case such institution shall not be so incorporated, during the lifetime of the survivor of the said Ruby S. Tilden and Susie Whittlesey, or if for any cause of reason my said Executors and Trustees shall deem it inexpedient to convey the said rest, residue, and remainder, or any part thereof, or to apply the same or any part thereof to said institution, I authorize my said Executors and Trustees to apply the rest, residue, and remainder of my property, real and personal, after making good the said special Trusts herein directed to be constituted, or such portion thereof as they may not deem it expedient to apply to its use, to such charitable, educational, and scientific purposes as in the judgment of my said Executors and Trustees will render the said rest, residue, and remainder of my property most widely and substantially beneficial to the interests of mankind."

The executors and trustees named in the will were John Bigelow, Andrew H. Green, and George W. Smith. In pursuance of the directions contained in clause XXXV, the executors applied to the Legislature of the State of New York for an act of incorporation of an institution to be known as the Tilden Trust, and on the twenty-sixth day of March, 1887, the Legislature passed "an act to incorporate the Tilden Trust for the establishment and maintenance of a Free Library and Reading-Room in the city of New York."

The hopes, however, which had been awakened by the publication of the will, were destined to be only partly realized. The nephews of Mr. Tilden, who were largely in debt, were pressed by their creditors to contest the validity of the thirty-fifth clause of the will cited above, and proceedings were instituted for that purpose in the Supreme Court of New York on the very day the will was admitted for probate. The ground taken by the lawyers for the heirs was that the thirty-fifth clause was invalid for indefiniteness, because it failed to specify with sufficient precision the portion of the residuary estate which was to be appropriated to the several objects of his bounty.

At the January special term of the Supreme Court in 1889, a decision was rendered sustaining the validity of the contested clause. The plaintiffs appealed to the general term of the Supreme Court, where this decision was reversed by a vote of two to one. The case was then taken to the Court of Appeals where, after five and a half years had been consumed in litigation, a decision was finally reached by a divided court (four to three) in favor of the heirs.

According to the statement of the case in the reports of the Court of Appeals, it was then the law that "a certain designated beneficiary is essential to the creation of a valid testamentary trust, and a trust without a beneficiary who can claim its enforcement is void. The objection is not obviated by the creation of a power in the trustees to select a beneficiary, unless the class of persons in whose favor the power may be exercised has been designated by the testator with such certainty that the court can ascertain the object or objects of the power. So also, while under the Statute of Powers there may be a power of selection or exclusion with regard to the designated objects, the power of selection must be so defined that there are persons who can come into court and say that they are embraced within the class and demand the enforcement of the power." This legal rule has since been changed by statute in the State of New York.

The unfavorable result of the litigation would have stripped the Tilden Trust of all its property, but for the fact that before the determination of the Court of Appeals, a compromise agreement was made between Mr. Tilden's executors and the Tilden Trust, on the one hand, and Mrs. Hazard, a niece of Mr. Tilden's, on the other. Mrs. Hazard, as the only surviving child of Mr. Tilden's sister, was entitled to one half of the residuary estate in case the Court of Appeals should declare against the validity of the residuary clauses, whereas if the court should uphold those clauses, she would not be entitled to any part of it. This compromise agreement, dated May 29, 1891, provided that the executors should pay Mrs. Hazard the sum of $975,000, in consideration of which she released to the Tilden Trust all the interest she would have in the estate in the event of the residuary clauses being held invalid. The result of this arrangement was that upon the final determination by the courts the Tilden Trust remained possessed of one half of Mr. Tilden's residuary estate, less the $975,000 paid to Mrs. Hazard, while the other half of the residuary estate vested in other relatives of the testator.

In March, 1892, an agreement was entered into for an amicable partition of the estate. Under this agreement certain securities estimated to be worth $500,000, were set apart to provide for the payment of possible debts and liabilities, and for carrying out certain doubtful provisions of the will in the event of these provisions being sustained by the courts. The remainder of the money and securities was accounted for and distributed. The real estate remaining in the hands of the executors was left undivided to await a favorable opportunity for disposing of it. And finally the household and personal effects of the testator were so divided that the Tilden Trust acquired Mr. Tilden's entire library, books, manuscripts, prints, engravings, pictures, and statuary, with the exception of one portrait which was set apart for the heirs.

The Tilden Trust, therefore, on December 31, 1894, was in possession of Mr. Tilden's library, containing about 20,000 volumes. In speaking of this library, Mr. Bigelow says in his biography, that, though not a book collector in the ordinary sense, Mr. Tilden had a very fastidious taste for books, which he indulged without much regard for expense. Though the larger part of his library consisted of books "without which no gentleman's library is complete," there were also among them a very considerable number of rare and costly publications. He bought for his immediate use and enjoyment, and apparently with no thought of collecting a library that should be complete in any department — always excepting his law library, which was one of the best in the country up to the time of his withdrawal from the active practice of his profession.

As an endowment fund, the Tilden Trust held, in the first place, a large amount of personal property; second, a half-interest in so much of the contingent fund of $500,000 as might not turn out to be needed for debts, liabilities, and doubtful trusts; and third, a half-interest in the testator's real estate, including Mr. Tilden's residences in the city of New York and in Yonkers. It was the opinion of the executors that the entire endowment might fairly be estimated to be worth $2,000,000; the residuary estate having turned out to be more valuable than they had at first ventured to anticipate.

As the result of an exchange of views during the year 1894, between members of the boards of trustees of the Astor and Lenox libraries and the Tilden Trust, negotiations were begun early in 1895 looking to a consolidation in such form that the benefits of the three institutions might be more widely disseminated among the people, and on May 23, 1895, a formal agreement was executed whereby a consolidated corporation was formed under the name of "THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY, ASTOR, LENOX, AND TILDEN FOUNDATIONS," which has succeeded to and now enjoys all the property of the Tilden Trust. Greatly reduced as this was from Mr. Tilden's generous intentions, yet the Public Library owes much of its completeness and efficiency to the two million dollars thus added to its endowments.

THE SCOPE OF THE JEWISH DIVISION IN THE LIGHT OF LIBRARY PRACTICE

By A. S. Freidus, Chief of the Jewish division

THE establishment of the Jewish division of The New York Public Library implied a departure from the usual library practice in the location of the groups of works relating to Jews and Judaism. In most schemes of library classification the primary arrangement is by subjects, while the arrangement by regional, national, or racial phases of topics comes second in the subdividing of the main subjects, when the amount of material in the library warrants this. Accordingly, works that belong to the various subjects, although dealing with their Jewish phases, would, in most libraries, be found scattered throughout their schemes of classification, together with all other works dealing with the other national or regional phases of the same subjects. However, if the method adopted here is not the customary one, it is not without precedent. There is frequent hesitancy among classifiers as to choice between subject and country, both in the cataloguing and in the locating of books. A few librarians, in conceiving their schemes of classification, considered division by countries of prime importance, and, reversing the usual order of classification, at least in certain parts of their schemes, made the primary arrangement by countries, to which they subordinated the subjects as constituting their subdivisions.

Chief among these may be considered Johann Michael Francke (1717-1775). As librarian of the Königliche öffentliche Bibliothek at Dresden, he put with the history of every country everything relating to that country; and the geography and natural history of Spain found their places in Spanish history, as well as the ecclesiastical history and the collections of laws of that state.[1] The arrangement of the library which he elaborated during the years 1769-1771 has stood well the test of time. Ebert, who was librarian of that library, 1814-1834, styles him the first librarian of Germany and praises his arrangement highly; so does Ebert's assistant and successor in the same library, Karl Falkenstein (1825-1852), in his "Beschreibung der Königlichen öffentlichen Bibliothek zu Dresden," Dresden, 1839, p. 18. And more than a hundred years after Francke's death, another librarian of the Dresden library, Franz Schnorr von Carolsfeld, writing his biographical sketch in the "Allgemeine deutsche Biographie" (v. 6, 1878), states that the arrangements Francke made are still authoritative in the library.

In 1790 Johann Erich Biester arranged the books of the Königliche Bibliothek at Berlin according to the Dresden plan, which he studied there on an official trip. His successor, Friedrich Wilken, rearranged the library in 1818-1819. But traces of the application of the principle of arrangement by countries can still be found in the present subject catalogue, especially in the treatment of local church history.[2]

In 1817 the Königlich bayrische Hof- und Staatsbibliothek at Munich adopted a scheme of classification modeled after that of the Dresden library. In 1835 a similar scheme was adopted at the Stadtbibliothek of Frankfort on the Main, where it prevailed for fifty years till the advent of Prof. F. C. Ebrard as director of the Stadtbibliothek in 1884. Prof. Ebrard, who is still director of the Stadtbibliothek, changed the arrangement of that library considerably in 1886. He disapproved especially of that feature of the scheme which places with each country everything pertaining to it, not only works on political history, geography, statistics, and constitution, but also law, military and church history, flora, and its entire natural history, leaving out only philology and literature. He objected to this as being inconsistent with the general scheme of classification, which is based on division by subjects. He furthermore saw a disadvantage in the fact that the literature relating to the more important countries was growing too bulky and less easy to survey [Why less so, if properly subdivided, than under any other system?], but admitted that there was an advantage in having in one place the entire literature relating to minor countries which are not well represented in the library.[3]

In this country Charles A. Cutter made full provision in his scheme of classification for those who may wish to adopt an arrangement by country with subdivision by subject, either for all countries or for a selection of countries, and the subjects treated as subdivisions may also be either all subjects or a selection of subjects. All that one has to do in that case is to place first the figures of the "Local list," which always stand for the same countries in that scheme, and have them followed by the letters which denote the subjects.[4]

So much as to the admissibility of the general principle. It may now be worth while to inquire what is the actual practice of some of the principal libraries abroad in respect to the treatment of the groups of Jewish books in their collections. Jewish special libraries, built up for Jewish studies from a Jewish point of view, are naturally not considered here, as they can have no such problem at all.

In all there are 31 general libraries having departments of Hebrew books or manuscripts, according to the table prepared in 1909 by I. Tscherikower, in "Evreiskaya Entsiklopediya," v. 4, article "Biblioteki."

Few general libraries having large numbers of Jewish books would deem it unnecessary to arrange them in special departments. In the Bibliothèque Nationale, however, there is no arrangement for keeping printed Hebrew books together. Like works in European languages, they are placed with their various subjects or with cognate topics, e. g., Talmudical literature is put with commentaries of the Old Testament, and so on. The result of such scattering is naturally found unsatisfactory by Hebraists. Here is the expert testimony of a well-known Jewish bibliographer who has been a member of the staff of that library since 1868: "In the Bibliothèque Nationale books are distributed according to subject-matter. The number of books in the Bibliothèque Nationale in 1897 was 2,048,893 [about 3,500,000, according to "Minerva", 1914]; and as the Hebrew works are distributed among these, it is no easy task to ascertain their existence in the library. Thus almost all the incunabula enumerated by De Rossi may, it is true, be found there, but in order to discover them, they must be laboriously sought in the numerous subject-divisions."[5] The example he mentions is evidently taken from his own experience, as he is the author of a book on Hebrew incunabula, entitled "Les incunables orientaux" (1883). The criticism is admittedly limited to the disposition of the printed Hebrew books; the Hebrew manuscripts have more special care taken of them, being kept together and placed at the head of the Oriental collections.

Other libraries, while distributing according to their subjects works of Jewish interest written in modern languages ("Judaica"), keep together all books printed in Hebrew type ("Hebraica"). The method of keeping Hebrew together in a special department readily suggests itself to the practical librarian, as the ordinary assistants who are unfamiliar with the Hebrew language can not very well handle the books. It does not seem good library economy, however, to have an arrangement by which the knowledge and the experience of a Hebraist working on a Hebrew collection cannot be utilized for the systematic increase, cataloguing, arranging, and otherwise helping to make accessible related works written in the modern languages.

A notable example of the above method is the arrangement prevailing in the great British libraries. In the Library of the British Museum, the only Hebrew books not located in the Hebrew department are those belonging to special collections (George II., Cracherode, Grenville library) and polyglot Bibles. The catalogues of Hebrew books in the Library of the British Museum comprise, in addition to the Hebrew books: 1. Translations of post-biblical Hebrew works; 2. Works in the Arabic, Spanish, German, and other languages, printed with Hebrew characters; 3. Bibliographical works with special reference to postbiblical literature, as those of De Rossi, Zunz, Steinschneider, etc.; also catalogues of Hebrew works and biographies of authors of Hebrew works.[6]

The location of the last two classes is apparently in accordance with the arrangement in the catalogue; but the location of the first class does not seem to be so. The Library of the Corporation of the City of London (Guildhall Library) has a special collection of Hebraica and Judaica.

Among general libraries in Germany which allow their Jewish departments ample scope are the Königliche Bibliothek at Berlin and the Stadtbibliothek of Frankfort on the Main. The arrangement in the former is possibly due to Moritz Steinschneider, the greatest of Jewish bibliographers, who was connected with that library as "Hilfsarbeiter" from 1869 to 1906. The Jewish collection of the Stadtbibliothek of Frankfort on the Main is one of the fifteen principal classes of works in the classification scheme of that library. It does not include editions of the Old Testament in Hebrew, although it includes Hebrew commentaries to it; and it does not include works on the history of the Jews in Frankfort on the Main ("Judaica Francofurtana"), which form a group in the principal class "Francofurtana." [7]

The Universiteits-Bibliotheek at Amsterdam has a special department and reading-room for Jewish literature, containing both Hebraica and Judaica, in charge of a special conservator. It is named "Bibliotheca Rosenthaliana," being a gift made to the university in 1881 by the late Baron Georg Rosenthal, son of L. Rosenthal, who made the collection, well known through its "Catalog" in 2 volumes, by M. Roest, Amsterdam, 1875. That special department of the university library is not open on Saturdays.

The Imperial Public Library at St. Petersburg has a Hebrew department containing also Judaica, which is especially strong in "Russo-Judaica." The Asiatic Museum of the Imperial Academy of Sciences at St. Petersburg has a special Hebrew department housed in a special room and named "Bibliotheca Friedlandiana," the collection having been given by Moses Aryeh Loeb Friedland in 1892. It also has many Judaica, which are kept together, separate from the Hebraica. Bible versions without the Hebrew text are located with the Bible collection. [8]

The racial arrangement adopted for the Jewish division of this library is at the same time a classification of the books according to their users and readers. This point of view in classification, urged by George F. Arnold, was carried out by him in detail in the arrangement of the departmental libraries of Harvard University. [9]

The large Jewish population of the metropolis gives the library proportionately a considerable clientèle interested in all phases of Jewish life and culture, past and present, irrespective of the refinements of a consistently thoroughgoing general library classification. It was with a view to accommodate the wants of this class of readers that in this instance, as well as in the similar cases of the Oriental and Slavonic divisions, the Library, aiming at the greatest possible accessibility of books to readers, found it advisable to deviate from principles of abstract classification and to work out a purely practical way of service in this field of literature. The aim of this division is, then, to cover as far as possible all branches of the encyclopedic knowledge of Judaism and the Jews, including a wide range of subjects, sacred and secular, the whole of what is styled by some German Jewish scholars "Wissenschaft des Judentums", or "Jüdische Wissenschaft" [10] and rendered in modern Hebrew "Chokmat Yisrael." [11] If the title of "science" has not the recognition of the outside world and the approval of some Jewish scholars, [12] the fact that the subjects comprised by it belong together has been shown and exemplified in three alphabetical Jewish encyclopedias recently published in English, Hebrew, and Russian, and one systematic one, now in progress in German; in the host of Jewish periodicals that have appeared and are now appearing in the various languages; in the nature and composition of most of the Jewish private collections and institutional libraries, and the few Jewish departments in general libraries, as mentioned above; and in the numerous catalogues of "Hebraica and Judaica" published.

For these reasons the scope of this division has been made comprehensive at the outset, and the liberal arrangement has met with the unanimous and hearty approval of students.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

READERS AND VISITORS

IN the main reading room of the central building 17,095 readers consulted 67,792 volumes. Special reading rooms in this building were used by 42,876 readers, making a total for the whole building of 59,971 readers.

Visitors to the building amounted to 231,815.

GIFTS

AMONG the noteworthy gifts received in January, the following may be mentioned:

From Lieut-Col. Frederick W. Sladen, Commandant of Cadets, U. S. Military Academy, West Point, a collection of General Orders and Circulars, General Court Martial Orders of the United States War Department, forming a complete set from 1861 to 1890; General Orders and Circulars published by the various Division, Department, and District Commanders in the South from 1864 to 1870, presented in memory of the late Major J. A. Sladen, United States Army, and comprising 94 volumes; from the Imperial Russian Embassy at Washington, 346 Russian government documents issued by the Ministries of War, Ways and Communication, Finance, and Agriculture, and statistical publications of the City of St. Petersburg; from Rev. A. Hotovitzky of the Russian Synod, New York, a collection of Russian theological books, 590 volumes and pamphlets in all.

The following additions to the genealogical collection were received: from Mr. Samuel King Hamilton of Boston, an autograph copy of his privately printed work, "The Hamiltons of Waterborough (York County, Maine): their ancestors and descendants"; from Mr. J. Granville Leach of Philadelphia, his privately printed work, "Some account of Capt. John Frazier and his descendants with notes on the West and Checkley families"; from Mrs. Morris Loeb of New York, a memorial to Morris Loeb, formerly Professor of Chemistry and Director of the Havemeyer Chemical Laboratory at New York University; from Mrs. J. A. Tyler, no. 16 of the Édition étoile d'argent, limited to fifty numbered and registered sets, of "American families of historic lineage," Long Island edition, issued under the editorial supervision of William S. Pelletreau, A.M., and John Howard Brown, vol. 1-2, New York, n. d.; and from Mrs. Emma Finney Welch, the "Memoir of Ashbel Welch", containing manuscript notes on the Welch family.

The following authors sent copies of their own works: Prof. Stanley D. Adshead, Liverpool, England; Mr. W. H. Fairbairns of St. Ives, Enfield, England; Mr. Douglas C. McMurtrie of New York; Hon. L. Bradford Prince of Santa Fe, N. M., twenty pamphlets; Estate of Rev. Thomas Smyth, Charleston, S. C., ten volumes of theological works; Mrs. Leila Weekes-Wilson of Santa Barbara, Cal.; Mr. F. W. Zollman of St. Paul, Minn.

From Mr. Timothy Cole of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was received a proof on Japan paper of his wood engraving, "La Maternité," after Carriére.

From Dorman and Dana of New York came thirty-four volumes of Trow's Copartnership directories; from the Publishers' Weekly, a miscellaneous collection of 1,448 pieces; and from Miss Schwab of New York, 194 volumes and pamphlets of histories, biographies, text-books, etc.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York City gave the Library fifty three-volume sets of the report of the Committee on School Inquiry, and valuable additions to the Library's public documents collection came from the American Consulate-General at Buenos Aires; from the Forsikringsraadet, København, Denmark; and from Mr. William S. Bennet of New York.

From the Military Order of the Carábáo, Washington, D. C., was received the "Historical sketch, constitution and register of the Military Order of the Carábáo together with songs that have been sung at 'Wallows' in various places (1900-1913)"; and society publications were also received from the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, the Old Dartmouth Historical Society, and the Pomological and Fruit Growing Society of the Province of Quebec, Canada.

Miscellaneous book gifts were received from the following individuals: Mrs. Albro Akin of New York; Mrs. A. D. Albert of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. V. Bernström of East Orange, N. J.; Mrs. D. Cady Eaton, of New Haven, Conn.; Mrs. Maria Grinchenko of Kiev, Russia (books in the Russian language); E. K. Milligan of New York; Mr. Frank D. Veiller of New York; and Mr. Franz Goerke of Berlin.

EXHIBITIONS

THE exhibition illustrating the "Making of an etching," in the print gallery (321) — which 13,845 persons visited — and the Brangwyn etchings, fifteenth and sixteenth century engravings, and wood engravings by Henry Marsh in the Stuart Gallery, remained on view. A selection of the engravings by Faithorne, given by Mr. J. Harsen Purdy, has remained on view in the print room (308). The fiftieth anniversary of the death of John Leech occasioned a little exhibition in the Stuart Gallery. Of the Library's collection of original copper plates of the illustrations of books by Albert Smith, Douglas Jerrold, and others, one plate is shown for each book. Similarly, a selection of books illustrated by Leech has been placed on view. Appropriate labels call attention to the fact that the Library's collection of Leech material is represented in the exhibit only by a selection. As far as the original plates are concerned, this exhibition supplements the one at the Grolier Club.

A RARE MATHEMATICAL TABLE

AMONG the volumes recently received from Prof. Joseph de Perott is one entitled "Tafel aller einfachen Factoren der durch 2, 3, 5 nicht theilbaren Zahlen von 1 bis 10,000,000, 1 Theil," by Anton Felkel, Vienna, 1776. In the Scientific American Supplement, no. 966, July 7, 1894, p. 15,436, Prof. de Perott, discussing "Mathematical Tables" writes of this volume, "Felkel's table, printed in Vienna in 1776 at the cost of the Austrian government, was used, for want of purchasers, to make cartridges in the war against the Turks, so that very few copies of it remain. My own copy, which comes from the library of an Austrian mathematician who died at the age of ninety, is probably the only one in this country."

JANUARY WORK

DURING the month of January there were received at the Library 26,234 volumes and 5,804 pamphlets, of which 4,968 volumes and 5,804 pamphlets were credited to the reference department and 21,266 volumes to the circulation department.

Of the reference department receipts 1,808 volumes and 498 pamphlets were purchases, 3,133 volumes and 5,295 pamphlets were gifts, and 27 volumes and 11 pamphlets were exchanges. For the circulation department 21,085 volumes were purchases and 181 were gifts.

The reference department catalogued 3,822 volumes and 2,455 pamphlets; for this work were written 5,854 cards, 4,936 copy slips for the printer, and 291 slips for the duplicating machine. From these 291 slips, 1,965 cards were manifolded. Cataloguing of 1,102 volumes and 792 pamphlets was completed by addition to 3,176 cards.

In the printing office 8,251 titles were set, from which 95,726 cards were printed.

The circulation department cataloguing force wrote 449 cards for the union catalogue, entered 7,058 volumes in the union catalogue and shelf list, classified 576 volumes. At the branches 6,016 cards were written.

Through the interbranch loan system 9,666 books were asked for and 6,971 were supplied.

VOLUME XVIII MARCH, 1914 NUMBER 3

HON. John L. Cadwalader, President of The New York Public Library since March 13, 1912, died at his home in this city, March 11, 1914. Mr. Cadwalader had served as a trustee of the Astor Library and The New York Public Library since November 5, 1879. At the funeral services, held in Grace Church, New York, on March 14, several Trustees and members of the staff were present. The interment was at Philadelphia.

BOOKS ON CHINA GIVEN BY DR. STOUT

ONE of the most important groups of books recently received by the Library is the collection of 578 volumes and 136 pamphlets relating to China and the Far East, given by Dr. Arthur Purdy Stout in February, 1914. This collection is of unusual interest in itself and to the Library has added interest in view of the large number of books on China already on the shelves, the latest extensive addition of this kind being a collection of several hundred volumes in the Chinese language that came to us from the private library of Mr. Wilberforce Eames a few years ago.

The work of greatest interest in the collection given by Dr. Stout is probably Navarette's history entitled "Tratados historicos, politicos, ethicos, y religiosos de la monarchia de China. Por el P. Maestro Fr. Domingo Fernandez Navarette, Cathedratico de Prima del Colegio, y Universidad de S. Thomàs de Manila, Missionario Apostolico de la gran China, Prelado de los de su Mission, y Procurador General en la Corte de Madrid de la Prouincia del Santo Rosario de Filipinas, Orden de Predicadores," printed at Madrid, 1676, in two volumes folio. The first volume, though by no means a common book, was already in the Library. The second volume is of such rarity that when M. Cordier noted the work for his "Bibliotheca Sinica" he was able to locate no copy in any Paris library, making his collation from the Grenville copy in the British Museum. The set of Navarette in Dr. Stout's collection came from the Sunderland Library, Blenheim Palace, having been bought in 1882 at the sale of that collection, by Bernard Quaritch, who sold it to M. Cordier, from whose collection it later passed into the hands of Dr. Stout. The second volume has no title page but was probably printed at Madrid about 1679. Besides this copy in the original Spanish, the collection has also the English translation printed at London about 1703 entitled "An account of the Empire of China."

Of general histories of China mention may be made of that by Alvarez Semedo, "Historica relatione del gran regno della Cina," printed at Rome in 1653, which is accompanied by two French translations, the first printed at Paris by Cramoisy, 1645, and the second at Lyons in 1667, and by an English translation printed at London in 1655, entitled "The history of That Great and Renowned Monarchy of China." There is also a copy of Arrivabene's "Historia della China" (Verona, 1599), and his "Il magno vitei" (Verona, 1597). Another general history of interest is "Histoire generale de l'empire du Mogol depuis sa fondation sur les Mémoires Portugais de M. Manouchi, Vénitien. Par le Pere François Catrou de la Compagnie de Jesus," printed at La Haye in 1708.

The Jesuit "Relations" are of as great interest and importance for the Eastern world as they are for America. Of the "Relations" relating to America, the Lenox Library had a file of unusual extent; of those relating to the East the Library has an extensive group, the importance of which can be seen by a glance at the portion relating to the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries in the list of books on Japan published by the Library in 1906. Dr. Stout's collection adds several volumes of importance relating to the work of the Jesuits and other European missionaries in China in the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries. There is a copy of the "Lettere dell' India orientale" printed at Venice in 1580. The "Historischer Bericht was sich nechst verschine Jar 1577, 79, 80 vnnd 81, in beköhrung der gewaltigen Landschafft und Insel Jappon, theils in Politischen vnnd weltlichen, theils auch in Gaistlichen sachen zugetragen," printed at Dilingen in 1585, is accompanied by the "Fernere Zeitung" of 1586. Of seventeenth-century imprints the following titles are of interest: "Litteræ Iaponicæ anni MDCVI Chinenses anni MDCVI & MDCVII," printed at Antwerp in 1611; the "Histoire de l'expedition chretienne en la Chine entreprise par les peres de la Compagnie de Jesus. Tirée des commentaires du Pere Mathieu Riccius" by Nicolas Trigault, printed at Paris in 1618. Two imprints by Sebastian Cramoisy are of unusual interest; the first "Histoire de ce qui s'est passé au Royaume du Tibet. Tirée des Lettres escriptes en l'année 1626," bearing on the title page in a contemporary hand "Collegii Ambianensis Soc^{tis} Jesu. Ex dono Sebastiani Cramoisy," and the second being the "Histoire" for 1621-22, printed in 1627, likewise being inscribed "du Conuent des ff minimes de Paris. Ex dono Sebastiani Cramoisy."

Other titles of interest in connection with the early missions are the following: "Martyrographia Augustiniana. Das ist Beschreibung der Martÿrer des Ordens der Einsidl. Brüeder S. Augustini. Durch den Hoch Ehrwürdigē P. F. Georgium Maigretiū...in Latein aufgangen An Jetzo Durch P. F. Theodoricum Degen Gedachten Ordens verteütsht" (München, 1628); "Nouvelle relation de la Chine, Contenant la description des particularitez les plus considerables de ce grand Empire, composée en l'année 1668, par le R. P. Gabriel de Magaillans...et traduite du Portugais en François par le Sr B." (Paris, 1688); "Defensa de los nuevos Christianos, y missioneros de la China, Japon, y Indias. Contra dos libros intitulados, La Practica Moral de los Jesuitas, y el Espiritu de M. Arnaldo. Traducida de Frances en Español de la segunda impression, hecha en Paris, en casa de Esrevan Michallet... ano 1688" by Don Gabriel de Parraga, printed at Madrid, 1690; "Traité sur quelques points de la religion des chinois. Par le R. Pere Longobardi" (Paris, 1701); "Istoria delle cose operate nella China da Monsignor Gio. Ambrogio Mazzabarba, Patriarca d'Alessandria, Legato appostolico in quell' impero, e di presente Vescovo di Lodi. Scritta dal Padre Viani, suo confessoree compagno nella predetta Legazione" (Paris [1739]); "Lettres de M. de Mairan, au R. P. Parrenin, Missionaire de la Compagnie de Jesus, a Pekin. Contenant diverses Questions sur la Chine" (Paris, 1759).

The question of rites — the subject of the fierce conflict between the Jesuits and Dominicans in the first half of the eighteenth century — is represented by an interesting collection of six contemporary pamphlets bound in one volume. There is also a manuscript letter addressed to Monsieur le Prieur Bouget at Rome by an anonymous writer at the end of the seventeenth century, describing the famous voyage of the six Jesuits Fontenai, Tachard, Gerbillon, Lecomte, Bouvet, and Visdelou, all of whom played an important part in the relations of the foreigners (except Tachard who went to Siam), being received at the court of the Emperor Kang-

Hi, becoming his intimates, and later taking part in the disastrous conflict over the question of rites.

The fall of the Ming dynasty and the beginning of the Manchu reign in 1643 is represented by the following three titles: "Bellum Tartaricum, or the conquest of The Great and most renowned Empire of China, By the Invasion of the Tartars, who in these last seven years, have wholly subdued that vast Empire...Written originally in Latin by Martin Martinius present in the Country at most of the passages herein related and now faithfully translated into English" (London, 1654); "Histoire de la guerre des Tartares, contre la Chine...Traduite du Latin du P. Martini" (Dovay, 1654); "The history of the conquest of China by the Tartars" (London, 1671) by Bishop Palafox.

There is an interesting group of works relating to the efforts of European countries to enter into diplomatic relations with China. The "Journal de la residence du sieur Lange, agent de Sa Majesté Imperiale de la grande Russie à la cour de la Chine dans les années 1721 & 1722" (Leyde, 1726) records an early Russian embassy. Earl Macartney's diplomatic visit is narrated in the following: "A complete view of the Chinese empire exhibited in a geographical description of that country, a dissertation on its antiquity, and a genuine and copious account of Earl Macartney's embassy from the King of Great Britain to the Emperor of China" (London, 1798); "Travels in China" (London, 1804), by John Barrow; "A narrative of the British embassy to China in the years 1792, 1793, and 1794" by Aeneas Anderson (London, 1795).

General accounts of the culture and civilization of China are given in the following works: "Hebdomas observationum de rebus sinicis" (Coloniae Brandenburgicae, 1674) by Andreas Müller; "Anecdotes sur l'etat de la religion dans la Chine," seven volumes (Paris, 1733); "Mémoires concernant l'histoire, les sciences, les arts, les mœurs, les usages, etc. des Chinois: Par les Missionaires de Pekin," 15 volumes (Paris, 1776); "Anecdotes chinoises, japonoises, siamoises, tonquinoises, etc. Dans lesquelles ou s'est attaché principalement aux Mœurs, Usages, Coutumes & Religions de ces différens Peuples de l'Asie," (Paris, 1774) by J. Castilhon; "Recherches curieuses sur l'histoire ancienne de l'Asie." Par J. M. Chahan de Cirbied...et F. Martin (Paris, 1806).

Besides the works relating exclusively to China, the collection includes several hundred volumes on the Far East in general. Of the older books mention may be made of the following: "Relation des voyages en Tartarie" (Paris, 1634); "Recveil de diverses histoires touchãt les situations de toutes regions & pays, contenuz es trois parties du mõde, auec les particulieres meurs, loix, & cerimonies de toutes natiõs, & peuples y habitãs. Nouvellement traduict de Latin en Francoys" (Paris, 1545); "Cosmographiae universalis" (Basle, 1552), by Sebastian Munster; "Histoire de Portugal contenant les entreprises, navigations, & gestes memorables des Potugallois, tant en la conqueste des Indes Orientales par eux descouvertes, qu'és guerres d'Afrique & autres exploits, depuis l'an mil quatre cens nonante six, sous Emmanuel I., Jean III. & Sebastian I. du nom. Comprinse en vingt Liures, dont les douze premiers sont traduits du Latin de Jerosme Osorius, Euesque de Sylues en Algarve, les huit suyuans prins de Lopez Castagnede & d'autres Historiens. Nouvellement mise en François, par S. G. S...(Paris, 1587); "Les estats, empires et princepautez du monde. Representez par la Descriptiõ des Pays, mœurs des habitans. Richesses des Prouinces, les forces, le gouuernement, la Religion, et les Princes qu'ont gouuerné chascũ Estat. Auec l'origine de toutes les Religions, et de tous les Cheualiers et ordre Militaires. Par le Sr D.T.V.Y. gentilhomme ordrẽ de la Chambre du Roy" (Paris, 1622); "Relatione del novo scoprimento del gran Cataio, overo Regno di Tibet fatto...1624" (Rome, 1627) by Antonio Andrade; "Les voyages fameux du Sieur Vincent de Blanc marseillois, qu'il a faits depuis l'aage de douze ans iusques à soixante, aux quatre parties du Monde... Redigez fidellement...Par Pierre Bergeron" (Paris, 1648); "The Voyages and Travels of J. Albert de Mandelslo (A Gentleman belonging to the Embassy, sent by the Duke of Holstein to the great Duke of Muscovy, and the King of Persia) into the East-Indies," 1638-1640. Tr. by John Davies (London, 1669); "Peregrinacion que ha hecho de la mayor parte del Mundo Don Pedro Cubero Sebastian, Predicador Apostolico del Asia," (Zaragoza, 1688); Ragionamenti di Francesco Carletti Fiorentino sopra le cose da lui vedute ne' suoi viaggi Si dell' Indie Occidentali, e Orientali come d'altri Paesi" (Florence, 1701); "Recueil de divers voyages curieux, faits en Tartarie en Perse et ailleurs," printed at Leyden by Pierre van der Aa in 1729; "Travels into Muscovy, Persia, And Part of the East-Indies" (London, 1737), by Cornelius Le Bruyn; "Travels into divers Parts of Europe and Asia Undertaken by the French King's Order to discover a new Way by Land into China," by Father Avril, printed at London in 1693; "Voyages au Thibet, Faits en 1625 et 1626, par le père d'Andrada, et en 1774, 1784, et 1785, par Bogle, Turner et Pourunguir, Traduits Par J. P. Parraud et J. B. Billecoq," (Paris [1796]).

The more recent books are numerous in extent and wide in their interest. Probably the titles most worthy of mention are the "Mission Pavie Indo-Chine 1879-1895," of which the "Etudes diverses" appeared in three volumes and the "Geographie et voyages" in five; and "Die wissenschaftlichen Ergebnisse der Reise des Grafen Béla Széchenyi in Ostasien, 1877-1880" (Wien, 1893) in three quarto volumes.

AN ADDITION TO THE FREDERICK KEPPEL MEMORIAL COLLECTION

THE most important gift that has come to the print division during the past month consists of 125 etchings, lithographs, and original drawings, donated by Mr. David Keppel and Mrs. Frederick Keppel. They form part of the Frederick Keppel Memorial Collection. Small instalments of this collection had reached the Library previously, consisting of a number of interesting working proofs of line engravings by Lecomte, Morghen, Vallot, C. G. Schultz, Bartolozzi, and Burnet, after paintings by various artists, illustrating methods of work in a reproductive medium which once had a great vogue. The larger addition to the collection, just received, embraces modern work, and is of particular importance and value from the fact that the prints are all presentation copies, signed by the artists. That is pretty apt to imply excellence of impression; the rule certainly holds good in the present instance. Furthermore, there are various manuscript notes by the artists or others which add to the interest of the prints. For instance, on a slight sketch of a street scene there appears this penciled note by T. R. Way; "Lithograph by J. M. Whistler, drawn on transfer paper about 1879, transferred to stone 1906." Again, on a lithograph by Pennell, that artist has written: "A Lithograph according to the high court of justice" (evidently referring to the controversy over the question whether a drawing must be executed on the stone — not merely on transfer paper — to constitute it a lithograph).

By this gift, a number of gaps are filled in the portfolios of work by Whistler, Félix Buhot, Pennell, Goeneutte, E. Van Muyden, E. Béjot, A. Legros, W. Strang, Storm van 'sGravesande, C. A. Platt, and Cadwallader Washburn, the Pennell prints including a fine set of his twenty "London etchings." Among other names in the list of artists represented are Guerard, F. Jacque, Haden, Meryon, Boilvin, L. Delteil, Sherborn, J. Fullwood, Thomas R. Manley, Peter Moran, L. M. Yale, E. Haskell, and F. Goulding, the famous printer of etchings. The drawings include work by P. Moran, E. Béjot, F. Jacque, Buhot, L. Gautier, Pennell, and the engraver Toschi.

It is gratifying to be able to record this very important accession to the collection of modern work in the print room; it evidences an interest in one phase of the work of the Library, which, it is hoped, may bear further fruit. This likewise seems the time, if any, to recall to mind that there are other lacunæ in the print portfolios of the Library, considerable ones, notably in those devoted to old prints. And in the field of old prints much that is of the best is quite beyond any possible acquisition by purchase, and must come, if at all, through the public-spirited liberality of individuals. Only by such action can the possibilities of usefulness for the print room be more fully realized, and the collection be made worthy of this great city and its increasing number of print lovers.

TRAVELS IN THE UNITED STATES

HON. GEORGE L. RIVES has recently presented the Library with a valuable and interesting collection of travels in the United States, consisting of over 200 volumes, and covering a period of more than one hundred years, from 1759 to 1862. The earliest travels are those of the good vicar of Greenwich, Rev. Andrew Burnaby, "Travels through the middle settlements in North-America. In the years 1759 and 1760. With observations upon the state of the colonies." 2d ed. London, 1775. The latest travels were made by Sir William Howard Russell, "Bull Run Russell." His book is "My diary North and South," Boston, 1863.

Among the authors are such familiar names as Charles Dickens, Captain Marryatt, Mrs. Trollope (the first edition of "Domestic Manners of the Americans"), Harriet Martineau (her "Retrospect of Western travel" and "Society in America"), William Gilmore Simms, James Kirke Paulding, James Fenimore Cooper, and Benjamin Henry Latrobe, architect of the Capitol at Washington. Among the less familiar names many professions and occupations are represented: the ministry, the law, the army, the navy, the consular service, and students of several of the natural sciences. A prince, Napoléon Achille Murat; a phrenologist, who toured the United States lecturing on phrenology and used his book to advance his readers' knowledge of that subject; and one who proclaims himself "ex-barber to His Majesty, the King of Great Britain" are on the list. They are citizens of many countries: France, Germany, Russia, England, Scotland, the United States itself, and a self-styled "citizen of the world."

The purposes that inspired the books, as stated in their prefaces, vary widely. The main object of one book is "to prove to the people of England, from the example of the United States, that the farther they verge into democratic principles of government...the miseries of the masses will increase, and thereby true liberty will be finally destroyed." Another writer, J. P. Brissot de Warville, in a book published in 1792, announces that his travels were undertaken "to study men who had just acquired their liberty," who might teach the French how to preserve their recently won freedom. Thus America is an example to follow or to shun. Timothy Dwight, President of Yale College, wrote his "Travels in New England and New York," for posterity, that there might be in existence a correct record of the country in his day. Others 'sacrificed their reluctance' and permitted letters that their friends appreciated to be enjoyed by a larger number. Many protest their absolute impartiality. They write because they yearn to tell the truth, correcting the fallacies of earlier authors. A few are the Baedekers of an earlier day, writing for prospective tourists or possible emigrants.

RECENT ACQUISITION OF BOOKS RELATING TO MEXICO

On the second and third of March, the library of Paul Wilkinson, of Mexico City, was disposed of at public auction. The library consisted of about eight hundred scarce books, manuscripts, and other material relating to Mexico. Among them were many early Mexican imprints, books on the folk-lore, languages, dialects, and habits of the natives of the different provinces, and original manuscripts and photographic reproductions of valuable documents.

It is interesting to note that, of the printed books listed in the catalogue of the sale, nearly one third were found to be already on the shelves of the Library. Of the remainder, the Library acquired some fifty volumes, of which several are worthy of special mention.

The most important acquisition to the Library from this sale is without doubt the volumes of "Documentos para la historia de Méjico," of which series one, two, and four were purchased to add to the copy of series three already in the Library. How valuable this series is for the student of the history of Mexico may be seen from the contents. The first series, of seven volumes, contains the diary of D. Gregorio de Guijo, a Spanish lawyer residing in Mexico, comprising the years 1648-1664; v. 2 and 3 contain the diary of D. Antonio de Robles, 1665-1703; v. 4, 5, and 6, the diary of D. José Manuel de Castro Santa Anna, from 1752-1758; and v. 7, an anonymous diary from 1776-1798, and the diary of José Gómez, from 1776-1798. This latter is now the only volume wanting in the set in the Library. The second series, of four volumes, contains a selection of various historical documents, chiefly relating to the tumult of 1624, arising from a dispute between the viceroy of Mexico and the archbishop of that see. The third series, of one volume, the rarest of all, contains a selection of papers on Mexican history, chronology, and astronomy, together with very important material relating to the discovery and history of Texas and New Mexico. The fourth series, of seven volumes, comprises material for the history of Sonora and Sinaloa, of "la Nueva Viscaya," of the missions of California, etc. The entire set of nineteen volumes was published (originally in parts) in Mexico between 1853 and 1857.

Of special interest are several books relating to the early history of missions in New Mexico. Such are the "Chrónica de la Orden de N. Seráphico P. S. Francisco, provincia de S. Pedro y S. Pablo de Mechoacán en la Nueva España," by Alonso de La Rea, Mexico, 1643; the "Chrónica apostólica y seráphica de todos los Collegios de propaganda fide de esta Nueva España," by I. F. de Espinosa, and its continuation, "Crónica seráfica y apostólica del Collegio de propaganda fide de la Santa Cruz de Querétaro en la Nueva España," by J. D. Arricivita, Mexico, 1746-1792. These latter two works form a complete history of the Colleges of the Propaganda in New Spain.

The number of early Mexican imprints in the Library, already large, was increased by the addition of nearly five hundred pamphlets, of which about seventy were printed during the seventeenth century, among them several of unusual rarity, and the remainder during the eighteenth. Several books relating to languages and dialects (especially Cahita, Maçahua, Tarasca, and Mixe) spoken in Mexico add materially to the collections of the Library on those subjects.

JOURNALS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF THE COLONY OF NEW YORK, 1769-1775

THE Library has recently acquired by purchase eight volumes of Journals of the votes and proceedings of the General Assembly of the Colony of New York from October 27, 1768, to April 3, 1775. So far as is now known, this is the only consecutive set of Assembly Journals for the period mentioned.

The printing of the Assembly votes was begun with the session which opened on June 20, 1695, being the earliest contemporary publication of the proceedings of an American legislature. No original of this first issue has been found in America. In 1902 Miss Hasse of this Library discovered a copy in the Public Record Office at London and edited a facsimile reprint issued in 1903.

The next Assembly Journal of which we have record is a fragment for the session of 1697 found among the Penn papers in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. This fragment was sent to the State Library at Albany in 1880 and there was consumed in the fire which destroyed that library in March, 1911.

From 1697 until the Revolution, there are thirty-six sessions for which no printed copy of the Assembly Journal is known to be extant. Several explanations have been offered as to why so few of the Journals have survived. In the earlier years each Journal was issued in separate numbers "de die in diem" in the form of one or more sheets, thus greatly increasing the chance of destruction. At that time, furthermore, the printer was paid by the year, and it is not probable that he printed any copies of the votes not actually required. In 1737, when there were but twenty-seven members of the Assembly, the whole number printed probably did not exceed fifty. As early as 1762, copies of preceding Assembly Journals had already become so scarce that Hugh Gaine, the New York printer, was authorized to print a collected edition embracing all the records extant from 1691. This collection, which included the records to 1765, was completed in 1766. After this, Gaine did no more government printing for nearly two years. William Weyman succeeded Gaine as printer for the Assembly and continued in that capacity until early in 1768, when Hugh Gaine was reappointed. Gaine's first work was to continue the Journal of the Votes and Proceedings of the General Assembly of New York State, and, commencing with the first, and only session of the thirtieth Assembly, he continued the work to the close of the thirty-first Assembly, ending the third of April, 1775. These were the last eight sessions of the legislature of the colony of New York and original issues of the Journals are among the rarest of the New York titles for which collectors have long been searching.

About 1820, the State of New York authorized inquiries concerning the Journals of her legislative proceedings before the outbreak of the Revolution. It was then found that but one copy of the Journals printed by Hugh Gaine could be located, and in consequence a reprint of fifty copies was ordered. This was made by Buel of Albany in 1820. The single copy from which the reprint was made belonged to the New York Historical Society. Through some mishap it was never returned to the Society, but completely disappeared and diligent search has failed to reveal its existence. It is, therefore, of great interest to know that another copy (not the one formerly the property of the New York Historical Society) has been found and is now on the shelves of The New York Public Library. There are in all eight parts, forming the set, and while a few of the separate parts are in the possession of some libraries, until this purchase was made, no library has possessed the whole set, nor could a complete set have been made up by assembling all the copies of the separate parts formerly accounted for.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

READERS AND VISITORS

IN the main reading room of the central building 18,582 readers consulted 63,034 volumes. Special reading rooms in this building were used by 40,165 readers, making a total for the whole building of 58,747 readers.

Visitors to the building numbered 205,290.

EXHIBITIONS

THE exhibit called "The making of an etching," which has been on view in the print gallery (room 321) since November and has attracted much attention, will be continued until April 30, a month longer than originally planned. The exhibits of etchings by Brangwyn, fifteenth and sixteenth century engravings, and illustrations by John Leech, all in the Stuart gallery (room 316), remain on view. To the exhibits in this room have been added a dozen color etchings by C. F. W. Mielatz, mostly views of New York City, and a memorial exhibit (described elsewhere in this issue) of the cartoons and illustrations by Sir John Tenniel, John Leech's successor on "Punch."

GIFTS

THE month of February was noteworthy by reason of the important gifts received. In addition to those referred to elsewhere, the following deserve special mention:

The Acorn Club of New Haven, Conn., gave the Library three copies from the edition of 102 copies of "The diary of Benjamin F. Palmer, Privateersman, while a prisoner on board English war ships at sea, in the prison at Melville Island and at Dartmoor (Now first printed from the original manuscript)." [c. 1914.] This work was printed from the manuscript copy of the Diary belonging to the Library.

Interesting miscellaneous gifts came from the following: from Mrs. Charles Louis Borgmeyer of New York, "The Master Impressionists" and "The Luxembourg and its treasures...," both by Charles Louis Borgmeyer, Chicago, n.d; from Mr. Edward C. Delavan, Jr., of New York, his work, "The disputed claim of the proprietors of East Jersey to Staten Island," 1909, and "Eirenarcha, or of the office of the Justices of Peace, in four bookes, revised, corrected, and enlarged ...first collected by William Lambard...," London, 1910; from Mr. Charles M. Farrand of New York, six volumes of interesting American publications of the early part of the nineteenth century, "A general history of Connecticut...including a description of the country...by a Gentleman of the Province, London, 1781," to which is added a supplement...New Haven, 1829, and "The seaman's vade-mecum & defensive war by sea: containing a maritime dictionary...," by Wm. Mountaine, London, 1782; from Mr. Charles W. McAlpin of New York, three copies of the Inaugural Address of President Wilson delivered at the Capitol, March 4, 1913 (privately printed, 1913, one copy being of an edition of fifty on Japan paper); from Prof. John A. Mandel came, as an addition to the collection of books about Emperor William II. of Germany which he had previously given the Library, "Deutschland unter Kaiser Wilhelm II. Erster Band: Deutsche Politik...," Berlin, 1914; Miss Ann S. Stephens presented the Library with the collected works of Mrs. Ann S. Stephens in twenty-three volumes; Mrs. George D. Widener of Ashbourne, Pennsylvania, presented the Library with No. 25 of the edition of 150 copies of the privately printed "Catalogue of the books and manuscripts of Robert Louis Stevenson in the library of the late Harry Elkins Widener with a memoir by A. S. W. Rosenbach," Philadelphia, 1913.

The following authors presented the Library with copies of their own works: Mr. Reginald Pelham Bolton of New York,

Mr. Harry J. Boswell of San Antonio, Texas, Mr. Gilbert Goudie of Edinburgh, Mr. John G. Johnson of Philadelphia (Catalogue of a collection of paintings and some art objects. 3 v. v. 1. Italian paintings, v. 2. Flemish and Dutch paintings, v. 3. German, French, Spanish, and English paintings and art objects, privately printed, Philadelphia, 1913-1914), Mr. Frederick McCormick of New York, Rev. John P. Peters, Miss Violet Pike, and Mr. John Pyne, all of New York, Mr. Michael J. Redding of Baltimore, Mr. Russell Robb of Boston, Mr. Isaac Roberts of New York, Mr. Charles de Grave Sells of Genoa, Italy, Mr. Francis Lynde Stetson of New York (Address at the Tilden Centennial, Carnegie Hall), and Mr. J. J. Webb of Dublin, Ireland.

From the Population Research Bureau of the Federation of Churches and Christian Organizations in New York City was received a gift of $250 towards the purchase of 2 volumes and maps of "Statistical sources for demographic studies of Greater New York, 1910."

CARTOONS AND ILLUSTRATIONS BY TENNIEL

THE death of Sir John Tenniel on Feb. 26, 1914, was naturally bound to call forth one of those little memorial exhibits which have become an established custom at The New York Public Library. In the Stuart gallery (room 316), the visitor may take a rapid review of Tenniel's career, through a number of his cartoons and illustrations. Of his "Punch" cartoons there are shown, among others, his first (1851), the famous one showing the British lion springing at the Indian tiger (1857), a number of his inimitable hits at Disraeli and Gladstone, the noted "Dropping the Pilot" (William II. watching Bismarck's departure), and some of the Lincoln caricatures, as well as the design—in which he and Tom Taylor made their amende honorable—published on the death of the martyr president. A strong note of forceful seriousness runs through all his work, but Tenniel could be quaintly humorous, as may be seen in various title-pages for "Punch" here shown. A similar vein is apparent also in his delightful drawings for "Through the Looking Glass," which offer what, to many, are the accepted conceptions of the walrus, the chess-king, the hatter, the March hare, and the rest of the company. Other books illustrated by him are shown here, including his one venture into Dickens' land, the "Haunted Man." Clearly, only a very small selection of his work can be shown; his 2,500 cartoons are contained in the file of "Punch" in the Library, and his book illustrations may be studied at leisure by those interested.

There is added, as always, literature on the subject. By his colleague Linley Sambourne, he is depicted as "The Black and White Knight," and there is a droll sketch of him by the late F. G. Attwood.

FEBRUARY WORK

DURING the month of February there were received at the Library 26,752 volumes and 12,449 pamphlets, of which 3,758 volumes and 12,449 pamphlets were credited to the reference department and 22,994 volumes to the circulation department.

Of the reference department receipts 1,434 volumes and 293 pamphlets were purchases, 2,286 volumes and 2,456 pamphlets were gifts, and 38 volumes and 9,700 pamphlets were exchanges. For the circulation department 22,906 volumes were purchases and 88 were gifts.

The reference department catalogued 3,329 volumes and 1,885 pamphlets; for this work were written 3,735 cards, 3,694 copy slips for the printer, and 601 slips for the duplicating machine. From these slips 1,944 cards were manifolded. Cataloguing of 1,167 volumes and 562 pamphlets was completed by addition to 2,379 cards. In the printing office 4,691 titles were set, from which 54,039 cards were printed.

The circulation department cataloguing force wrote 298 cards for the union catalogue, entered 5,342 volumes in the union catalogue and shelf list, classified 368 volumes. At the branches 6,880 cards were written.

Through the Interbranch loan system 9,580 books were asked for and 7,087 supplied.

In view of the complete and detailed report of the Director, the report of the Trustees may wisely be confined to a general statement of the important events of the past year and the policy in the administration of the corporation, with some reference to the financial situation.

There have been two changes in the Board of Trustees. Mr. Frederic R. Halsey was elected a trustee on January 8, filling the vacancy caused by the death, in 1912, of H. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, an original member of the consolidated corporation. Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, who had been a trustee since April 9, 1902, died on March 31, 1913. To succeed him, his son, J. P. Morgan, was elected June 11, 1913.

The death of Dr. John S. Billings, the Director of the corporation since 1896, occurred on March 11, 1913. The Trustees in their report for 1912 expressed their satisfaction that the distinguished Director had been able to put into successful operation his plans for the administration of the Library and to witness the manner in which the staff had made these plans so effective. It is not possible in this report to restate the debt which The New York Public Library and the public owe to that devoted, many-sided, and most remarkable man. A memorial service was held in the Library building on April 25, 1913, at which Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, Sir William Osler, Dr. William H. Welch, Mr. Andrew Carnegie, Mr. Richard R. Bowker, and the President of the Library, in the presence of a large audience composed of friends of Dr. Billings and a wide representation of the Library staff, paid tribute to the high rank in different fields of science and letters held by their departed friend and co-worker. An account of the proceedings at this meeting with the text of the addresses and other appreciations of Dr. Billings, was printed in the "Bulletin" of the Library for July, 1913, and was issued also as a separate pamphlet.

Dr. Billings was buried at Arlington Cemetery on March 14, in the presence of a number of his devoted friends and a delegation from the staff of the Library.

Mr. Edwin H. Anderson, who had been Assistant Director since June 1, 1908, was on the 14th of May elected Director in succession to Dr. Billings.

It is now more than two years and a half since the present building was opened to the public. In the report of the Trustees and the Director for 1912 a large increase in the attendance of the public and in the work accomplished was clearly shown, and the Trustees are glad to report a continuing increase in every department during the last year. Without repetition of the detailed figures in the report of the Director, it is sufficient here to say that during the year 50,000 volumes and 65,000 pamphlets were added to the reference department and equally substantial increases have been made in prints, maps, newspapers, and periodicals. More than two million people have entered the building as visitors or readers, and of this number over 526,000 registered as readers.

It is interesting to note that of these readers about two-thirds used the special reading rooms, and one-third used the main reading room. The greater part came to settle some definite question or to pursue some special investigation, few to read for mere pastime. The preponderance of readers in the special rooms, as compared with the number of general readers in the main reading room, shows the appreciation of our resources on the part of the scholars and investigators for whom these special reading rooms were designed.

The Trustees believe they may justly say that in no library of any importance is the use of the books attended with so few hampering conditions, so little difficulty or loss of time. It may certainly be said that The New York Public Library is both more largely used and on simpler conditions, than any other library in the world.

Before the removal of the Library to the central building, the largest number of users was recorded in 1908 when 212,701 readers consulted 905,030 volumes in the Astor and Lenox buildings. In the first full year in the new building (1912) the number of readers was 400,275 and the number of volumes used was 1,307,676. In 1913 the corresponding figures were 526,682 and 1,685,715, a gain of 31 per cent. in readers and of 29 per cent. in volumes used by them. In the month of November the gain in readers and in volumes consulted was 43 per cent. over November, 1912; in December readers were 45 per cent. and volumes consulted 44 per cent. greater than in the corresponding month of the previous year.

The increased use has been met with little increase in the staff. Our funds have permitted no increase at all comparable with that of the use. Additions to the staff are necessary, but with the present income of the corporation these can be made only by reducing the purchases of books, and such a step is out of the question. An increase in our endowment is therefore a pressing necessity.

It will be remembered that The New York Public Library, so far as the reference department and the central building are concerned, receives from the City for maintenance no amount whatever. The entire expense of the reference department and the running expenses of the central building are met from corporate funds. Liberal friends of the Library, such as the late John S. Kennedy, have added by bequest or otherwise to the funds of the corporation; and other constant and liberal supporters, such as Mrs. Henry Draper and certain members of the Board of Trustees, have added to our income. But it has been found that the necessary expenses of administration alone of the new building are so great as to make it difficult for the Trustees adequately to bring all departments of the Library up to the highest standards or to supply in all cases such skilled assistance as is desired. The Trustees have not hesitated, however, to use the corporate funds freely to meet necessary expenditures, being satisfied that in the City of New York financial assistance cannot long be lacking for so valuable and far-reaching a work.

In the circulation department, the funds for which are provided by the City under the contract with Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the ever increasing demands, due to the ever increasing use, have been met, and satisfaction at the good results attained may be expressed.

The Trustees have heretofore reported the bequest of the late William Augustus Spencer, consisting of his library of elaborately bound and handsomely illustrated books and, on the death of his wife, of one-half his residuary estate, the income of the fund so created to be used for the purchase of volumes in keeping, as to binding and illustration, with those collected by the testator. Mrs. Spencer died during the past year and a very considerable annual fund will, on the settlement of the estate, be at the disposal of the Trustees for this purpose.

The collection of prints has been increased considerably during the year, notably by the gift from Mr. J. Harsen Purdy of nearly 200 engravings by William Faithorne. The Trustees hope that the Library may be similarly enriched by the gift of fine examples of early prints, in which field the collection is at present weak.

The Trustees avail themselves of this occasion to express their appreciation of the loyal and faithful services of the staff of both the reference and circulation departments, to whom the satisfactory results of the work of the year are so largely due.

Respectfully submitted,

John L. Cadwalader,

President.

LEGACIES TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

No precise words are necessary to a valid legacy to the Corporation. The following clause, however, may be suggested:

"I give The New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations, the sum of.....dollars."

If land, or any specific personal property, such as bonds, stocks, books, prints, etc., is given, a brief description of the property should be inserted instead of the words "the sum of ..... dollars."

REPORT OF THE DIRECTOR

For the Year ending December 31, 1913

John L. Cadwalader, Esq.,
President of The New York Public Library.

Sir:

I have the honor to submit the following report of the Library for the year 1913:

General Summary

During the year the Library has made substantial progress. Its growth, both in the size of its collections and their use, has been steady, if not spectacular. Today it is a factor in the work and pleasure of more people than ever before.

Three facts stand out clearly as characteristic of the results of the year's work:

First, the resources of the Library in books, prints, maps, periodicals, etc., are naturally greater through the accessions by gift or purchase. Considering only the central building, nearly 50,000 volumes and over 65,000 pamphlets were added, making a total of 1,227,309 volumes and pamphlets at the disposal of the public for consultation in the building. Prints to the number of 75,194; maps numbering about 14,000; newspapers, American and foreign, numbering 351; and 7,775 different current periodicals must be added to this list of available resources within the central building alone. To obtain a complete record, very nearly 1,000,000 volumes in the circulation department must be included in the total, thus increasing the number of books and pamphlets in the whole Library to 2,191,498.

Second, a gain has been made in the facility with which these resources may be utilized by readers. Through additions to and changes in the staff there has been a gradual improvement in the Library's ability to serve the public efficiently and with reasonable promptness.

Third, the readers of New York City and elsewhere are more generally recognizing their opportunity to use the Library. Increasingly the central building is becoming the workshop of specialists and students alike. More and more the branch library is taking its place as a community center, the natural rendezvous for the dwellers in its neighborhood, the logical meeting-place for clubs and organizations that represent the life of the community. To the central building there came during the year, either as visitors or readers, 2,102,824 persons, an average of 5,761 daily. Of these, 526,682 were actual readers who consulted 1,685,715 volumes. From the 40 branch libraries 8,320,144 volumes were issued for home use, an increase of 350,480 over the number issued in 1912.

At the close of the year the general public catalogues contained 2,269,638 cards; the catalogues in special rooms, 1,625,941; and the official catalogue 1,184,239, making a grand total in the central building of 5,079,818 cards.

The total expenditures for the calendar year were $1,230,343.33, of which $504,489.64 was for the reference department and $725,853.69 for the circulation department.

Of the reference department expenditures $64,370.12, or 13 per cent., was for books, binding, and periodicals; $327,973.82, or 65 per cent., for salaries; $112,145.70, or 22 per cent., for all other purposes.

Of the circulation department expenditures $189,057.12, or 26 per cent., was for books, binding, and periodicals; $418,208.44, or 58 per cent., for salaries; $118,588.13, or 16 per cent., for all other purposes.

Of the circulation department expenditures $666,548.62 came from the City appropriation.

At the close of the year there were 1,046 persons on the staff of the Library; 467 in the reference department, 579 in the circulation department.

Of the reference department staff the number of librarians, assistants, etc., was 309; the number of engineers, janitors, pages, etc., was 158. Of the circulation department staff the number of librarians, assistants, etc., was 482; the number of janitors, pages, etc., was 97.

These figures, however, convey no adequate idea of the extent and variety of the activities of the Library. This must be obtained from a reading of the details given in the succeeding paragraphs and the statistical tables in the appendix.

REFERENCE DEPARTMENT

Information Division

An increase in the use of the entire Library, which this Report clearly shows, as well as added general acquaintance with the fact that there is a staff assigned to the particular task of imparting information, has resulted in greatly increasing the work of this division, but how great this increase is there is no means of measuring.

The addition of certain ready aids has proved of value in meeting this increased demand. For example, in the press of desk and telephone calls it is quite a different thing to have the "Cumulative Book Index" and the "United States Catalog" at hand rather than to have them available in another part of the building, as formerly. Likewise, the purchase of directories, lists, etc., which are frequently called for, even though some of them are a little outside the scope of the collections, has saved much annoyance.

To please or help many people, sometimes at the rate of several to the minute, without allowing them to waste time, requires a kind of standardization of a very indefinite service. The time of the division is all theirs, but the apportionment is not always simple. The call of a single neighbor can spoil the forenoon of some ploughmen, but it is possible for a library assistant to take care of hundreds of casual queries and yet devote the energy of a morning to serious research.

The relative importance of questions about curious or odd bits of information, or perhaps the latest fact connected with some practical pursuit, and those involving large collections and sources cannot be determined, but in the latter the Library doubtless gives greater satisfaction. The former are indeed stimulating in their constant variety as presented by so many people; but such a case as that of a professor from the middle west who explains that he cannot produce his articles and books at his university but has to come, between sessions, to one of two or three large reference collections, is surely significant. The work done here is perhaps expressed most accurately in the enthusiastic pleasure of one who studied the part mercenaries have taken in wars, and of another who was looking up the languages and literature of Australia. The satisfaction of a searcher at finding that the out-of-the-way references in his subject surpassed his expectation, may compensate for the dissatisfaction of another at not finding a compilation which he and one or two others might use once or twice and which would forthwith become out of date, valuable neither for record nor as a part of the literature of a subject.

Readers Division

During the year 151,133 readers applied for books at the desk in the main reading room and consulted 606,533 volumes, an average of 414 readers per day, who used 1,662 volumes. On Sundays the readers averaged 266, using 976 volumes; on week days the corresponding figures were 438 readers and 1,776 volumes. The hours of service on Sundays are 10, on week days 13.

In addition to the readers in the main reading room, the various special reading rooms devoted to the work of the reference department served 375,549 readers, an average of 1,029 per day. These readers consulted 1,079,182 volumes. Adding together the figures for the main reading room and the special reading rooms gives the total use of the reference department by readers as 526,682 readers, an average of 1,443 per day, using 1,685,715 volumes during the year.

Table I of the statistical appendix gives in detail the record of readers and of volumes consulted in the various reference reading rooms of the building. Table II shows the classes of books consulted in the main reading room.

The largest number of readers for any one month in the main reading room, 16,296 readers, was recorded in December; the smallest number, 8,931 readers, applied for books during July. The largest number of readers for any one day was 751, recorded on January 4; the largest number of volumes called for during a day was 3,009, on December 6. The smallest number of readers for any one day was 102, recorded on Sunday, July 6; the smallest number of volumes called for during a day, 356, on Sunday, July 20. The Fourth of July was the least busy week day, when 124 readers called for 453 volumes.

The number of readers in the main reading room has increased 28.43 per cent.; in the special reading rooms, 32.71 per cent. This increase in quantity is gratifying, but more gratifying is the improvement in quality of service in the main reading room. Various changes in personnel, in routine, in equipment have enabled the Library to reduce materially the number of books reported "not found" or "unavailable" when called for by readers. The ideal of the Library, however, is not yet reached; it will be realized only when every volume in the twelve hundred thousand is either in place or properly accounted for when wanted.

The absence of a shelf list for books in the stack is one cause of trouble in an effort to account for the stock on hand. A general shelf list is to be begun soon, and when this is completed and a systematic reading of the shelves has been carried through, an important advance will have been made towards realizing the ideal.

The character of reading has changed but little. There are but few books to attract the casual reader in search of amusement or quiet idling, however harmless and commendable such reading may be at certain times and under certain conditions. Most of the readers come for the solution of problems connected with their work, more or less definitely conceived. The number of men is larger than the number of women. Readers during the daytime usually make use of more books than those reading at night or on Sundays or holidays. Readers on the days last mentioned are more apt to come with a definite book in mind, a single definite problem to solve; their reading is usually less extensive.

The service has broadened in various lines. Teachers are bringing their classes to the central building more frequently than in past years. Several classes in biology, philology, and other subjects have come on Saturdays or on school day afternoons to examine at first hand the works of authors they had been hearing about in class rooms.

Another instance of broadening of service is the installation of a photostat, a means of rapid photographic reproduction of any printed matter. This has saved readers both time and trouble.

American History Division

The work of this division is wider than its name indicates; it includes the general care not only of the material in the Library that relates to American history, but also of the manuscripts, the early printed books, the books reserved from general use because of their value or rarity, and the maps. The special card catalogues include 299,260 cards, of which 26,600 are for maps.

During 1913, 15,964 persons made use of the American history room, and the adjoining rooms for reserved books and manuscripts, an increase in readers of nearly one half over the preceding year, when 10,745 were reported. The number of volumes used was 69,660. Of these totals 3,791 readers and 10,497 volumes were recorded for evenings and Sundays.

The use of the extensive collections of early American newspapers and early American legislative publications has increased largely. The importance of these two collections, which were mostly brought together by the Library in 1893-94, is now more fully recognized by historical students than formerly, and these students are giving them the attention they deserve. Some idea of the richness of the newspaper collection is obtained from the list printed in 1895, which shows under each year, from 1704 to 1800, just what papers are here, the aggregate for the ninety-seven years represented being over fifty thousand numbers.

Subjects of special research by persons using this division of the Library, besides some of those mentioned in the report for 1912, which are still in progress, include the history of glass manufacture in this country during the eighteenth century; the history of the old Merchants' Coffee House in New York before 1800; the bibliography of American publications from 1790 to 1793; the bibliography of Connecticut almanacs; early constitutional history of the United States; the claims of the American loyalists; the life and writings of Mason L. Weems; the letters of William Penn; the history of the Germans in America; the bibliography of the Shakespeare quarto plays; and a bibliographical and critical study of the "Speculum humanae salvationis," attributed to Laurens Coster, Haarlem, about 1470.

Interesting and valuable manuscripts have been presented from time to time by Mr. Howard Townsend. One of his gifts consisted of a collection of letters, documents, colonial paper money, etc. relating to Samuel Cornell, a North Carolina loyalist, and to the attempt of his son-in-law, William Bayard, to recover Cornell's property, confiscated for his loyalty to the British government. Two other gifts comprised eighty-one letters addressed to William Bayard, president of the Bank of the United States, and member of the New York commercial firm of Le Roy, Bayard, and McEvers; and sixty-two letters from various correspondents in England, Halifax, and the United States, written to Duncan Pearsall Campbell of New York. These latter collections provide valuable material for the history of commercial relations between the United States and Great Britain during the War of 1812.

A collection of autograph letters, photographs, etc., of more than fifty eminent Russians, including Tolstoi and members of his family, Vereshchagin, Count Perovsky Petrovo Solovovo, the Grand Duchess Marie Pavlovna, Maksim Gorki, and correspondence relating to the Russian famine of 1891-92 was presented by Miss Isabel F. Hapgood.

A number of valuable Babylonian inscribed cylinders and clay tablets of very ancient date, and manuscripts in various oriental languages were given by Mrs. Henry Draper. Particular mention should be made of the manuscripts in the Batta language, the clay cylinder containing a building inscription of Nebuchadnezzar, and a limestone slab with an inscription of Gimil-Sin, King of Ur.

Among other additions of importance the following may be mentioned: Philip Durell's "Particular account of the taking of Cape Breton from the French, by Admiral Warren and Sir William Pepperell, 17 June, 1745," London, 1745, folio; John Purvis's "Complete collection of all the laws of Virginia," London (1684), folio; the Journals of proceedings of the House of Representatives of New Hampshire, 1785 to 1794, in 13 volumes, and of the Senate of New Hampshire, 1785 to 1799, in 27 volumes; several early Virginia Acts and Journals; "Proceedings of the federal convention held at Philadelphia in 1787," printed at Philadelphia, by T. Bradford, 1787; Benjamin Harris's "Boston almanack" for 1692; a series of the laws of the Cherokee Nation from 1821 to 1893, and of Cherokee newspapers from 1828 to 1853; Thomas Morris's "Miscellanies" (relating to the campaign against Pontiac), London, 1791; Bernard Romans's "Concise history of East and West Florida," New York, 1776; Benjamin Gilbert's "Narrative of captivity among the Indians," Philadelphia, 1784; "Narrative of capture of Americans at Westmoreland, by Indians," Hartford (1780); Seaver's "Narrative of the life of Mary Jemison," Canandaigua, 1824; David Cusick's "Sketches of ancient history of the Six Nations," Lewiston, 1827; Wakefield's "History of the Sac and Fox war," Jacksonville, 1834; Hall L. Kelley's "Geographical sketch of Oregon," Boston, 1830; Gilmer's "Sketches of the first settlers of upper Georgia," New York, 1855; thirteen numbers of the "New York Gazetteer," printed by Shepard Kollock, 1784-86; fifty numbers of the "Gazette of the State of South Carolina," printed by Timothy and Walsh, Charleston, 1783-84; and about six hundred books and pamphlets relating to the American Indians.

The maps were moved during the summer to more commodious quarters on the same floor, which are also more convenient of access. During the year it was visited by 3,193 readers, who consulted 12,766 maps and atlases. There have been added during the year modern large-scale maps of Algeria in 157 sheets, Asia Minor in 24 sheets, Africa in 63 sheets, Italy in 270 sheets, Central and Eastern Asia in 33 sheets, European Turkey in 11 sheets, Denmark in 68 sheets, Norway in 194 sheets, Sweden in 92 sheets, France in 38 sheets (to be completed in 267 sheets), environs of Paris in 36 sheets, Austria-Hungary in 747 sheets. Cameroon in 31 sheets, Western Asia Minor in 6 sheets, and Tunis in 54 sheets; also, recent atlases of the Boroughs of Manhattan, The Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, Westchester county, and Yonkers; and of Bergen county, Morris county, Newark, and the Oranges in New Jersey.

Genealogy and Local History Division

The Genealogy division is used principally by people engaged in genealogical research relating to their particular families, probably three-fourths of the demands upon it being of this character. The use of the room is, however, not confined to the tracing of family history for sentimental reasons, for publication in book form, or for admission to patriotic hereditary societies; the material shelved here is used in fields sometimes surprisingly distant from those indicated above. For instance, the Eugenics Record Office has recently made thorough examination of the genealogical material for information about the physical, mental, and moral traits of the people listed in successive generations and their relationship to each other. From the information thus secured, biological charts have been constructed and family histories drawn up from the eugenic rather than from the genealogical point of view.

The total number of readers during the year 1913 was 24,768. Of this attendance, the average on week days from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. was 61; evenings from 6 p. m. to 10 p. m., 13. On Sundays the number of readers averaged 29 between the hours of 1 and 6 p. m. and 10 from 6 to 10 p. m.

The readers in this room used 118,048 volumes and pamphlets.

One reader has prepared from town histories and genealogies a book on the lives of Irish schoolmasters in the colonial and Revolutionary periods. Others have collected data for sketches of Revolutionary officers of Northampton county, Pennsylvania; a life of George Taylor, the signer of the Declaration of Independence; a history of Governor's Island; historic houses of New York; a history of Westminster Abbey, etc.

At the present time the special card catalogue in this division contains about 47,800 cards. For the British books the list printed in the "Bulletin" for 1910 is constantly consulted.

The number of additions in American local history, vital records, etc., was 145, genealogies 159, and patriotic societies 47. Additions of British parish registers, local histories, genealogies, and society publications amounted to 231. Of books on other European countries, heraldry, etc., about 40 were received.

Art and Prints Division

The art room, as was stated in the report for 1912, is used primarily by artisans, students, writers, and others who have definite work to do. The following figures refer largely to this class of readers. In 1912, 19,750 readers consulted 62,342 volumes. In 1913, 25,434 readers consulted 73,846 volumes. This is an increase in readers of 28 per cent. and in volumes used of 18 per cent.

In 1912 the print room was used by 3,917 readers, who consulted 6,427 volumes and 3,386 portfolios. In 1913 the print room was used by 3,972 readers, who consulted 7,007 volumes and 3,032 portfolios and boxes. There are now 75,194 prints in the collection, of which 18,787 are included in the Avery gift. The card catalogue of the entire collection, art books and prints, contains 137,086 cards.

The character of the demands made upon the collection and the location of the Library necessitate the maintenance of the general art collection with a certain amount of duplication of material found in the special art libraries of the city. Despite the fact that there are eleven other public or semi-public libraries in the city, this general policy has proved wise and has governed the character of the books added during 1913. The department of applied and decorative art in all its forms, from pure theory of design to the most practical application, has continued to receive important additions, largely through the fund given by Mrs. Henry Draper in memory of her father, Courtlandt Palmer. There has also been added important material in the fields of painting, sculpture, and architecture, but, as a rule, the more special literature relating to painting has been left to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and that of architecture to the Avery Library at Columbia University.

The prints added have been mainly gifts. From Mr. Frederic R. Halsey came a collection of etchings by Sir Frank Short and color prints by George Baxter. Mrs. Henry Draper presented the Library with a set of four views of the naval action, on June 1, 1813, between the Chesapeake and the Shannon, lithographed by L. Haghe from the painting by J. C. Schetkey, this set being printed in colors; etchings by Haig (additions to her former gifts), by Mielatz, and by various English etchers; and several original copper plates of etchings by Leech and Cruikshank. Mr. Samuel P. Avery gave a unique "touched" proof of Haden's "Toledo," and various etchings by English artists. From Mr. K. Imai were received Japanese prints; from Miss R. B. Moran etchings by the late Mrs. Mary Nimmo Moran; miscellaneous prints from Messrs. J. M. Andreini, G. H. Sullivan, and Paul Gmelin; and from the following artists examples of their work: L. Rhead, A. Allen Lewis, W. G. Watt, W. F. Hopson, Katherine Merrill, Charles H. Gleeson, R. K. Mygatt, William E. Fisher, H. M. and M. F. Eaton, Earl H. Reed, Timothy Cole, and Thomas D. Sugden.

The most important gift of prints came from Mr. J. Harsen Purdy, and consisted of his notable collection of engravings by William Faithorne, which he had lent the Library for exhibition during the summer. This collection consists of 170 prints, 18 volumes illustrated by Faithorne, and 52 playing cards engraved by him, and both in numbers and in the rich quality of impressions is very important.

The gradual increase of the collection of old prints has been continued, Lautensack, Pencz, Aldegrever, H. S. Beham, Ribera, and Marc Antonio Raimondi being among the artists represented.

Music Division

The music rooms were used by 11,120 readers during 1913, an increase of 1,124 over 1912. The average per month was 953; per day, 35. These readers consulted 36,693 volumes, an increase of 4,060.

Among the new books of interest mention should be made of the analysis of Chopin as a composer by Edgar Stillman Kelley; the autobiographies of Clara Louise Kellogg, Lilli Lehmann, and Clara Novello; the biographies of Chopin by Weissmann, of Mozart by Wycewa, of Franz Schubert by Dahms; the new edition of Julian's "Dictionary of hymnology," Lightwood's "Hymn tunes," Hutchins' "Church hymnal," Messiter's "History of the choir and music of Trinity Church," Annie Patterson's "Story of oratorio," "History of the Litchfield Choral Union," Weissmann's "Berlin als Musikstadt," Combarieu's "L'histoire de la musique," Dent's "Analysis of Mozart's operas;" vocal scores of such new operas as Charpentier's "Julien," Damrosch's "Cyrano," Converse's "Pipe of desire," Herbert's "Natoma," Montemezzi's "L'amore dei tre re," Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier," Wolf-Ferrari's "Jewels of the Madonna," and Gyrowetz's "Agnes Sorel," which, though not new, being printed in 1784, was none the less welcome when presented by Alberto Himan.

A gift of more than usual interest, which came from Mrs. Joachim Andersen, consisted of the programmes of 2,400 orchestral concerts conducted by the late Joachim Andersen at Scheveningen in 1890-92, Copenhagen in 1894-1909, and Lübeck in 1895, bound in fourteen volumes.

The strength of the collection is mainly historical, and the books on the shelves have served as the source for extended investigations along historical lines, among which may be mentioned studies in violin making and playing, piano methods and playing; old English ballads, folk songs, and carols; national music, music in schools, musical education; analyses of the operas of Verdi, Puccini, Strauss; analytical reviews of orchestral editions of symphonies, suites, and chamber music.

The limited appropriation for additions to the collection has allowed the division to do little towards providing investigators with the music publications of the last fifty years. A few current biographies and similar works have been added, as noted above, a few current scores, a few of the later dictionaries and apparatus of similar nature; but it has been impossible to make any systematic effort to develop the collection as to size or quality, or to make its representation of the important works of the last century comparable with its earlier material. There is an excellent foundation, and a fitting superstructure would be a source of pride and help to the Library and the city.

Economics Division

In the economics division the number of readers registered in 1913 was 8,890, an increase of nearly 58 per cent. over the number for 1912. The largest number of readers in a single month was 1,082, in November. Before June no record was made of the number of volumes used in the room, special conditions making difficult any attempt to this end. Beginning with June a record of the volumes so used has been kept, the figures for the last seven months of the year being 27,720. A careful estimate of the use for the first five months gives 20,280 as the result, making 48,000 the estimated total for the year. This is an average of 5.3 volumes per reader.

New volumes to the number of 7,263 have been placed on the shelves. More new publications likely to be of interest to readers in the division have been added than in preceding years and more promptly. The value of the working material has also been considerably increased by the addition of a number of new periodical subscriptions. On every subject covered by the division a constant effort has been made to anticipate the needs of the public. The first calls for a new publication, as well as the earliest inquiries for information on subjects just coming into prominence, are likely to be urgent and important and the elementary principles of efficiency require that the Library shall not wait for the demand to manifest itself before purchasing books and preparing bibliographies.

The special catalogue of the division now contains 279,000 cards, the addition of 34,000 cards during the year being chiefly due to the cataloguing and indexing of new material.

During 1913 most of the pamphlet material heretofore stored in boxes in the economics room has been bound into volumes. It is hoped that within another year the unbound pamphlets in the remaining sections can also be combined into volumes. The problem of keeping fresh pamphlet material at hand and readily available has been at least partly solved.

A large collection of newspaper clippings relating to municipal affairs in New York City and other American cities during the years 1908, 1909, and 1910, was given to the Library in April by the Bureau of Municipal Research. Late in December similar material for the years 1911 and 1912 was received from the same source. The collection is minutely classified by an elaborate numerical system. It is not available for general readers, but special investigators have access to it in the economics division.

A very careful estimate has been made of the number of books and pamphlets in the Library in the branches of the social sciences. The result is shown in the following table:

SUBJECTS	VOLUMES	PAMPHLETS	SUBJECTS	VOLUMES	PAMPHLETS
Statistics	8,000	900	Public finance and taxation	8,000	5,000
Economics	6,000*	2,000*	Sociology	2,200*	900*
Labor	3,000	2,500	Charities	3,500	2,100
Railroads	8,000	6,500	Criminology	4,000	3,000
Tariff	700	2,400	Socialism	1,600	2,300
Money	1,000	2,900	Political science	2,800	2,200
Banking	2,300	2,300	Suffrage	300	1,000
Insurance	6,000	1,500

* Includes only general works on the subject.

A similar estimate, also prepared in reply to a special inquiry, indicates that the Library has 3,500 volumes and 6,000 pamphlets on the general subject of education, including history, theory, etc. Government reports for the United States number 3,000 and for other countries 600. The reports, catalogues, etc., of schools, colleges, and universities amount to 7,500. In addition to these items about 200 periodical publications are represented in the collection.

A preliminary list of references on the legal minimum wage, printed in the August "Bulletin," was reprinted in an edition of 200, but soon proved inadequate to supply the demand. Sometime during the next year it is hoped that a revised and enlarged edition can be prepared and printed. Typewritten reading lists or selected bibliographies were prepared on the following subjects: restriction of the height of buildings, restriction of immigration with special reference to the literacy test, night work for women, compulsory arbitration of labor disputes, teachers' associations, etc., in the United States, modern hospital management, state income taxes, indexing and filing of business correspondence, advertising and selling. Requests from other libraries or from individuals for bibliographies on various subjects have been met by lending typewritten lists for a short time.

The typewritten list of recent books of general interest in economics, sociology, and political science, which was posted once a month in the public catalogue room, has been discontinued, its place being taken by a more extended list, including works in foreign languages, published each month in the "Bulletin."

Documents Division

The most noteworthy feature of the year in document accessions has been the growth of the collection of American statute law. Heretofore no effort had been made to increase this collection, the entire matter having been left to the local law libraries. Early in the year the Library Committee authorized the acquisition of American statute law from approximately the year 1860 to date, including the latest codes and revisions. In some cases when a particularly attractive lot was offered, the year 1860 has been antedated by an appreciable period. The carrying out of this authority has proceeded actively, and the Library now has a good law collection. For the statistics see p. 243 under Purchases. Supplementing the statute law, there have been large additions to the collection of case law as well as to that of text-books.

The collection of foreign law is still too weak to be of any practical use. Exception might be made in favor of English statute and case law and French statute law. The acquisition of continental administrative law would be urgent if Americans were better linguists. The need and demand are here, but it would be practically useless to supply this material except in the English language and in this form it is to be had only in excerpt or expository form. It must, thus, of necessity be fragmentary and superficial and is found chiefly in treatises and periodicals. Of these the Library has a measurably fair supply.

In number of accessions the collection of municipal documents probably comes first. The cities now represented in the collection number Rhode Island. The most precious addition of the year was the Virginia 2,378, of which 1,238 are American. The most valuable additions to the files of American city documents were for the cities of Connecticut and code made by John Purvis and printed in London in 1684, this copy being in excellent condition and containing 70 pages of manuscript transcripts.

During the year, the Military Service Institution deposited with the Library 472 volumes and 176 pamphlets, given by Mrs. John H. Hernson, a large proportion of which were documents belonging to her father, the late General John M. Schofield. Among the latter, it is gratifying to report, were many United States military reports, regulations, and instructions, which were new to the Library.

The total additions for the year were 9,789 volumes of public documents, 13,658 pamphlets, and 411 maps. Since the establishment of the division there have been received 172,807 volumes and 120,951 pamphlets.

The collection of seals and coats of arms of cities, states, and national governments, begun some years ago, has made satisfactory growth and is highly appreciated by architects and decorators, its chief users.

The routine of this division is now clearly established as that of three distinct sections: a reference section, a cataloguing section, and a periodical section.

REFERENCE SECTION

No reference work was done by this division prior to the opening of the new building, May 24, 1911. From that time to the present the amount of reference work done is represented, in a measure, by the following figures: in 1911, 1,563 readers used 7,135 volumes; in 1912, 4,104 readers used 22,715 volumes; in 1913, 7,596 readers used 38,998 volumes. In other words, the average number of readers per day during 1913 was 27. That this work is peculiarly difficult is due to three causes: first, to the wide range of questions asked; then, to the fact that the documents are not shelved as a collection, but are scattered throughout not only the stacks but the special rooms as well; and last, to the fact that there never has been time to make a subject catalogue for the division. It can readily be seen that a great amount of personal service is required of attendants, under these conditions. In addition, more or less reference work is done by telephone, such calls being as varied in character as those made personally. The names and duties of officials in or out of office here or elsewhere; statistics of imports and exports by kind, value, and quantity, of this and other countries; statistics of diseases, of manufactures, of catastrophes, etc.; the verbatim text of constitutional amendments, etc., etc., have been given by telephone. Requests have come by letter from Philadelphia, San Francisco, and New Orleans, for lists of references on a variety of subjects. The division has been called on for service by the billboard commission of the late Mayor Gaynor, by the sub-committee of the Heights of Buildings Commission of the New York City Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and by a representative of Borough President McAneny who was at work on a municipal ice plant report. In connection with the service rendered to the Heights of Buildings Commission, it is proper to acknowledge the courtesy of the Librarian of the Massachusetts State Library in permitting the loan of documents not in this Library.

In the summer of 1912 a clipping collection bearing on the work of the division was begun as an experiment. It soon developed into a useful tool and now has become indispensable, paying for itself many times over in the increased facility of service to readers. In the beginning it was a clipping collection pure and simple; but as possibilities have manifested themselves, any contributory material has been included, and it now comprises booklets, circulars, pamphlets, letters, manuscript memoranda, etc. The base of supplies for the clippings is the newspaper room in the Library, which contributes to the division all the papers not kept for binding. The papers so received come from all parts of the world, and are in a variety of languages. Daily papers and trade journals are scanned for notices of circulars, booklets, charts, etc. A member of the staff visits all exhibitions held in the city which are likely to yield material for the clipping collection. Managers of out-of-town exhibitions, commercial, banking, and civic organizations have responded generously to applications for literature. The material obtained is mounted on manila backs and the whole is kept in small vertical filing cases and arranged by a simple classification.

In the case of controversial legislation, such as the currency bill or the income tax measure, clippings, pamphlets, monographs, magazine articles, etc., are filed with the bill. Whatever current material the division has may thus be laid before a reader for his selection. In connection with the municipal ice plant inquiry alluded to above, photostat copies were made of some of the clippings.

During the year a most valuable addition to this collection was received. A very large quantity of clippings, etc., bearing on the administration of Gov. Hughes was given to the Library by Mr. R. H. Fuller, and is in process of being arranged and mounted. From the same donor came 144 pieces of New York State documents, and other material. Another mass of clippings and correspondence deserving of mention received during the year consisted of the scrap books given by the late Director, Dr. Billings, and bearing on the work of the National Board of Health during Dr. Billings' association with it.

CATALOGUING SECTION

All the documents received in the Library except the maps are catalogued here. During the year 1913 there were catalogued 8,836 volumes and 16,184 pamphlets. Copy for 10,724 titles was prepared, of which 7,542 titles were sent to the printer, the yield being 68,270 cards. In addition, 36,912 cards were made on the typewriter. There are at present 312,780 cards in the document catalogue as against 258,498 at the same time in 1912, being an increase of 54,282 cards during the year.

PERIODICAL SECTION

This section receives, shelves, collates, and prepares for binding 1,424 current official periodicals. These comprise official gazettes, chiefly British and French federal and colonial, current continental parliamentary proceedings, municipal bulletins, and educational and statistical journals. They do not include the many agricultural experiment station bulletins, nor any agricultural bulletins which are monographs complete in themselves. This sort of material is catalogued as soon as received and sent at once to the stack shelves that it may be available to all users of the Library while its subject-matter is fresh. In addition, there are a large number of official periodicals shelved in the current periodicals division, the preparation of which for the binder also devolves on this section.

Science Division

During 1913, additions to the collection shelved in the science division amounted to 694 volumes and 756 pamphlets, besides bound volumes of current periodicals, public documents, etc.

The catalogue contains 135,600 cards, the shelf list 36,000 cards. Besides the indexing of periodicals, the division has begun the indexing of obituaries of scientists published in the proceedings of learned societies and in scientific periodicals. The results so far have been very satisfactory. There is much demand for information of this kind.

Readers numbered 18,137, an increase of 8,039, or 78 per cent. over those recorded in 1912. The number of volumes consulted was about 67,030. The increase is due partly to the establishment in November, 1912, of service after 6 p. m., the readers during the evening hours having numbered 5,195, about 28 per cent. of the total; but in great measure it must be credited to the increased appreciation of the facilities of the Library for research in pure science and its application to the solution of the practical problems of today.

Professional chemists, geologists, physicists, and mathematicians are coming in greater numbers. Scientists making extended investigations usually know the literature of their subject and are able, once they are familiar with the shelves, to pursue their work with little or no attention from the staff. Students of problems connected with geology and chemistry, less familiar with the literature of their subjects than the investigators above referred to, are likewise increasing in number. Their questions are usually specific and practical, for example, as to the depth of bed rock in a certain part of Manhattan, or the clays of New Jersey.

Continued researches on phosphorescence, cellulose, ozone, zeolites, the principle of relativity, the carboniferous formation in different parts of the world, the physiography of the Hudson river valley, tides, and subsidence of sea coasts, have been made by users of the division.

Technology Division

The technology rooms (exclusive of the patents room) were open to the public daily during 1913, from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m., for 362 days, serving 30,044 readers, who used 135,696 volumes. The largest attendance, 3,039, was recorded in December; the smallest, 1,853, in June. The largest number of readers on any one day was 146. Sunday readers numbered 3,282. The Sunday attendance from 6 p. m. to 10 p. m. increased 50 per cent. over that of 1912 during the same hours.

Readers in the patents room numbered 10,759, as compared with 8,113 for 1912, an increase of 32.6 per cent. The number of volumes consulted was 139,731.

The aggregate of readers in the technology and patents rooms was 40,803, an increase of 29.7 per cent. over 1912.

During 1913 additions to the division totaled 4,594 volumes, including patent records but excluding duplicates and manufacturers' catalogues not accessioned.

The work of cataloguing and shelf-listing the material shelved in the technology rooms has been completed. The catalogue cards now number 103,575. The new cards include comparatively few index cards for periodical material, in accordance with the policy of relying as much as possible upon the separate periodical card index prepared mainly from the galley sheets of the "Engineering index." The binding, cataloguing, and indexing of the material heretofore kept in pamphlet boxes are nearing completion.

Two bibliographies were published: (1) List of works relating to the development and manufacture of typewriting machines (18 pages); (2) List of works relating to electric welding (23 pages). The latter has proved of recognized value in important patent litigation — in fact, the edition was soon exhausted. It is hoped to print a second edition in the near future.

Three bibliographies are well under way: (1) List of works relating to oxy-acetylene welding; (2) List of works relating to ultra-violet rays; (3) List of works relating to oil as fuel.

Noteworthy observations in the reference work of the year were the increasing interest in the literature of mining and metallurgy and the constant demand for references on moving pictures. In contrast was the apparent lack of interest in aeronautics.

Oriental Division

Last year 15,040 bound volumes were reported in this division; since then, 532 volumes have been added, making a total of 15,572.

The catalogue of the division now contains 61,640 cards. The revision of the subject-headings, which was begun last year, has been finished.

A shelf list, begun during the later months of the year, has been completed for all books shelved in the oriental room, and is being prepared for the oriental books shelved in the stacks. An inventory of the books in the room brought most satisfactory results. Only 3 pamphlets are missing from the collection of 6,893 books and pamphlets, and these will probably be found later.

During the year 2,680 readers used the room, consulting 9,930 works. This was an increase over last year of 481 readers. In addition, many oriental books were sent to the main reading room for use there.

Of the various sections of the collection, that dealing with ancient Egypt seems to be most in demand. This demand apparently represents both a popular and a scientific interest in the land of the Pharaohs, its art and its civilization, stimulated, no doubt, by the increasing accessibility of the country. The department is continually asked for information concerning the history, customs, and symbolism of Egypt, which it is possible to give by reason of the exceptionally good collection the Library contains.

More interesting still is the use made of the collections in modern oriental languages by Orientals living in New York. Arabs, Persians, Turks, and Armenians, in large numbers, come to the Library to keep in touch with their homes and their past. The demand, however, on the part of Chinese or Japanese readers for texts in their native tongues is very small, although translations of Chinese and Japanese classics are used freely.

Of recent additions there may be mentioned the volumes that form the continuation of the "Catalogue général des antiquités égyptiennes du Musée du Caire," and of the "Publications of the Egypt Exploration Fund." The section dealing with Mesopotamia and the country around the Tigris and Euphrates rivers has received many additions, the Library buying regularly all the serial and other publications that have come out in such large numbers.

Jewish Division

The number of volumes and pamphlets credited to this division is now over 21,400. The special card catalogue of the collection has passed the 100,000 mark. The average daily number of readers has been 19, and the average number of volumes called for, 44.

In equipment the division has been enriched by the installation of six new catalogue cabinets of thirty trays each, and the acquisition of Hebrew brass type for lettering books in the bindery.

Of the accessions of the year mention should be made of the edition of the "Babylonian Talmud," with over one hundred new features, consisting of marginal notes and commentaries, in 20 volumes, together with the abstract by Isaac Alfasi, in 5 volumes, all on "regal" paper, Wilna Widow and Bros., Romm, 1880-86, folio; 138 volumes and pamphlets, mostly in the Italian language; and "The Apocrypha and Pseudepigrapha of the Old Testament in English, edited in conjunction with many scholars by R. H. Charles," 2 volumes, quarto.

Slavonic Division

The stock of books in this division at the end of the year 1913 consisted of 18,632 volumes, 322 pamphlet volumes, and 1,657 single pamphlets. During the year 1,397 volumes and 184 pamphlets were added. The number of cards in the catalogue was 57,960.

The readers during the year numbered 11,328, as compared with 9,950 in 1912. The average per month was 944, as against 830 in 1912. These 11,328 readers called for 19,377 volumes.

The most important addition to the collection consisted of about 28 volumes, 179 pamphlets, 6 periodicals, and 16 newspapers in the Lithuanian language, which form the basis of a Lithuanian section, given to the Library by the United Lithuanian Societies. Other additions of interest were the following: "Akty sobrannyye Kavkazskoyu Arkheograficheskoyu Kommissiyeyu" (ten volumes), sent to the Library by the Caucasian Archeological Commission, collected works of Kuprin (fiction), Grot (philology, ethnology, and mythology), Leontyev (general literature and panslavism), Muizhel (fiction), Panayev (fiction and general literature), Potyekhin (fiction and drama), Samarin (panslavism and history), and Shestov (critical essays), a new edition of Tolstoi, a new English edition of Turgenev, translated by Miss Isabel F. Hapgood, the complete Russian code "Svod Zakonov Russkoi Imperii," "Drevnosti Rossiskavo Gosudarstva" (archaeology), "Stenograficheski Otchot Pervoi Gosudarstvennoi Dumy" (debates and proceedings of the first Duma), "Obzor Dyeyatelnosti 3 Dumy" (proceedings of the third Duma), "Monografie w Zakresie Dziejow Nowozytnych" (Polish historical essays); "Kniga zhitiya i otchasti chudes povyedaniye prpbnavo i bgonosnavo Otza nashevo Vasiliya Novavo spisano Grigoriem mnikhom Ouchenikom evo," with "Vidyeniya Grigoriya Ouchenika Vasilyeva, chyudno syelo" (lives of two Russian saints, printed probably in the seventeenth century by the Pochayev press); Magnitzki's "Arifmetika," St. Petersburg, 1703 (the first Russian arithmetic published in Russia).

Nine new Russian periodicals were subscribed for: "Zavyety" and "Sovremenik" (general literature), "Golos Minuvshavo" (historical), "Bibliograficheskiya Izvyestiya" and "Byulleteni Literatury i Zhizni" (bibliographical), "Vyestnik Russko-Angliskoi Torgovoi Palaty" (commercial), "Voprosy Filosofii i Psichologii" (philosophical), "Zhenski Vyestnik" (women), and "Russki v Amerikye (the Russian in America).

Seven Lithuanian periodicals, namely: "Dilgeles" and "Terka" (humor), "Saltinis" and "Tevyne" (political), "Laisvoji Mintis" (free thought), "Jaunimas" (educational), "Lietuvos Ukininkas" (general); one Ukrainian, "Literaturno-Naukovi Vistnik" (literary); one English, "The Russian Review;" and one German, "Deutsche Monatsschrift fuer Russland," were also added. Besides these additions to the current files, important additions were made to the back files of periodicals to the number of 550 volumes.

Periodicals Division

The total attendance in the current periodical room and the entire use of the periodical material are not easily computed, for the current issues of the standard monthlies are kept on the open shelves for free use without the formality of calling for them. Thus only those readers who use periodicals not on the open shelves can be counted.

During the year, 125,763 readers called for periodicals, an average of 347 a day, which is an increase of 26,215 readers, or 73 a day, over the corresponding figures for 1912. 438,128 periodicals were given out, an average of 1,210 a day. The total number of titles called for was 219,223.

Classified as to subject, the titles were as follows: art, archaeology, the stage, etc., 37,049; bibliography, 2,338; economics and sociology, 33,701; geography and travel, 800; history (American), 156; history (all other), 128; Judaica, 2,489; law, 541; literature (American and English), 46,152; literature (all other), 24,643; medicine, 3,386; philology, 493; philosophy, 1,558; religion, 2,850; science, 4,085; and technology (including trade journals), 58,802.

The number of readers increased steadily throughout the year. November 8 was the busiest day, with 540 readers, and July 13 (Sunday) the quietest, with 170. Monday has averaged the busiest day of the week, with Saturday a close second.

The index of plays current in New York theatres, which was mentioned in last year's report, has been continued. Prepared chiefly to assist in answering questions from readers as to dates of production, casts of characters, and dramatic criticism, it has proved a valuable aid, its use amply justifying the moderate amount of time required for its compilation.

Newspaper Division

Of domestic papers the newspaper room regularly receives 121 dailies, 105 weeklies, 7 semi-weeklies, 2 tri-weeklies, and 2 bi-weeklies; and of foreign newspapers, 52 dailies, 16 weeklies, 2 semi-weeklies, and 1 tri-weekly. The papers just enumerated amount to 308, to which must be added the 43 foreign newspapers contributed by the Universal Publicity Advertising Company, making a total of 351.

The 237 newspapers published in the United States represent 44 states and 2 territories, including 111 towns and cities. Eighty-five newspapers are printed in foreign languages but published in the United States, the distribution by language being as follows: German, 24; Swedish, 18; Jewish, 15; Italian, 8; Danish, Greek, and Portuguese, 3 each; Chinese, Finnish and French, 2 each; and Albanian, Armenian, Danish-Norwegian, Dutch, and Japanese, 1 each.

The foreign papers represent 38 countries with a total of 114 titles. The detailed list is as follows: England, 16; Canada, 12; Cuba, 8; Mexico, 7; China and France, 5 each; Germany, Japan, and the Netherlands, 4 each; Austria, Brazil, Ireland, Philippine Islands, Porto Rico, and Russia, 3 each; Africa, Australia, Belgium, Colombia, Italy, Panama, Salvador, and Sweden, 2 each; and Argentine Republic, Chile, Dutch West Indies, Guatemala, Java, New Hebrides, Nicaragua, Norway, Peru, Scotland, Spain, Straits Settlements, Sumatra, Turkey, and Venezuela, 1 each.

Forty-six newspapers for which there was little demand have recently been dropped; 65 have been added by gift, 4 by purchase. Those received by gift include papers printed in 40 representative American cities.

The division binds for permanent preservation 57 different titles including domestic papers — principally those of New York City — and foreign papers. Besides these, 73 titles, domestic and foreign, are preserved in heavy manila rope paper covers.

Readers applying for newspapers during 1913 numbered 68,981, an increase of 21,926 or 46.5 per cent. over the 47,055 recorded in 1912. These readers consulted 87,273 volumes, an increase of 42,828 or 96.3 per cent. over the 44,445 recorded the year before. The daily average in 1913 was 190 readers and 241 volumes, as compared with 129 readers and 122 volumes in 1912, an increase of 47.2 and 97.5 per cent. respectively.

December was the busiest month with a record of 8,352 readers using 10,184 volumes. June was the quietest month, 4,154 readers using 5,511 volumes. The busiest day came on November 24 (Monday) when 321 readers filed slips for 381 volumes. The lowest figures for a day were recorded on February 16 (Sunday) when 59 readers used 98 volumes.

These figures record only readers filing slips for bound volumes or for newspapers not kept on the racks; they do not record the casual readers of the sixty-three current papers on the racks. For a list of these sixty-three papers see p. 295 of the appendix. As a test of the total use of the room, a count was kept during the last week of the year (December 24 to 31 inclusive, except the 25th when the room was closed); this count recorded 7,834 persons entering the room. The number of readers filing slips during this period was 1,945; the number of sightseers was negligible; the number of persons reading papers on the racks was 5,889. If this week be considered as typical of the entire year, the annual record would be 407,368 readers, of whom 101,140 would be registered as users of back files and 306,228 as users of rack papers. As the record of persons actually filing slips is 68,981 instead of 101,140, it will be safe to reduce the estimate of 407,368 in like proportion (68 per cent.), which would give an estimated total use of the room amounting to about 280,000 readers.

This record of use is satisfactory as a quantitative statement, but it is inadequate as an expression of the quality of reading done in the room. The papers on the racks are consulted partly by the familiar class of habitual readers common to any newspaper free reading room, partly by out-of-town visitors anxious for a glimpse of home papers. The papers kept at the desk in manila folders and the bound volumes are consulted usually by people with a definite object in view, a definite question to settle; the casual or "time-killing" reading done with these papers is slight. Genealogists, writers of biographical notices, book reviewers, dramatic and musical critics are frequent users of the back files. Advertisers study back files and current issues for types, display, text, and circulation. "Missing estates" are frequent objects of lengthy but usually fruitless searches.

Gifts and Purchases

The most important gift of the year consisted of the works bequeathed to the Library by William Augustus Spencer, who lost his life on the "Titanic" April 14, 1912. The collection consists of 158 books (203 volumes), in modern bindings by twenty-six different binders, and illustrated by more than two hundred artists. The books themselves are largely by French writers of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The illustrations exhibit in the main the work of artists of the modern French school, such as Paul Avril, Adolphe and Alphonse Lalauze, Rochegrosse, Maurice Leloir, Robaudi, Giacomelli, and others. Many of the books contain the original designs from which the illustrations were made, and a majority contain plate proofs of the illustrations in various states. The bindings, generally by French binders, are in most instances elaborate and ornate in character, some having required more than two years for execution. In design they depart largely from classic conceptions, illustrating the originality characteristic of French binders of today. The bindings of greatest interest are from the workshops of Mercier, Marius Michel, Lortic, Gruel, Chambolle-Duru, Joly, and Canape.

Important gifts from Mrs. Henry Draper, Messrs. Howard Townsend, J. Harsen Purdy, and Frederic R. Halsey are not given in detail here, as they come under the American history division or the Art and prints division, and are noted fully in the reports of those divisions. The books deposited with the Library by the Military Service Institution and important state documents and clippings from Mr. R. H. Fuller are referred to under the Documents division.

As usual, various members of the Board of Trustees have shown their interest by gifts of books or other material. Mr. Cadwalader gave, among other things, several inaugural addresses by Lords Rectors of the University of Glasgow; Mr. Rives gave a copy of his history of the "United States and Mexico, 1821-1848," not to mention other books and pamphlets; from Mr. Russell and Mr. Sheldon were received interesting collections; from Mr. Halsey, prints, as noted on p. 227; from Mr. Taft, various volumes of importance; from Mr. Morgan, the "Catalogue of Babylonian records" in his library, privately printed in New York in 1912.

From Prof. John A. Mandel of New York University and Bellevue Hospital Medical College were received about two hundred volumes relating to Emperor William II. of Germany, brought together at the time of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the ascent of the Emperor to the throne, a collection of unusual interest.

The Maharaja of Bhavnagar contributed his elaborate history entitled "Forty years of the Rajkumar college, an account of the origin and progress of the Rajkumar college, Rajkot, prepared and abridged from the papers of the late Chester MacNaghten, M. A., first Principal of the college, and other sources, 1870-1910"; the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres sent in continuation of his father's gifts volume 8 of the "Bibliotheca Lindesiana," being a "Handlist of proclamations issued by royal and other constitutional authorities, 1714-1910, George I. to Edward VII., together with an index of names and places;" from Hendrik C. Andersen came his interesting volumes entitled "Creation of a world centre of communication" and "World conscience, an international society for the creation of a world centre, to house international interests and unite peoples and nations for the attainment of peace and progress upon broader humanitarian lines," Rome, 1913; Mr. William K. Bixby of Saint Louis continued to show his interest in the Library by sending his privately printed facsimile of some Swinburne manuscripts; from M. Philippe Bunau-Varilla came his recent book on "Panama: the creation, destruction and resurrection;" Hon. Joseph H. Choate gave some thirty-five volumes of miscellaneous publications; from Mr. Lionel A. Crichton of London came a manuscript warrant served on His Grace, the Duke of Montague, Master of Her Majesty's Great Wardrobe, and to his Deputy to provide and deliver to Lord Lovelace, Governor of New York, various presents for the Indians of New York, dated June 26, 1708, signed by Kent and Godolphin; Mr. J. Clarence Davies sent five eighteenth-century newspapers, including the "Connecticut Journal and New Haven Post-Boy," January 27, 1769, and the "Essex Journal and New Hampshire Packet," April 5, 1776; from Mr. Robert Lenox Maitland were received some sixty-seven volumes, mainly English and Scotch historical and theological works of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; from Doctor Edward Chauncey Worden, a manuscript volume of the Records of the White Deer (Pennsylvania) Baptist Church from August 12, 1808, to February 19, 1854, begun by Rev. Thomas Smiley, the first pastor of the church, and continued by his successors; giving an interesting insight into the thought and culture of a Susquehanna valley community in the first half of the nineteenth century.

Among the numerous gifts of genealogies and material of like nature, mention may be made of those received from Mr. John A. Church, Brigadier-General Joseph C. Jackson, Miss Bell S. Root, Mr. Everett Cosmer Barney, Mr. Charles Claghorn, Mrs. Wilhelmus Mynderse, Mr. Alwyn Ball, Jr., Mr. George Austin Morrison, Jr., Mrs. Roswell Skeel, Jr., Mr. William B. Aitkin, Mr. Joseph Cecil Bull, Mr. John H. Greener, Dr. S. E. Hampton, Rev. Jesse W. Jennings, Mrs. William Law Learned, Mr. Alexander Ross McMahon, Mr. Henry Stoddard Ruggles, Mr. Francis Russell Stoddard, and Rev. Henry Biddall Swanzy.

From Mr. G. R. Agassiz was received his "Letters and recollections of Alexander Agassiz" printed at Boston in 1913; from Mr. Irving Brokaw, his "Art of skating, its history and development with practical directions;" from Mr. Hereward Carrington, his two works on "Eusapia Palladino and her phenomena" and "Personal experiences in spiritualism;" Mr. John Armstrong Chaloner gave two volumes of his letters and other material of biographical nature; from Mr. Gherardi Davis came his privately printed volume, "The colors of the United States Army, 1789-1912;" from Prof. Joseph de Perott of Clark University, a miscellaneous collection of 190 volumes, 56 pamphlets, and 3 packages of newspapers; from Mr. H. W. Dickinson, his biography, "Robert Fulton, engineer and artist;" from Mr. Harry Harkness Flagler, three of the beautifully printed publications of the Woodberry Society; from Mr. A. E. Gallatin, his "Whistler's pastels and other modern profiles;" Dr. William Paul Gerhard sent thirty-six pamphlets of his own writings, mainly on subjects connected with engineering and sanitation; from Mr. Charles Grandpierre came "What may we learn from the other Americans, printed as manuscript while at sea aboard the steamship Verdi;" from Mr. Robert S. Guernsey, continuations of his previous gifts, amounting this year to 291 pieces; Sir Charles E. H. Chadwick Healey sent us his "History of the part of West Somerset comprising the parishes of Luccombe, Selworthy, Stoke Pero, Porlock, Culbone and Oare," printed at London, 1901; from Mrs. F. S. Henry were received ninety volumes including "Godey's Lady's Book" for 1859-1864, and the "Eclectic Magazine" for 1845-1848; from Mr. D. Phoenix Ingraham, twenty-three volumes of the "Architectural Record," New York, 1891-1908; Mr. F. Kruhse sent books in the Russian and Lettish languages amounting to 269 pieces; Mr. Thomas W. Lawson, his publication on "High Cost Living," Dreamwold, Mass., 1913; from Mr. Elisha Lee came material relating to the three recent arbitration proceedings between the railroads and their employees, dealing with the engineers' arbitration in 1912, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen in the spring of 1913, and the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen in September and October, 1913; Prof. Brander Matthews sent his "Gateways to literature, and other essays," New York, 1912; from Mr. Rufus E. Moore was received "Histoire de l'art du Japon," printed at Paris in 1900; Rev. Edmund Banks Smith, Chaplain of Governor's Island, New York, gave his "Governor's Island, its military history under three flags, 1637-1913," New York, 1913; Miss Emily F. Southmayd, the privately printed "Memorial of Charles F. Southmayd" by Hon. Joseph H. Choate; from Miss Ann S. Stephens came a collection of material relating largely to the literary activity of her mother, Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, including 270 volumes and pamphlets, thirty photographs, and one photograph album; Dr. Guilherme Studart, Barão de Studart, of Ceará-Fortaleza, Brazil, sent four of his works and five volumes and one pamphlet by other authors, all relating to the history of Brazil and Ceará; from Mr. Henry R. Wagner came four pamphlets relating to the Mexican War of Liberation; from Mr. Robert W. Woodward, his privately printed catalogue of the Woodward collection of jades and other hard stones by John Getz, issued in 1913.

Other gifts of importance and interest came from the following: Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild, Hon. Henry M. Goldfogle, Dr. G. F. Kunz, Mr. Mansfield Merriman, Mrs. E. E. Olcott, Hon. Lemuel E. Quigg, Prof. Leo S. Rowe, Mrs. Russell Sage, and Miss Schwab.

Mention should be made of the gifts from the following magazines and newspapers: American Agriculturist, American Monthly Review of Reviews, Commercial and Financial Chronicle, Concrete-Cement Age, Daily People, Engineering News, New York Herald, New Yorker Staats-Zeitung, Publishers' Weekly, Railway Age Gazette, and Scientific American; also from the Boston Book Company, Bureau of Municipal Research, Brooks Brothers, Century Company, Harvard Club Library, New York Society Library, New York Telephone Company, Student Volunteer Movement, Union League Club, United Engineering Societies, and Universal Publicity Company. The Universities of Breslau, Göttingen, Greifswald, and Jena sent collections of dissertations presented by candidates for degrees.

From the Academia Nacional de la Historia, Caracas, Venezuela, came volumes 4-7 of "Documentos para los anales de Venezuela;" from the British Museum, sixteen volumes of its publications; Columbia University sent ninety-three volumes and forty pamphlets; from the Hobby Club of New York came its privately printed "Papers" for 1911-1912; from the Japan Society of New York, "Japanese colour prints and their designers" by Frederick W. Gookin, New York, 1913; and from the Long Island Historical Society, a collection of forty-seven volumes and 182 pamphlets.

In the fields of American history, art, economics and sociology, and technology, the purchases have followed much the same lines as last year; in music and the biological and physical sciences little has been added; in mining, metallurgy, and architecture, the purchases are greater than usual; and in the field of statute law an important change has been made from the previous practice of the Library.

To provide source material for the student of economic and social conditions of the last few decades, the Library has made a systematic effort to complete its files of the session laws of the states of this country from 1860 to date. In pursuance of this policy, 939 volumes of statute laws of forty-six states, seventy-four volumes of codes and revised statutes of thirty-three states, and 251 volumes of supreme court reports were added.

Another change of policy worthy of note was the purchase of the latest directories of the larger cities of this country, and of numerous trade and business directories and other ready reference works of similar character.

The recent real estate atlases of New York City and its suburbs, and large-scale official maps of European countries and parts of Asia and Africa, which were added during the year, have greatly aided readers in the map room. Detailed mention of these accessions is made in the report of the American history division.

The Library receives at this date 7,775 current periodicals, of which 4,360 are purchases, 3,190 are gifts, and 225 are received in exchange for the "Bulletin." Table III in the statistical appendix records these receipts in detail, indicating frequency of issue, country of publication, etc.

The total number of separate pieces of periodicals received during the year was 196,518, being a daily average of 634; these include quarterlies, monthlies, dailies, etc., but do not include annuals.

Besides the 225 periodicals credited above as "Bulletin" exchanges, the Library receives 452 annuals in return for the "Bulletin."

New titles added during the year numbered 676 (208 added by purchase, 456 by gift, 12 by exchange); titles dropped by cancellation of the subscription, or for any other cause, numbered 328; the net increase, therefore, is 348.

Of the total number of periodicals received, 4,806 go to the current periodical room, 1,031 to the public documents room, 307 to the newspaper room, 165 to the Slavonic room, 46 to the music room, 43 to the American history room, 36 to the patent room, 30 to the genealogy room, 15 to the oriental room. 811 annuals and 485 serials of irregular periods of publication are sent through for immediate cataloguing.

Accessions Division

During 1913, the Library received 49,365 volumes, of which 16,698 were purchases, 30,549 gifts, and 2,118 exchanges. The number of pamphlets received during the same period was 65,003, of which 5,757 were purchases, 49,164 gifts, and 10,082 exchanges.

During the calendar year, 43,176 volumes and 2,741 pamphlets were accessioned. Of this number 20,355 volumes and 946 pamphlets were purchased or were received on exchange account, and 22,821 volumes and 1,795 pamphlets were gifts. Included in this record of volumes are 1,770 "pamphlet volumes" made by binding together in single volumes 2,067 unbound volumes and 20,314 pamphlets, grouped so as to bring together a sufficient number of pieces to make volumes of about two inches in thickness, each relating to a single subject.

The total number of volumes recorded as available for readers on December 31, 1913, was 919,441 and of pamphlets 307,868, an aggregate of 1,227,309 pieces in the reference department.

During the year 3,441 volumes and 1,046 pamphlets have been reclassified. The classification of Bibles and law is finished. Several sections of the classification have been amplified and other sections will be developed during 1914.

Nearly all the "snags" and the straggling ends which remained from the moving have been cleared away. In the work of the division there have been conflicts with the unmistakable powers of disorder and disease in books. Each case has been treated fairly and scientifically, and the mortality among the sickly pamphlets has been lessened. The division is now trying to put every scrap of printed paper in the best possible form, such as press-board binding or pamphlet volumes. There is hope of doing away in two years with the old pamphlet boxes, except in special cases.

Cataloguing Division

The number of volumes newly catalogued in this division during 1913 was 33,228, of pamphlets 24,490, of maps 43. The cataloguing of 1,433 volumes and 1,546 pamphlets was carried on by adding to entries already existing. 4,875 volumes and 2,590 pamphlets were recatalogued.

Of works serial in their form—magazines, society publications, etc.—there were catalogued 6,545 volumes and 11,070 pamphlets, making a total of 17,615. In addition, 11,918 volumes and 6,297 pamphlets were added to entries already in the catalogue. There were recatalogued 896 volumes and 1,230 pamphlets.

In all, 58,895 volumes, 47,223 pamphlets, and 43 maps, making a total of 106,161 items, were handled by the cataloguing division.

Cards were distributed to the official catalogue, the public catalogue, and the various special divisions as required, and 42,775 cards were sent to the Library of Congress, the latter also receiving 5,975 cards for books in the central circulation collection.

2,244 periodicals were indexed. In connection with this work, 603 copy slips were written for the American Library Association coöperative indexing.

All pasted cards from the two printed catalogues of the Astor Library are now filed in the official as well as in the public catalogue.

Of Bibles, about 430 in the reserve collection remain to be catalogued. The Bibles in the Stuart collection are being recatalogued.

The general index catalogue in the public catalogue room contains 2,221,903 cards, the author catalogue of books in the central circulation collection 27,755, and the central children's room 19,980, making a total of 2,269,638 cards.

The depository set of Library of Congress cards filed in the public catalogue room contains 478,015 cards.

The official catalogue in the cataloguing room contains 1,184,239 cards, of which 1,013,568 are in the general alphabet, 103,040 in the serial catalogue, 32,307 in the reports catalogue, 6,658 in the railway catalogue, 21,984 in the author record of books in the central circulation collection, and 6,682 in the central reserve catalogue.

In the special reading rooms the catalogues contain a total of 1,625,941 cards.

The aggregate number of cards in reference department catalogues is thus 2,269,638 in the public catalogue room, 1,184,239 in the official catalogue in the cataloguing room, and 1,625,941 in the catalogues in the various special reading rooms; making a grand total of 5,079,818 cards.

Exhibitions

In the main exhibition room the year opened with a display of rare books, manuscripts, maps, prints, and other objects of interest continued from the previous year.

From January 6 to 25 was displayed, in addition to the material above mentioned, an exhibition of the literature of spelling reform and of shorthand, the two great activities of Isaac Pitman's life, the exhibition being commemorative of the centennial anniversary of Pitman's birth on January 4, 1813. Doctor C. P. G. Scott attended to the arrangement of the exhibit relating to spelling reform and provided most of the pieces on view. The shorthand exhibit was in charge of Mr. James W. Beers, president of the American Shorthand Collectors Association, and Mr. David H. O'Keefe of the New York State Stenographers Association; it consisted of a selection of typical shorthand books published before 1800, an extensive collection of editions of Pitman's publications beginning with "Stenographic sound hand" issued in 1837, and leading texts issued by American publishers or adapters of Pitman's phonography, beginning with the first reprint of Pitman's "Manual of phonography" made by Dunlevy in New York City in 1842. For this exhibit Mr. Beers prepared a typewritten guide entitled "Sir Isaac Pitman and modern shorthand."

At the request of the executors of the estate of the late Joseph Pulitzer, the competition drawings, submitted by Messrs. Carrère & Hastings, McKim, Mead & White, Arnold W. Brunner, John Russell Pope, and H. Van Buren Magonigle for the fountain to be erected at the Plaza entrance to Central Park in accordance with the terms of the will of Mr. Pulitzer, were shown in the main exhibition room from January 20 through February 1. The drawings were submitted on Saturday, January 18, to the judges, Mr. George B. Post, representing the executors, Mr. Whitney Warren, representing the park commissioner, and Messrs. Paul B. Cret, Charles A. Platt, and Herbert Adams, selected by the competing architects.

From February to December was shown here an interesting collection of early books and prints relating to railways, lent by Mr. William Barclay Parsons.

On June 9 was put on view a selection of the most interesting and typical bindings from the collection of illustrated books in fine bindings bequeathed to the Library by the late William Augustus Spencer. (See p. 239 under Gifts for detailed description.) These volumes attracted no little interest and remained on view until the opening of the City Planning Exhibition in November, at which time they were moved to the exhibition room (number 322) on the third floor, adjoining the print exhibition room, where they are on view at the beginning of 1914.

In November all the exhibits displayed in the main exhibition room were withdrawn, and the room temporarily turned over to a display of charts, drawings, maps, plans, and other material of interest in connection with the modern problem of city planning. This exhibition was held under the joint auspices of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment Advisory Committee on City Planning and the Heights of Buildings Committee. It attracted great interest, was visited by 34,182 persons, and remained on view until December 14.

After the City Planning Exhibition had closed, the general exhibition of rare books, manuscripts, etc., was again displayed. The exhibit now illustrates the progress of writing and bookmaking from the earliest times among the oriental nations and in western Europe down to the sixteenth century, and incorporates valuable new material including cuneiform contract and other tablets, a cylinder building inscription of the time of Nebuchadnezzar, and a limestone slab containing an inscription of Gimil-Sin, King of Ur, written in the Sumerian language about 2275 B. C.

In the print gallery, room 321, the exhibition of Washington portraits, continued from 1912, was replaced in May by one of engravings by William Faithorne, represented in a collection of noteworthy fullness and of remarkable excellence of impression.

This collection, which was donated to the Library during the exhibition by the owner, Mr. J. Harsen Purdy, gave way, after some extension of time in November, to a carefully prepared exhibition illustrating "The making of an etching." By means of plates, tools, illustrations, and numerous etchings the various processes and manipulations of the art are clearly shown, and the interest and attendance of the public have well justified the work put into this display, which passes on into the year 1914.

In the Stuart gallery, room 316, the fifteenth and sixteenth century engravings have remained on view throughout the year, emphasizing the interest of the Library in a period of graphic art, which in its finest and most expensive manifestations can be represented adequately only through the aid of public-spirited collectors. The etchings by A. H. Haig gave way in February to an exhibit of prints by members of the Chicago Society of Etchers, and that in April to the customary spring display of recent additions, of which a portion of the old engravings referred to really formed a part. This yearly display gives the public an opportunity to see in what directions the print collection has grown. In July there followed a collection of color etchings, including a number by Americans. In November this was replaced by the Library collection of etchings by Brangwyn, so that in these exhibitions of modern work, diversity of method and artistic temperament was well illustrated. The pictures of Turkish and Balkan uniforms, from the Vinkhuizen collection, were shown until June and replaced for a while by the Century Company's printing exhibit. The death of A. T. Millar in September occasioned an exhibit of the etchings by him, and this was replaced in December by another, devoted to Henry Marsh, the wood engraver.

Bulletin

The seventeenth volume of the "Bulletin" was completed with the December issue, and contained 1,072 pages. A list of the more important city documents received, prepared by the division of public documents, and a list of recent books of interest added to the Library, have, as a rule, been published monthly.

The customary annual report of the Library covering the preceding year was incorporated in the February issue. In the number for April was printed a biographical tribute to the late Director, Dr. John Shaw Billings, and in the July issue appeared the proceedings of the meeting held in his memory on April 25.

The issues for January, March, and April contained the concluding parts of the list of city charters, ordinances, and collected documents begun in 1912. In May was printed a list of works relating to electric welding, prepared by Mr. William B. Gamble, Chief of the division of technology, and a list of selected references on the city plan of New York, prepared by members of the division of public documents. The numbers from July through October contained a list of books in the Library relating to the history of the Jews in various countries. In August was printed a preliminary list of selected references relating to the legal minimum wage, prepared by Dr. Charles C. Williamson, Chief of the division of economics and sociology, primarily as a working list for the New York State Factory Investigating Commission in its consideration of the advisability of fixing a minimum wage in any or all industries of the State; in its preparation there was kept in view the issue of a larger and more nearly complete list at a future date. In September was printed a list of references on the development and manufacture of typewriting machines, prepared by Mr. Gamble. The issue for November contained a list of the works relating to Emperor William II. of Germany presented to the Library by Dr. John A. Mandel; a list of works in the Library relating to the aborigines of Australia and Tasmania prepared by Mr. George F. Black of the American history division; and a list of works relating to city planning and allied subjects prepared in connection with the exhibition of views, maps, plans, and other illustrative material on the subject displayed in the main exhibition room. The December "Bulletin" contained the first part of a list of books in the Library on the subject of numismatics, coins, medals, etc. All these lists, except when otherwise stated, were prepared by Mr. Daniel C. Haskell.

In June was printed a selection of letters relating to Samuel Cornell, North Carolina loyalist, the original manuscripts having been given to the Library through Mr. Howard Townsend by the next of kin of Maria L. Campbell, deceased. That for December contained an interesting letter from James Barron to Richard Dale, May 13, 1820, relating to the Barron-Decatur duel and printed from the original manuscript in the Library.

In September was printed an account of the identification of the manuscript of a "Geographia" of Ptolemy in the possession of the Library as the long-lost "Codex Ebnerianus". This identification was made by the Rev. Professor Joseph Fischer, S. J., of Feldkirch, Austria, and printed in the "Historical records and studies of the United States Catholic Historical Society", volume 6.

The October issue contained a statement about the engravings by William Faithorne given to the Library by Mr. J. Harsen Purdy. In November was printed a short description by Dr. Richard Gottheil, and a half-tone facsimile, of a cuneiform cylinder containing a building inscription of Nebuchadnezzar, given to the Library by Mrs. Henry Draper.

Printing and Binding

PRINTING

The printing office is now doing the printing of the entire library system. Early in the year the increase in the work from the circulation department forced the purchase of an additional linotype and the appointment of an additional operator. A new model no. 12 Mergenthaler linotype and the necessary accessories were installed late in June, and early in July the printing office began to produce work from this machine. Nearly all of the publications and other miscellaneous work hitherto done on machine no. 4 was transferred to the new machine. About two thirds of the time of machine no. 4 is now given to the composition of catalogue card titles, which has meant furnishing cards more promptly and keeping pace with the increasing volume of this class of work.

During the year the staff was reorganized on a more efficient basis and the quality of the work improved. Titles to the number of 69,580 were composed, from which 710,596 catalogue cards were printed, an increase over the preceding year of 5,555 titles and 148,565 cards. The total number of stationery forms, blanks, etc. was 10,217,037 against 6,810,218 in 1912, an increase of 3,406,819. Of publications, including the "Bulletin," "Monthly List of Additions," and various lists, 463,497 copies were printed. The tables printed on p. 296 show in detail the results of the year's work.

BINDERY

In the bindery 38,923 volumes were bound, 815 volumes repaired, 11,493 miscellaneous maps, photographs, portfolios, pamphlet boxes, etc., were mounted or made, making a total of 51,231 volumes and miscellaneous pieces that passed through the bindery during the year, an increase over the preceding year of 24,732 volumes and miscellaneous pieces. There were also sewed or covered in the bindery 21,312 copies of library publications, an increase over the preceding year of 3,712 copies. The table on p. 297 shows in detail the results of the year's work.

Throughout the year there was a noticeable increase in the percentage of efficiency on the part of the bindery staff, both in the output and in the quality of the work produced. An addition of 26 people to the force was authorized for 1914, and was carried out during the latter half of December, thus bringing the total force in the bindery up to 60. This will permit more advantageous and rapid handling of the accumulated material for the reference department.

CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

Stock of Books, Newspapers, and Periodicals

At the close of 1913 the circulation department had nearly a million books available for use, either at home or within the buildings, by the 3,201,000 people who comprise the population of Manhattan, The Bronx, and Richmond, the three boroughs directly served by the Library. The exact number of volumes was 964,189, a gain of 6.1 per cent. over 908,828, the number reported last year. Of this total, 900,919 volumes are available for home use; the remainder, 63,270 volumes, classed as reference books, must be used in the buildings. Taking 3,201,000, the population given above, as a basis for computation, .28 volumes per capita are available for home use.

Over one tenth of the total number of volumes, 99,609 exactly, all available for circulation, are in no less than twenty-five foreign languages, a statement conveying some idea of the varied demands made upon this department. An effort to strengthen and round out this stock of foreign books has resulted in an increase of 7,368 volumes during the year. The volumes now in stock, tabulated by languages, may be found on p. 303 of the appendix. The larger part of these books in foreign languages, except those in French and German, which are distributed throughout the branches, are placed in the nineteen branches where the demand is greatest. The only change made in the location of foreign books was at the Rivington Street branch, which now has Italian books, in addition to Polish, Rumanian, Russian, and Yiddish.

The entire stock of books, English and foreign, estimated by separate titles rather than by the aggregate of volumes, embraces 113,823 titles; 81,512 in the English language and 32,311, or nearly three-tenths, in foreign languages. This total represents a net increase of 4,711 titles over the number available in 1912, 6,523 titles having been added and 1,812 dropped. The present list of titles is classified as follows: general works, 1,221; philosophy,2,572; religion, 6,450; sociology, 8,528; philology, 2,542; science, 6,039; useful arts, 6,754; fine arts, 7,907; literature, 15,599; history, 6,257; travel, 7,329; biography, 9,216; fiction, 33,409.

The 32,311 foreign titles are, for the most part, standard works of fiction, drama, poetry, science, and literature, with a large number of the best translations from English authors. The distribution by languages is as follows: Arabic, 36; Bohemian, 3,525; Chinese, 182; Danish, 237; Dutch, 55; Finnish, 138; French, 4,419; German, 11,355; Greek (classical), 107; Greek (modern), 135; Hebrew, 595; Hungarian, 2,528; Italian, 1,955; Latin, 183; Norwegian, 385; Polish, 1,331; Rumanian, 611; Russian, 2,059; Servian, 70; Slovak, 157; Spanish, 739; Swedish, 474; Yiddish, 961; sundry others, 74.

Included in the 964,189 volumes of the circulation department are 11,190 music scores available for circulation, of which 1,349 were purchased in 1913. The largest section of these comprises 4,317 opera scores. A special effort has been made to maintain an up-to-date collection, conforming to the annual programmes of the Metropolitan and Century opera companies. Announcements of these programmes are sent to the branch librarians every year before the opening of the opera season, so that the scores of new and revived operas may be purchased in advance. The remainder of the music scores consists of 3,839 volumes of vocal music, such as songs, choruses, oratorios, etc., and 3,034 volumes of instrumental scores, including music for the piano, organ, violin, 'cello, etc. Detailed statistics of the collection are given in Table X of the appendix.

One hundred and twenty-five different newspapers, published in this country and abroad, were on file during the year at the branches. Fifty of these are in English, thirteen in Bohemian, twelve in Hungarian, eleven in German, ten in Swedish, nine in Yiddish, seven in Italian, four in French, two each in Rumanian and Russian, and one each in Hebrew, Norwegian, Polish, Spanish, and Slovak.

The current periodicals received at the branches are still more numerous, amounting to 391 different titles, of which 277 are in English, 84 in foreign languages, and 30 in embossed type for the blind. The foreign books are distributed as follows: Bohemian, 30; German, 18; Hungarian, 8; French, 7; Italian, 6; Russian, 5; Yiddish, Rumanian, and Hebrew, two each; and Swedish, Norwegian, Spanish, and Finnish, one each.

Circulation

The circulation department is able to report for 1913 the largest number of books borrowed for home use during any one year. From all branches, including the Central Circulation and Children's Room located in the central building, the Travelling Libraries, and the Library for the Blind, there were circulated 8,320,144 volumes, an increase of 350,480 over the number issued in 1912. 5,313,541, or sixty-four per cent. of this total, were issued to adults; the remainder, 3,006,603, were issued from the children's rooms. The circulation per capita was 2.6, the same as in 1912.

Excluding the Travelling Libraries office, which shows an increase in circulation of 98,045 over 1912, twenty-nine branches show gains amounting in all to 356,976, while twelve branches show losses of 104,541. Of this decrease 42,268 is reported from four lower east side branches all located near each other, viz: Seward Park, Hamilton Fish Park, Rivington Street, and Ottendorfer. One hundred and thirty-fifth Street branch reports a loss of 25,176 and Harlem Library 2,423, these two branches serving contiguous districts. On the west side of the city only two other branches show decreases, Columbus and Riverside, with losses of 2,139 and 2,014 respectively.

The closing of the George Bruce and St. Raphael branches accounts for 18,108 of the decrease. On the east side only two branches north of Ottendorfer report decreases, 58th Street with a loss of 4,769 and Epiphany with a loss of 7,441. All the branches in The Bronx and the Borough of Richmond have gains with the exception of Tottenville, which reports the small loss of 203.

There is a net increase of 252,435 for the branches. The Central Circulation branch in the main building, including the Children's Room, with a total circulation of 385,441, shows the largest gain, 73,426. Tremont branch reports an increase of 38,746, 96th Street of 35,383, Morrisania of 26,096, and 115th Street 22,262. The heaviest circulation for the year, at the Seward Park branch, was 395,221, or an average of 1,263 for each week day.

The percentage of fiction as compared with other classes of books issued from all branches and the Travelling Libraries office is 55 per cent., the same as in 1912.

Of books in foreign languages 563,841 volumes were circulated, an increase of 64,491 over the number reported for 1912. This circulation was distributed by languages as follows: Bohemian, 43,112; Danish, 459; French, 61,388; German, 209,207; Hebrew, 7,652; Hungarian, 57,054; Italian, 42,997; Norwegian, 918; Polish, 11,690; Rumanian, 1,891; Russian, 51,828; Spanish, 5,400; Swedish, 1,324; Yiddish, 65,745; sundry others including Arabic, Chinese, Dutch, Flemish, Finnish, Slovak, modern Greek, Ruthenian, and Servian, 3,176.

As compared with the year 1912, the circulation of music scores from all branches during the year showed a gain of 6,768 volumes, the total circulation amounting to 50,373. Of opera scores 20,412 were issued, about 40 per cent. of the entire circulation of music for the year. Vocal music comes next in popularity, 17,859 volumes being circulated. See table X on page 305.

During the summer, 50,464 volumes were issued under the special rule allowing each reader leaving the city to borrow eight books at one time for vacation reading between May 15 and October 1. This was an increase of 1,535 over the number for 1912. Statistics of the vacation reading by branches are shown in table XVI of the appendix.

Book Selection and Purchase

As heretofore, whenever possible, books have been secured on approval so that an examination of each new title may be made before purchase. In this way the committee on book selection has had the opportunity to pass upon about 8,000 new titles, of which 6,523 (2,110 in foreign languages) were retained and placed on the library shelves.

Many volumes, as in the past, were at first purchased for a single branch, being readily available to all other branches through the system of inter-branch loans. As later demand justified, these titles were freely duplicated. The total number of volumes purchased and sent to the branches was 165,274.

A selection of new books which it is thought may be of general interest is submitted each week to the branch librarians at the regular Friday morning meeting so that an opportunity may be given each librarian to make an examination of the more important new books as published.

In the selection of books on certain topics, the Library has continued to have the benefit of advice from the experts in charge of the several special departments in the main building; especially valuable has this service been in the purchase of books on economics, the sciences, and the useful and industrial arts.

Cataloguing

In addition to the current book purchases, the cataloguing office has handled 26,640 books for the collections of three new branches to be opened early in 1914. The usual routine was followed as to the cataloguing and classification of new titles, and the entry in the Union shelf list and catalogue of those duplicated at the different branches. The books for the new collections of the Melrose and Woodstock branches, and the additional stock for Washington Heights branch, before their shipment to the branches, were entirely prepared in the cataloguing office, including accessioning, stamping, perforating, numbering, book pocketing of each volume, and the writing of shelf list and book cards. For this work a special force of clerical assistants was temporarily employed.

The system established in 1912 of supplying printed catalogue cards to each branch for all new titles at that branch has been followed without change during the past year. Catalogue cards, printed in the central building, have also been supplied for all books in the new branch collections.

Books Rebound

The volumes of the circulation department that require rebinding are taken to outside firms, as the capacity of the bindery in the central building is sufficient only for the work of the reference department.

During the year, the number of volumes rebound was 79,950. The ratio of volumes rebound to volumes circulated was about 10.4 to 1000. The average price per volume paid for rebinding was $.492. This average includes the binding of magazines, the special binding for reference books, and the four styles of binding specified for volumes in the circulation department. With the exception of approximately 7,000 volumes bound in pamphlet style, the best materials on the market were used in the rebinding. Practically all volumes rebound were sewed with an interlocked or overcast stitch.

Books Withdrawn

Early in 1913 the book order office was given charge of all books withdrawn from the branches; these numbered 86,458 volumes during the year. The procedure is as follows: Each book is stamped by the branch "last copy" or "duplicate," as the case may be, and sent in by messenger to the shipping room. Here they are sorted and those stamped "last copy" are delivered to the cataloguing division for correction of the catalogue records. Both the "last copies" and the "duplicates" are examined for titles that are being purchased currently for the branches, and all that are in good condition are set aside to fill requisitions from the branches. Selection is then made from all titles remaining for those desired for the central reserve collection, which supplies all branches through the interbranch loan service. They are also sorted for all titles and editions likely to be worthy of preservation by the main reference library, and such volumes are turned over to the reference department to compare with their catalogue. Those not desired by the reference department are again sorted. Volumes too much worn for library use, but still sufficiently serviceable to be appreciated as gifts by certain institutions, are turned over to the travelling library office for distribution. The volumes finally remaining are torn to prevent possible sale as books, and disposed of as old paper. During the year, books withdrawn from the branches were disposed of as follows: 1,800 were retained for use at other branches; 9,172 were placed in the central reserve collection; 6,038 were transferred to the collection of the reference department; 15,000 were given to the travelling library, and 54,448 were sold as old paper.

Central Reserve Collection

The central reserve collection was begun in 1911, primarily to serve as a reservoir for books no longer in active demand at the branches, but of sufficient permanent value to justify their retention for occasional use in circulation through the interbranch loan system. From its very purpose, therefore, a slower growth of the collection was to be expected after the non-active stock accumulated during previous years, especially at the older branches, had been transferred to it. This is exactly what has happened. The number of volumes transferred from the branches and added to the central reserve collection during the past year amounted to 9,443, a decrease of 9,449 as compared with the number added during 1912, and 17,129 less than the number entered in 1911, the first year of the collection. As most of the branches have now cleared away their accumulations and are at present maintaining active collections limited in size by shelf capacity, the central reserve collection will show hereafter a more normal rate of increase.

During 1912, the central reserve collection was used as a depository for a special set of 114 Yiddish books, for the purpose of meeting through the interbranch loan system the spasmodic demands for books in this language that were received at branches in various sections of the city, thus avoiding the necessity of establishing permanent collections at these branches until the permanency of the demand in each case was assured. The success of this experiment has led to the formation during 1913 of similar collections of books in Hungarian and Swedish.

The central reserve collection numbered 54,700 volumes at the end of the year, classified as follows: general works, 5,258; philosophy, 1,358; religion, 3,275; sociology, 6,657; philology, 382; science, 3,196; useful arts, 2,041; fine arts, 1,722; literature, 6,214; history, 4,313; travel, 4,902; biography, 7,333; and fiction, 8,049.

The circulation of books from this collection through the interbranch loan system was 18,411, a gain of 8,663 over that for 1912.

Interbranch Loans

The work of the interbranch loan system showed steady growth during the past year, a total of 67,563 volumes being interchanged among the branches through this medium at the daily request of readers, an increase of 7,866 volumes over the record for 1912. With the book resources of the circulation department distributed among so many branches and with no large central collection from which to draw, considerable difficulty has been experienced in the past in making readers understand that books not found at one branch can be easily and speedily borrowed for them from other branches through the interbranch loan system, but in recent years the steadily increasing circulation of books through this system has given unmistakable evidence of a better appreciation of its advantages on the part of the public at large. During the last five years the books requested have numbered 50,754, 61,142, 78,195, 83,632, and 89,507 respectively; the books supplied during the same years have been 35,773, 42,151, 54,081, 59,697 and 67,563.

The interbranch loan office is not confined to the mere operation of a routine system of book exchange between branches, but has developed more and more into a clearing-house for information dealing with the book resources of both the circulation and the reference departments. Many requests received at the office are not for definite titles, but rather for books on certain subjects, some of these requests involving a considerable amount of investigation; as, for example, calls for "Books in German or French on how to make an electric motor for a flying machine," "Books on how to edit a technical magazine," and "Any book giving an account of the different modes of travel between the sixteenth and twentieth centuries." The staff of the interbranch loan office is responsible for placing at the disposal of such readers books drawn from the entire resources of the circulation department that are best adapted to meet these special needs, and this must be done through the use of the union catalogue at the central office without the opportunity of dealing directly with the readers concerned, or of examining the books themselves. Again, many requests for presumably definite titles are difficult to identify, and often require considerable ingenuity for their solution; such as a request for a book entitled "He sings of his father," which turned out to be Thomas Dixon's "Sins of the father;" another for a book by Corley entitled "Ross of Duchess," which was intended for "Rose of Dutcher's Coolly" by Hamlin Garland; and a simpler request, but illustrative of common errors, calling for "Tess of Harbor Hill," which was, of course, intended for "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" by Thomas Hardy.

The difficulty experienced by the staff of the interbranch loan office in dealing indirectly with readers has been obviated to a great extent by the development of close coöperation with the assistants in charge of this work at the branches; and a net result of seventy-five per cent. of the total requests in 1913 satisfactorily filled through the interbranch loan system testifies to its present efficiency.

Table XVII in the appendix classifies the requests for books through the interbranch loan system and shows the general extent of the field thus covered. Of the total number of books requested during the past year, 11,989, or about thirteen per cent., were not in any branch, and upon investigation many of these were found to represent books out of print, or never written; or, oftener, books and articles of a character that rendered them unsuitable for use in the circulation department. About one third of the number were in the collection of the reference department and readers requesting them were promptly referred to the special divisions of this department where they could be consulted. A limited number which proved upon examination to be desirable for circulation were immediately purchased.

As usual, a number of lists of books on special subjects were compiled in the interbranch loan office in response to requests from readers, seventy being issued during the past year as follows: philosophy, 2; sociology, 12; philology, 1; natural science, 3; useful arts, 25; fine arts, 9; literature, 1; travel, 5; biography, 3; history, 3; fiction, 1; Russian, 1; Finnish, 1; modern Greek, 1; Polish, 1; and Dutch, 1.

Registration

At all the branches 135,377 persons, of whom 72,618 were adults and 62,759 were children, received borrowers' cards. This is a decrease of 4,595 as compared with the registration recorded in 1912, due to the fact that most of the branches which commenced re-registration in 1911 with the establishment of the central registration office completed this work before the present year. The registration during 1913 therefore represents new readers and indicates an actual increase in library borrowers. The total number of applications received, according to the record of the central registration office, was 174,856.

The heaviest registration was in the Central Circulation branch, in the main building, where 12,800 new readers applied for borrowers' cards. Branches in The Bronx, which is rapidly growing in population, reported heavy registration, the Morrisania branch leading with 7,500 new readers and the Tremont branch following closely with 5,560 new readers. The Seward Park branch still leads all other branches in the system, except the Central Circulation branch, with a new registration of 8,892 during 1913. Other branches in the same general locality — on the lower east side of Manhattan — reporting heavy registration were Hamilton Fish Park with 5,235 applications, Rivington Street with 4,251, and Tompkins Square with 3,718.

Of the total number of applications received, 4,278 were for the new form of "special" card entitling the borrower to extra privileges in the use of books, as described in the report for 1912. This card, issued experimentally in combination form to take the place of the two cards formerly used separately, has proved entirely satisfactory, and has done away with much of the confusion which formerly attended the use of the two separate forms.

Central Circulation [1]

The close of 1913 brings the work of the Central Circulation branch to a very interesting and stimulating juncture. The book collection has been considerably strengthened; the public have been quick to seize upon the larger resources placed at their disposal; and the work of the branch has broadened both in scope and volume.

The increase in circulation has therefore been marked. The total number of volumes issued during the year was 344,130, a gain of 68,224 over the circulation of 1912. This gain was most noticeable during the later months of the year, and may be attributed to the large number of books added to the collection during that time. The greatest monthly increase, 10,582, occurred in December.

The most encouraging feature of these circulation figures lies in the high quality of reading which they represent. The average percentage of fiction is less than 43 per cent.; and in December, when the number of books issued was largest, the fiction percentage dropped to its lowest figure, 41 per cent. The classes of books for which the demand is most noteworthy are philosophy, sociology, poetry and drama, art, and biography.

[1] The statements in this report are all exclusive of the work of the Children's Room, which is noted elsewhere.

During the year 12,800 persons applied for borrowers' cards, an average of 40 per day. This brings the total number of registered readers up to 39,165. The public represented by these figures, with the books they require, furnish at the same time the most powerful stimulus to effort, and the greatest cause for satisfaction in the work of the library. In the requests of readers may be discovered that contact with the deepest and most vital intellectual life of the city, which it is within the province of the library to establish and foster. The man in public life comes for books on banking, finance, social experiments in this and other countries, questions of governmental policy. The engineer studies subway construction, systems of sewerage in large cities, the building of bridges. The artist, the writer, and the journalist draw constantly upon the library's resources, to transmute the knowledge thus acquired into the life and thought of the day. The moving picture manager, studying the pleasure and wishes of the greater public, asks for works on Washington, Lincoln, or other historical figures; or on the life of insects, plants, and animals. Outside of the professions stand a host of lovers of literature and the arts, readers for culture solely.

Although the branch was designed primarily for the circulation of books for home use, a large proportion of the public have enjoyed the easy access to the shelves which the room affords, and have used it as a reading room. The business man with a free hour in the middle of the day or evening has taken advantage of the opportunity to browse among the books, returning in many cases day after day to find a favorite work. On Sundays, when the branch is open from two to six in the afternoon, this type of reader is even more evident. The number of such readers during the year was 226,551, an average of 621 per day, and an increase of 41,991 over the attendance in 1912. On Sunday afternoons the average attendance has been 289.

The book collection on the open shelves now numbers 35,165 volumes, of which 10,230 were added during the past year. This is supplemented by the Central Reserve Collection of 54,700 volumes, shelved in the adjoining stack, and by daily loans from the branches.

Sunday and Holiday Opening

The total attendance for fifty-two Sundays at the six branches in which the reading rooms were kept open on Sunday afternoons from two to six was 41,723, divided as follows: Rivington Street, 16,065; Tompkins Square, 4,082; Ottendorfer, 2,684; Muhlenberg, 3,256; Central Circulation, 14,047; 58th Street, 1,589. Thus the Sunday attendance shows a gain of 2,599 over the record for 1912. The Central Circulation branch, included in the list, was open as usual on Sundays for circulation as well as for reading.

The circulation on holidays at the branches is indicated in table XV on page 313. Branches in Carnegie buildings and the Central Circulation branch in the main building were open full hours on all legal holidays as stipulated in the contract with the City; branches in other buildings were open only part-time on certain holidays in accordance with the custom of previous years.

Reading Rooms

Reading-room attendance is one of the few phases of the Library's activities to show a decrease, and yet interesting experiments are being tried here, such as increasing the number of branches in which the hour of evening closing is 10 o'clock, instead of 9.

The total attendance in the reading-rooms for adults at the branches was 1,091,616, a loss of 34,527 as compared with the attendance reported for the previous year. Continuing arrangements made in 1912, the third-floor reading rooms in the St. Gabriel's Park, Columbus, and 67th Street branches were not open to the public during the past year on account of the very limited demand for such facilities in these districts. It has been found that the few readers can be accommodated to better advantage in these branches on the main circulation floors, to which the magazines and newspapers have been moved.

By far the best use of reading rooms is reported from branches located in congested districts on the lower east side of Manhattan. Reading room facilities in these branches are particularly valuable in view of the fact that a large majority of the readers are students who have few opportunities elsewhere for quiet reading and study. In recognition of this need the department has for several years arranged to keep the reading rooms in two of the larger branches on the lower east side open until ten o'clock at night, one hour after the usual hour of closing. In the fall of this year two more branches, Seward Park and Hamilton Fish Park, were included in this arrangement. During the year, 14,541 readers availed themselves of this additional hour at the four branches, coming in between nine and ten o'clock at night. Of these Seward Park and Hamilton Fish Park, the two branches recently opened for an extra hour, reported 299 and 148 respectively; Rivington Street, 12,549 and Tompkins Square, 1,545.

At three of these branches roof reading rooms for use in summer are provided. The total attendance at these was 41,323. For detailed figures see the table on p. 324 of the appendix.

Work for the Blind

The question of Helen Keller, "Hast thou seen thought bloom in a blind child's face?" suggests the stimulus and the satisfaction of the work for the blind. The numbers given below, while gratifying in themselves, stand for a greater degree of service rendered than the same figures could indicate for those with sight.

The Library for the Blind has circulated 23,325 volumes, an increase of 1,387 over 1912, its record year; 19,826 of these volumes were sent out by mail, 717 by express. 8,918 volumes were borrowed by residents of Greater New York. Of the 806 active readers during the year, 516 were from the city, 290 from New York State and elsewhere, as follows: New Jersey, 92; New York State (outside of Greater New York), 63; Connecticut, 31; Massachusetts, 18; Illinois and Pennsylvania, 8 each; Louisiana, Michigan, and Missouri, 5 each; Maryland, Minnesota, and North Carolina, 4 each; Georgia, New Hampshire, Ohio, and Rhode Island, 3 each; Arkansas, Indiana, Maine, Oklahoma, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, D. C., West Virginia, and Wisconsin, 2 each; Alabama, California, Florida, Iowa, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, and Washington, 1 each.

Applicants from beyond the states of New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut have always been referred first to local collections and are served only when these are exhausted. Public libraries owning embossed books are generous where circumstances permit; but such collections are few, the material published is in four different types, and it happens, for example, that a reader living in the shadow of a library strong in American Braille may very much desire to send elsewhere for books in other types. Such service would be impossible were it not for the federal law which permits embossed reading matter to be sent free by mail under certain conditions.

The circulation when classified by type shows that the New York point continues to lead in popularity. The largest proportionate gain was made in the circulation of American Braille books and of Braille music. The 23,325 volumes circulated are divided as follows: New York point, 8,192; European Braille, 5,490; Moon type, 4,751; American Braille, 2,840; New York point music, 1,383; Braille music, 569.

The aid that a library may give toward increasing the efficiency of those who use it is well illustrated by the lending of embossed music scores. The material, though inexpensive, can be bought from only three or four centers in America — New York City is not one of these. It is used chiefly by those who have found in music a source of self-support, and ready access to a good collection is as necessary to them as other tools to other workmen. And music, certainly to those who must necessarily memorize it, becomes often a permanent possession.

ONE DAY'S CIRCULATION OF BOOKS FOR THE BLIND
FRANKED THROUGH THE MAIL UNDER THE FEDERAL LAW

The fact that European Braille was recommended as the basis for a standard type by the Uniform Type Committee in its report of June, 1913, has aroused considerable interest, and alphabets have been in demand. From the point of view of a public library, some definite result from the efforts of this Uniform Type Committee is a thing devoutly to be wished. In a community which demands material in all systems of typography, funds which might otherwise be spent in printing, are now used in the duplication of titles. A survey of the situation shows that though much has been done toward creating a body of tangible literature, the number of titles available is exceedingly limited. It requires only a little imagination to apply Commissioner Claxton's phrase, "Books for those who need them most," to a people deprived of so much else.

The interest of the public in the work of this room is unabating. Children, usually in groups, comprise a large number of the visitors. They never fail to be delightfully interested and one can always see their horizon lift a little when they realize that their familiar letters can be expressed in such unfamiliar forms.

Apparently, no visitors of the year enjoyed their visit to the Library more than the chapter of the blind boy scouts who came from the Lighthouse for the Blind by special invitation. They were taken over various parts of the building, gaining thereby some realizing sense of its physical size and various activities.

Gifts to an unusual number have been received. Helen Keller, as one having authority, expresses an appreciation of such thoughtfulness when she says, "Every one who helps to furnish books will help to make the blind happy and resourceful beneath the shadow of an irreparable calamity."

The total number of volumes added was 713, of which 65 were printed in American Braille, 120 in European Braille, 18 in ink print, 2 in line letter, 299 in Moon type, and 209 in New York point. The music scores added were 203 in number, 116 in Braille and 87 in New York point. As there were 138 volumes and music scores discarded during the year, the total number of volumes and music scores is 10,850. This total includes 4,338 music scores, of which 1,045 are in Braille, 3,292 in New York point, and 1 in line letter; and 6,512 volumes, classified by type as follows: American Braille, 1,079; European Braille, 896; ink print, 51; line letter, 305; miscellaneous, 31; Moon type, 1,847, and New York point, 2,303.

A complete catalogue of books, a supplementary list of music scores, and a revised edition of the handbook descriptive of the library's work for the blind have been issued. By far the most important list, however, is the first instalment of the embossed catalogue received very recently from the press. It is a list printed in New York point and containing the titles of books embossed in that type. As the Library owns a complete collection of such books, its catalogue represents all the reading matter available in New York point and, embossed lists being rare, the popularity of this up-to-date one is easily understood. It is for sale at a nominal price and requests for it are coming from all parts of the United States and also from Canada.

An American Braille list of American material is in preparation. The Library plans to print its complete catalogue with supplementary lists, in embossed characters. This is done at the earnest request of the readers.

The teacher employed to instruct the adult blind of New York City in reading has made 619 visits, given 448 lessons, and exchanged 368 books.

Travelling Libraries

From a collection of 76,421 volumes, there have been issued during the past year 919,159 volumes, an increase of 98,045 volumes over the circulation of 1912. The total number of stations served by this office was 934, a gain of 40 during the year. This increase has been rather evenly distributed throughout the various activities of the department.

A summarized statement of the principal agencies through which books from travelling libraries were issued, together with the record of circulation in each division, is as follows: Department of Education, including elementary and high schools, evening recreation and social centers, and vacation playgrounds, 347,141; Fire department, 39,859; Police department, 12,382; parochial schools, 104,975; academies and high schools (Catholic), 26,038; industrial schools, 101,720; other corporate schools, 4,412; private schools, 11,735; community libraries, 81,192; business stations, 62,982; study clubs, 3,483; Sunday schools, 8,045; Young Men's Christian Association, 1,852; Young Women's Christian Association, 7,396; home libraries, 14,789; asylums and charitable institutions, 15,240.

The largest increase in any part of the work is found in the parochial school and academy libraries, this activity being a continuation and extension of that noted last year. There has been a natural and steady growth in the use of these class-room libraries from their beginning. Supplementary reading, principally along the lines indicated by the Regents of the State of New York, is in constant demand.

Twenty-nine public schools have taken advantage of the opportunity to borrow class-room libraries, one school alone being supplied with 1,160 books, besides 68 picture books sent to its kindergarten. Books are supplied to all high schools in Manhattan and The Bronx and to the Manhattan Trade School for Girls and the Murray Hill Evening Trade School. As the attendance at evening elementary schools is transient, few books have been requested and those sent to evening high schools have been confined to The Bronx.

From individual teachers there have been numerous requests for books on pedagogy, as well as for class-room libraries. One principal, recently appointed to a school in The Bronx, states that he feels that his advancement is due in large measure to assistance which travelling library books have afforded him. As both elementary and high school teacher, he has been a constant borrower through the travelling libraries office.

Evening recreation and social centers, of which there are a number in Manhattan, The Bronx, and Richmond, depend upon travelling library books for their reading matter, with the exception of the current magazines furnished by the Board of Education. To each center are sent fifty books of a miscellaneous character, enclosed in a glass-front case for display and safe-keeping. Sixty-three playgrounds have been supplied with the usual fifty-book library, a few making application for an additional set.

The circulation of 39,859 volumes to the Fire department of the city and of 12,382 to the Police department, an increase of 11,159 and 5,336 respectively, speaks for the appreciation of the opportunity furnished by the Library for technical and recreational reading. The men are urged to send in special requestsand nearly all of theseare for non-fiction, engineering being the most popular subject among the firemen and books on civics among the police. In the police stations a reference collection of five books on the work of the police is kept continuously, the books for circulation being changed every two months.

Twenty-six "community libraries" in the three boroughs have been supplied with travelling library books, with a resulting circulation of 81,192. These "community libraries" are situated usually in outlying districts. A neighborhood committee meets the cost of administration. This volunteer effort is often the forerunner of a regularly established branch.

The "home library" is situated for the most part in the poorer districts of the city and in outlying sections beyond the radius of the library branches. It is a collection, consisting usually of ten books, circulated among neighbors by a volunteer, who records the use of the books and is responsible for their return. In order to avoid duplication, each request for a new station receives careful consideration as to its proximity to a branch library. Owing to the opening of new branches, many stations included in this report are being discontinued, thus enabling the department to extend its activities into other outlying districts.

A growing number of factories are being supplied with collections of books for circulation among their employees. The West Side Young Men's Christian Association, through its Industrial department, has been instrumental in establishing libraries in several of the large centers of industry, such as the De La Vergne Machine Company, the Otis Elevator Company, and others, where the sets of books are frequently exchanged. The Third Avenue Railroad Company and the Interborough Rapid Transit Company maintain a number of recreation rooms throughout the city for their employees, the travelling libraries office supplying these with small sets of books which are changed at regular intervals. Certain manufacturing establishments regularly receive libraries containing several hundreds of books, a large proportion in foreign languages, by means of which workers not yet familiar with the English language are made acquainted with the opportunities offered by the public library. This introduction eventually leads to the reading of books in English. A large number of factories and commercial houses have extended their demand for books on business efficiency, one station receiving practically all that can be secured.

A teachers' study club on Staten Island, composed of a group of teachers preparing for an examination for principalship, reports a circulation of 705 from a collection of 120 educational books. The club members expressed appreciation of the privilege, claiming that without it they would have failed to make adequate preparation for the examination. Certain study clubs depend upon the Library to suggest and furnish material covering their subjects, others sending in the exact list of books needed.

The selection of books for the various collections is receiving very careful attention, there being no "made-up libraries." Increasing requests for books covering special subjects, such as sociology, poetry, literature, and art, have come from Columbia University, the Bureau of Municipal Research, the Public Service Commission, the Division of Political Science of New York University, and similar sources. In most cases these requests have been met, many books of a standard and permanent character having been added by purchase, others being supplied from the branches through the interbranch loan division of the library.

Worn books to the number of 9,285 have been sent to 67 institutions, including hospitals for contagious diseases, prisons, recruiting stations, newsboys' homes, etc. On Blackwell's Island these books are under the supervision of Mr. Frederick W. Jenkins who, through the Prison Association Committee, co-operates with the prison authorities in making sure that the prisoners have full use of the privilege. A visit to the Bedford Reformatory showed several hundreds of these books in suitable cases throughout the buildings, all accessible to the inmates and in great demand by them.

Other places in which the travelling libraries have been maintained are too numerous for special report. A detailed list, giving the name of each station and the number of volumes circulated, will be found on pages 328 to 340.

Work with Children

The year 1913 has brought some of the intensive features of the work with children to the period of fruition. The book exhibits, the story clubs, and the spontaneous co-operative relations between the Library and other institutions have contributed strength as well as variety and interest to both circulation and reference use of books in children's rooms throughout the system.

The opening of the West 40th Street branch in October has given to the children of the George Bruce and St. Raphael branches a spacious and attractive children's room. The children's room of the George Bruce branch dates from 1889 and was one of the first rooms set apart for the use of children by the New York Free Circulating Library. The children's work at this branch was reorganized and the room was refurnished in 1907. The St. Raphael branch consisted of but one small room in rented quarters, with special shelves for children's books. The interests of children were given special consideration at this branch and there passes from it to the new branch the fine effect of years of devoted service. The opportunities for constructive work of a very interesting character are already revealed in the children's room of the West 40th Street branch.

The selection of books for the Melrose, Woodstock, Washington Heights, and Fort Washington branches was made during the spring and summer months. A committee of children's librarians was appointed to aid the Supervisor and her assistant in this work. A central reserve stock of children's books has been established, which bids fair to become of much use as it grows in number by transfer from branch collections and by additions to meet the needs in the story telling and the school work. The shortage of the supply of books and the worn-out condition of the collections for circulation in busy branches have led to a thorough inspection of the available resources. The importance of large and continuous additions cannot be too strongly urged as the greatest need of 1914. A general building up of book collections is needed at branches where the circulation use has been declining for a considerable period of time, and an increase of twenty-five per cent. of book stock is needed at each of the ten branches reporting the heaviest circulating use.

The circulation from children's rooms was 3,006,603 volumes. In 1912 it was 2,959,044. (The figures given do not include the circulation to children through travelling libraries.) The circulation of books from children's rooms represents more than one third of the total circulation.

There have been added to the book collections 76,229 volumes, as compared with 57,447 in 1912. Of this number 24 were added to the reference collections through the office of the Supervisor of Work with Schools. Since May 1, however, all of the additions to reference collections have been made through the office of the Supervisor of Work with Children.

The total number of volumes shelved in children's rooms is 226,930. In 1912 the number was 209,403. Of the 1913 stock 29,265 are for reference and reading use within the buildings. In 1912 the number of books in reference and reading rooms was 25,637. As the 11,289 volumes reported for the Melrose and Woodstock branches are not yet in circulation, the increase in the number of volumes available is very small in comparison with the demand.

The number of children coming into the rooms and making use of the collections for reference or reading was 1,276,585. In 1912 it was 1,229,067. With this branch of the work the limitations are those of space and skilled assistants. The book supply is ample for present needs and the use of children's books in the Library is increasingly appreciated by children and by grown people who are working in the interest of children.

The collection in the Central Children's Room is used increasingly both for circulation and for reference and reading. The distinctive feature in the work of the room has been a series of exhibits of books and pictures relating to special subjects. In February and March the subject was Heroism, with the polar discoveries as a center of timely interest. At Easter a springtime exhibit included wild flowers as well as pictures and books, and the recent death of Boutet de Monvel rendered the use of framed illustrations from his "Filles et Garçons" and "Nos Enfants" peculiarly appropriate. "Vacation days in foreign lands" was enjoyed by many children and grown people who were preparing to go abroad, and gave great pleasure to the European visitors who came to the room during the summer. Some Norwegian visitors who were pleased to find Norway represented in this exhibit sent a generous gift of illustrated books for children at Christmas time.

An exhibit of children's books and their illustrators preceded the Holiday Exhibit, which was held as in 1912 during the month of December. The addition of some illustrations in color taken from the books of Carl Larson and Elsa Beskow and of some snow scenes by the Bohemian artist Šimon gave color and atmosphere, and the exhibit itself was used more extensively than last year.

A Holiday Exhibit was held at the St. George branch and small exhibits were shown at many of the branches during the year. With variations and additions the subjects mentioned bid fair to be of perennial interest in the Central Children's Room and at the branches.

A 1913 supplement was added to the "Holiday books for boys and girls" printed in 1912. An annotated list on Heroism has been worked upon during the year with the expectation of printing it to accompany the exhibit in 1914. Other reading lists are in preparation.

A regular story hour has been started for the children in the Central Children's Room, who are enthusiastic in their appreciation.

The visits of classes from the public schools have been extended at the request of principals and teachers and the resources of both reference and circulation collections are being severely taxed by this growing demand. Some very interesting reference work was made possible by the presence of a second children's librarian at the Seward Park branch during the fall and early winter.

The story telling and the club work under the direction of the assistant in charge of story telling have been very considerably extended.

SPRINGTIME EXHIBIT OF BOOKS AND PICTURES, CENTRAL CHILDREN'S ROOM

366a

Regular weekly or monthly story hours for little children and for boys and girls below the ages of twelve or fourteen years are held wherever the available seating space and library service are equal to the growing demand.

Picture-book story hours have furnished a happy solution to the problem presented by the "Little Mothers" who are obliged to bring their younger brothers and sisters with them in order to enjoy the privileges of the Library. A foundation is thus laid for a later appreciation of good art in story and song as well as in pictorial form. Familiarity with Randolph Caldecott and Kate Greenaway, with Boutet de Monvel and Leslie Brooke, with Walter Crane and Elsa Beskow beget associations and imaginative conceptions that will remain through life.

Fairy and folk tales, poetry, and occasional history and biographical stories are chiefly used in the general story hours. Among the most popular collections of stories and poems in use at these story hours are Joseph Jacobs' "English Fairy tales" and "Celtic Fairy tales," Edmund Leamy's "The Golden Spears," Anne Macdonnell's "The Italian Fairy book," and Mrs. Steele's "Tales of the Punjab." There is a growing appreciation of poetry, and many selections have been read from Longfellow, Tennyson, Kipling, and Alfred Noyes, as well as from the "Posy Ring" and "Golden Numbers," and from nursery rhymes and nonsense verses.

The clubs for older boys and girls which have grown out of the story hours have now attained a distinct life of their own. At the end of five years some of these clubs retain a strong original membership and at the end of even one year several clubs are reported as contributing definitely to the general development of children's work by the effectiveness of their recommendations of books to younger boys and girls, by their respect for the library building and its property, and by their personal interest in the work of the librarians. There are 37 clubs at the present time. Each club is under the direction of a club leader, who works in co-operation with the assistant in charge of story telling.

A typical programme is that for the spring meeting of the Girls' Club of the Stapleton branch: 1. Prologue, Spring; 2. Mrs. Leicester's School; 3. The Village Green, a poem by Ann and Jane Taylor; 4. Two scenes from Cranford. This was the final meeting of the season and consisted of a series of simple tableaux arranged by the girls to introduce favorite poems or characters in books they had enjoyed together during the winter. An exhibit of books and pictures relating to springtime was arranged to accompany this programme and proved of much interest to the community for a number of weeks afterward.

The Atalanta Club and the Minerva Literary Society of the Port Richmond branch gave some interesting biographical and historical programmes. These clubs also supplied the children's room with flowers and held regular story hours for younger children during the summer.

The Waverley Club of the Hamilton Grange branch listened with such keen interest to the rendering of the Walkürie as to lead to the telling of the entire cycle of Wagner opera stories by the members in turn and to a strong desire to see and hear the operas for themselves.

The Greenwich Village Literary Club is the name proudly bestowed upon their club by a group of boys of the Hudson Park branch. This is a self-governing club. The boys arrange their own programmes and usually invite the club adviser to contribute a story. The programme arranged for Edgar Allan Poe was worked up with great enthusiasm and reflected genuine interest and some literary appreciation on the part of the boys, who are chiefly Italians from thirteen to fifteen years old. One boy gave an account of the author's life, another read the "Raven," a third told in outline the story of "The Tell Tale Heart," and the story teller told "The Pit and the Pendulum."

The Seward Literary Club is composed of Jewish boys who have met together for three years at the Seward Park branch to exchange reviews of books they are reading, to tell stories, and to hold occasional debates. The interest aroused by the James Fenimore Cooper evening was so strong that one boy bought a set of Cooper from his own earnings. Stories have been told from Poe's Tales, from Mark Twain and Bret Harte, and some excellent story tellers have been discovered among the members.

Radiopticons are now installed in several branches and occasional illustrated talks have been given to the various clubs on the Panama Canal, New York City, the Yellowstone Park, Mark Twain's country — the Mississippi Valley, and the Italian festival called the Pallio, held yearly at Siena. That these travel talks do not take the place of the story hours, although usually given by the story teller, is illustrated by the lingering of a few of the boys after the others had gone while one of them said: "This has been fine, but please don't cut out your stories. We want them."

Regular story hours have been held in the German language at the St. Agnes and Yorkville branches and in the Bohemian language at the Webster branch. During the summer the Chatham Square and Columbus branches co-operated actively with the settlements and vacation playgrounds in their respective neighborhoods. Story hours were held at the Jacob Riis Settlement, at the vacation playgrounds of Public Schools 177, 84, and 58, at De Witt Clinton Park, and on two of the recreation piers. Informal story hours were held in children's rooms, on the roof reading rooms, and on the lawn at the High Bridge branch.

Requests from school principals and teachers to send classes to listen to stories in the libraries and for library story tellers to visit the schools have been so constantly and insistently urged that a considerable number of such story hours have been held during the year; on the day before Christmas three story hours were held at school assemblies numbering a thousand children. At the request of the principal of Public School 64 a story hour was held at the school for the teachers of the third, fourth, and fifth grades. Groups of children from these grades were then sent to the Tompkins Square branch once a month to listen to stories, the group being accompanied by a single teacher. Similar meetings have been held at other public schools.

An interesting class of boys from an evening school in the neighborhood of the Webster branch has visited the branch once a month to listen to a story and to gain facility in the use of the library. A collection of books selected with reference to the stories to be told was sent from the Travelling Libraries office to the school. Some of the stories told were "The Great Locomotive Chase," a story of the Civil War by William Pittenger, and Mark Twain's "The Jumping Frog" and "The Golden Arm." The radiopticon has been used and on the evening the pictures of New York City were shown, O. Henry's "After Twenty Years" was told, to the great delight of the boys.

Assistance has been given in the formation of some clubs for girls under the auspices of the Riverdale Library Association.

The total number of regular story hours reported from forty branches during 1913 is 1,929; the total attendance is 45,618. In 1912 it was 38,147. Full statistics including stories told at the settlements, summer playgrounds, public schools, and informally in the libraries are not obtainable. The figures above relate only to the small groups usually assembled in a space seating from twenty to thirty children. The small groups, it is believed, preserve the informality and intimacy of the story hour.

Meetings for the assistants who have told stories under the direction of the assistant in charge of story telling have been held as usual. One of the story tellers summed up the advantages of these meetings in the following words: "The three things which stand out as most helpful in the work are the discussion of story selection and story preparation which takes place at the first meeting of each year; the long period of reading source material, including the best translations and books which have the atmosphere of the story; and finally, the hearing of representative stories told by Miss Tyler and other assistants." The final meeting of the year takes the form of a symposium at which a selected number of assistants tell in turn stories with which they have held the interest of group after group of children during the year. The stories are selected to show from what varied sources stories may be drawn and to illustrate the best ways of presenting them. The stories were told without a trace of self-consciousness and with very evident enjoyment on the part of the story teller.

Special experience and supervised practice have been arranged as heretofore, and the staff of children's librarians and assistants has been strengthened by appointments from other libraries and library schools as well as by growth within the service.

The work of the children's rooms for the year 1913 is partly shown by Table XVIII in the statistical appendix.

Work with Schools

The method of carrying on work with schools has undergone a material modification during 1913.

The supervisor of work with schools has been relieved of substantially all routine or detail work, but has continued to exercise a general oversight over the relations between the Library and the various educational institutions of the city. The selection and purchase of books for the use of teachers have been merged into the general scheme of book selection and purchase, the statistical part of the work has been assigned to the statistical clerk, and the reference use of the Library by elementary school children and all other work with school children have been placed entirely under the direction of the supervisor of work with children.

The relations between the schools and the Library and its branches grow more cordial from year to year, and it is felt that there has never been a better understanding than at present.

The reference collections which were established at fourteen branches in connection with history courses at Normal College have been continued and enlarged. The same collection of historical works has also been added to the Melrose and Woodstock branches. In addition, there has been added to these sixteen branches an excellent set of works for the use of the students of the department of pedagogy of Normal College; thus every student at the college is virtually required to make systematic and continual use of the branch libraries throughout her college life.

Slight changes have been made from time to time in the reference collections established in the children's rooms. These are now under the direction of the supervisor of work with children.

The work of the branches with the public high schools has continued and increased. One of the results of the conference held in 1912 with the librarians of the high schools, has been a much greater use of the branch libraries for reference purposes by high school pupils.

The school assistants at the branch libraries have continued their systematic series of visits to all of the schools of their several districts.

Other Activities

During the past year, co-operation with local educational, literary, and welfare societies has been strengthened through a growing use of the assembly and club rooms in branch buildings by various organizations for regular meeting-places. The Library is being increasingly recognized by these organizations as a logical place of meeting, the mutual relationship proving a helpful stimulus.

One of the most encouraging features of the year's work and one most significant of the growing influence of the Library in neighborhood affairs is the active part taken by the branches in the work of neighborhood associations in various sections of the city, such as that of Hudson Park and Jackson Square in Greenwich Village, Muhlenberg in Chelsea, Aguilar in South Harlem, 135th Street in St. Nicholas Park, Yorkville in the Yorkville Community, and Riverside in a recently organized neighborhood association not yet named. Co-operation through the medium of child welfare exhibits has been reported in the section devoted to advertising.

Among the activities of previous years which have been continued and extended are the meetings of the Boy Scouts of America, the City history clubs, and various foreign societies, and the classes for foreigners under the auspices of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations. Two medical societies, the Yorkville Medical Society and the Medical Society of the County of New York, have this year begun holding their regular meetings in the Yorkville and 58th Street branches respectively.

Two branches have celebrated the anniversaries of their openings: Hamilton Fish on February 27 and 115th Street on November 7. Appropriate programmes were prepared for the people of the neighborhood.

In common with other libraries throughout the state, the branches of the department were designated by the Division of Visual Instruction of the New York State Education Department as agencies for the distribution to individuals, societies, churches, and local organizations of lantern slides on various educational subjects for public lecture purposes. A number of institutions have availed themselves of this privilege, applying at the branches for lantern slides on a wide variety of subjects, including the Panama Canal, New York City, Washington, Yellowstone Park, Robert Burns and the Burns country, natural and artificial ice, birds, flowers, Bermuda, Scotland, West Indies, Philippine Islands, Arizona, California, Colorado, British Isles, Iceland, England, and New York State.

In January a systematic effort was made to collect and preserve negatives of photographs of branch libraries and of various activities carried on in them and at the main building. This collection now numbers 561, including 155 which have recently been added, showing the five new libraries in course of construction during 1913, from which various articles published in the periodical press have been illustrated. From them have been printed pictures for exhibition at the National Education Association and at various other teachers' and librarians' conventions, prints being furnished also to libraries in many parts of the world.

With the negatives as a foundation, it has been possible to make a collection of 449 stereopticon slides, which is of unusual scope and interest, illustrating the Library's history, development, and present activities, from the small branches of the various library corporations before consolidation with The New York Public Library to exterior and interior views of practically all of the branch libraries of today.

During the year twenty-seven lantern slide lectures have been given, involving the use of 1,387 slides. Eight of these lectures were delivered to audiences at various branch libraries, four before various library schools, five public lectures of the Child Welfare Committee, and seven under various auspices. A stereopticon with excellent equipment has been installed at the central library, and radiopticons or stereopticons have been placed in six branches.

A complete list of meetings held at the various branches (exclusive of lectures to classes and groups from the public schools and clubs under the supervision of the Library) is given in the appendix at p. 325.

Publications

In the issue of department publications, the past year has been one of unusual activity; over 90,000 copies of special lists, not including the regular issue of the "Monthly list of additions," have been printed for public distribution. Among these should first be mentioned the "Selected list of books on engineering, industrial arts, and trades," containing over two thousand titles of technical books listed under twenty main divisions of technology, which was prepared by the chief of the technology division of the reference department. This list includes only the more recent technical books in the department, none issued earlier than 1906 being mentioned. Five thousand copies were printed and sent to the branches for free distribution to readers.

To meet the rapidly increasing demand for short lists of books on special technical subjects, the department issued in leaflet form, in editions of 2,500 copies each, twenty-seven separate lists containing titles reprinted from the main list, on the following subjects: aeronautics, automobiles, building specifications, concrete and concrete construction, dynamos and motors, electric lighting, electric transmission, electric bells, electric wiring, fireproofing, foundry practice, gas, oil, and air engines, machine design and mechanical drawing, machine shop and tools, marine engineering and shipbuilding, masonry and stone cutting, paper manufacture, printing, sanitary engineering, steam engineering, surveying, technical and vocational education, telegraphy, textile industries, water supply, wireless telegraphy and telephony, woodworking and carpentry.

In connection with a course of nine lectures given at The Metropolitan Museum of Art during the winter and spring, a short annotated list of books on "Ancient, mediaeval, renaissance, and modern art" was issued. Fifteen thousand copies were printed for distribution in the lecture hall and from the branches.

Other special publications, not mentioned elsewhere in the report of this department, included a list of "Current periodicals on file at the branches," a "List of current guide books at the branches," a "List of serial reference books at the branches," and a "List of newspapers on file at the branches."

The "Monthly list of additions" [1] has continued publication in its usual form as a classified list of current accessions to the department. It is now in its thirteenth volume. An edition of 23,500 was printed every month except July and August, when 16,000 copies were issued. Of these a large part went to the branches for public distribution and a smaller number were mailed to other libraries and institutions.

Official publications for the staff issued during the past year included the manual of "Rules and instructions for branch librarians and assistants," and a smaller manual reprinted from the same under the title "Rules for desk assistants," as described in the report for 1912.

Advertising

The method of advertising the Library through the distribution of circulars, as described at length in the report for 1912, has been continued. In most instances the text quoted below has been found satisfactory as a general form for these circulars, although slight changes in the wording, particularly in the statement regarding books in foreign languages, are made to meet local conditions at the different branches. The circulars are printed in quantity for individual branches as occasion demands, with the name and address of the branch at the head. The text is as follows:

Do YOU KNOW the free public library in your neighborhood?

Are you a member of it?

If not, visit it as soon as possible and see what advantages it offers you.

There are books for the student who wishes to educate himself; for the worker anxious to qualify for a better position; for the housekeeper and home-maker; for one who wishes to read or study books in foreign languages; and, finally, for every man or woman who loves the entertaining companionship of a good book.

You are one of these; the library is for you; come and make use of it.

The handbook of the Library entitled "Facts for the public," first issued in 1910, has met many demands for general information. This handbook describes briefly the book collections, special resources, and various activities of the Library, and the privileges offered to the public, and contains a directory of offices and branches. A third edition of sixty thousand copies, illustrated with photographs showing the different phases of the work, is in press at the close of the year.

An unusual opportunity for library advertising was afforded by the active participation of eight branches in a series of local child welfare exhibits held in different sections of the city under the auspices of the New York Child Welfare Association. On each occasion the neighboring branches sent to the exhibit small collections of attractive books for children, including books on how to do and make things, and a few selected titles for mothers on the care of children. In certain localities books in foreign languages, particularly in Yiddish, Russian, and Italian, were exhibited to indicate the provision made by the Library for foreigners. In connection with the books, picture bulletins were posted and reading lists distributed, and as often as possible in the afternoons and evenings an assistant from the branch was present to give added information concerning the Library. To illustrate two phases of library extension work, the Travelling Libraries office contributed a typical "home library" of ten volumes with its case, and the Library for the Blind a small collection of embossed letter charts, books, and music.

These exhibits were well attended and the library section rarely failed to arouse interest on the part of both children and adults. The net result of such advertising is difficult to measure, but in a number of instances librarians of branches in neighborhoods directly reached by the exhibits reported a definite response on the part of residents in the more intelligent use of the Library.

Decoration

The advertising just noted has for its object arousing popular interest and attracting readers to the branches; the decorating of the branches, to be noted, has an equally important aim, that of increasing the attractiveness of the rooms, thus helping to hold the readers gained.

It has been possible during the past year to continue the purchase of pictures and other decorations for the branches from funds generously donated for the purpose by friends of the Library. A number of excellent pictures have thus been acquired, and several engravings of particular merit by Brangwyn, Haig, Heimer, Slocum, and others; also numerous carbon prints and colored reproductions of famous paintings, these latter being for use generally in the children's rooms. A series of thirteen illustrations in color from the Nibelungen pictures by Hermann Hendrich, which was painted for the Wagner centenary in 1913, has been purchased for the St. Agnes branch. For many of the branches vases, jardinières, potted plants, and window-boxes have been purchased, adding greatly to the attractiveness of the public rooms and calling forth much favorable comment on the part of readers. Many needs are still unfilled, however, and it is hoped that further donations for this purpose will make it possible to complete on a suitable scale the permanent decoration of the branches.

Exhibitions

The various sections of the collection of water color paintings of Old Testament scenes by Tissot, presented to the Library by Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, and first placed on view in 1911, have been interchanged among the different branches at intervals throughout the year.

Other exhibits, in addition to those from the American Museum of Natural History, which were continued from 1912 and have been previously reported, have been as follows: drawings and etchings by the Bohemian artist Svabinsky, etchings by Hollar, etchings by Šimon, drawings by Mannes, prints showing Moravian homes, monuments of Egypt, color reproductions of bird studies by Louis Agassiz Fuertes, paintings by members of the Gemeinschaft für Kultur, craft work of the Elverhoj Colony, paintings by Gustav Wolff, pictures showing Indian habitations lent by the Newark Free Public Library, prints on Switzerland, Japanese art books lent by Mrs. William Stephenson, Edward S. Curtis' photographs of the North American Indians, lent by Marah Ellis Ryan, Hayward's "Old New York," colonial furniture, country homes, costume, forestry, and Dutch artists.

Public Lectures

Lectures have been given in the Board of Education series of free evening lectures in the assembly rooms of the Hamilton Grange and 135th Street branches, and in reading-rooms of the 58th Street and 96th Street branches. For a detailed statement see p. 324 of the appendix.

The small collections of books reserved at the branches for use in connection with these lectures have been increasingly sought, notably those on travel, as reported by each branch where lectures on this subject were given.

The attendance at the 120 lectures reached the total of 21,493.

Buildings and Sites

Of five new branch buildings on which work was begun during the year 1912 or early in 1913, only one was completed during the year. This was the branch located at 457 West 40th street, known as the West Fortieth Street branch, which was opened to the public on October 20, 1913.

The St. Raphael branch, which as a branch of the Cathedral Free Circulating Library was on January 1, 1905, consolidated with The New York Public Library, was discontinued with the opening of the new West 40th Street branch in its immediate vicinity.

The Melrose branch, at 910 Morris avenue, was at the close of the year practically ready for the public, dedicatory exercises having been arranged for January 16, 1914. It is expected that the Woodstock branch, located at 759 East 160th street, and the new Washington Heights branch at 1000 St. Nicholas avenue will be opened in February. The Fort Washington branch, 535 West 179th street, will not be ready until March or April, 1914.

On August 26 the George Bruce branch was closed, the readers being temporarily accommodated at the Central Circulation and St. Raphael branches. This branch, located at 226 West 42nd street, was built by Miss Catharine Bruce in memory of her father and was first opened to the public on January 6, 1888. It had served its neighborhood for over twenty-five years when it was decided to sell the property and from the proceeds of the sale to secure a site in a neighborhood further uptown and erect thereon a new building to be known as the George Bruce branch.

Only one site was secured during the year, viz., that for the new George Bruce branch, consisting of two lots located 193 feet from the intersection of 126th street and Manhattan street, having 50 feet frontage on 126th street, with an average depth of 104 feet extending through to Manhattan street. To this property title was acquired December 9, 1913.

Up to the close of the year the application made by the Board of Trustees on February 16, 1912, to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, calling for a site in the vicinity of Lexington and Third avenues from 46th to 49th street inclusive, had not received favorable action at the hands of the city authorities.

No extensive repairs or alterations have been made during the year, although the St. Agnes, Chatham Square, 96th Street, Stapleton, 115th Street, and Hudson Park branches have been repainted and thoroughly renovated. A system of indirect lighting was installed at the 115th Street and Harlem branches. At the Morrisania branch a new basement areaway was constructed to provide better lighting and ventilating facilities in the work rooms of that building. By the order of the Bureau of Highways a change in the stoop lines of the Ottendorfer branch was made necessary.

Staff

The staff of the department numbered at the close of the present year 579 [1] persons, of whom 49 were employed in the administrative, cataloguing, and book order offices in the central building, and 530 in various capacities at the branches.

During the year 114 appointments were made to fill vacancies in the staffs at the branches, of which five were in Grade B (first assistant librarians), six in Grade C. L. (children's librarians), forty in Grade C (second assistant librarians), fifty-three in Grade D (assistants); two were reading room custodians, and eight janitors. Nine additional appointments were made to fill vacancies in the staffs of the offices.

The annual examinations for promotion within the graded service were held in May, with a total entry of seventy-eight candidates. As a result, eighteen were placed on the eligible list for Grade C; seven passed the written test for Grade B, and are awaiting the actual test of work at the branches.

On account of the number of candidates already on the eligible list for Grade A (branch librarians), no examinations for this grade were given, although a limited number of candidates were allowed to fulfil a part of the requirements by submitting the usual thesis. The subject assigned was "The administration of a branch library." Four theses were presented, of which two were accepted. In the course of the year twenty-five promotions were made within the graded service, two being to Grade A, five to Grade B, three to Grade C. L., and fifteen to Grade C.

A new method of selecting probationers for appointment to the lowest grade of the service (Grade D) was inaugurated during the later part of the year, as the existing system failed to meet the needs of the department. In place of the written examinations for admission to probation, conducted by the Library School, the preliminary selection of candidates under the new method is made on the basis of informal interviews with members of a so-called Committee on Examinations, with a view to determining as far as possible at the outset the personal fitness of each applicant for library work. In addition to the interviews with members of this committee, each candidate is required to submit, as part of her application, credentials of a high school education, or its equivalent.

The real test of the candidates thus selected comes during the period of probationary training, which consists of supervised practice under actual working conditions in four circulation branches, one month being spent at each branch. A limited amount of supplementary reading and study along special lines is also required, and brief tests on the various phases of the work are given at intervals. The record of each probationer is carefully followed and those who fail to maintain the required standard of work during their terms are dropped. The period of probationary training may be shortened from the customary four months in the cases of candidates who show such aptitude for library work as to justify earlier appointment to the staff. There are no definite dates for admission to probation, candidates being allowed to begin at almost any time during the year, except in summer.

This plan of probationary training has been adopted experimentally and it is expected that certain modifications will be made as circumstances require. At the end of the year thirty-two probationers were working under the new method and applications were being constantly received from additional candidates. It is, of course, too early to judge of the ultimate success of this method, but the preliminary results have been encouraging.

In the section of the report devoted to the staff it has been customary to announce the award of the Ash Prize of $100, given annually by Mr. Mark Ash, a member of the Committee on Circulation, to the librarian of the branch maintained during the year in the best general condition. This prize was awarded in 1913 to Miss Anna M. Wallace of the Hamilton Grange branch.

STOCK ROOM

Reorganization of the system of ordering, storing, and distributing stationery and other similar supplies, kept for both circulation and reference departments in the central building, has resulted in satisfactory economy. Heretofore, one system of accounting had been used for the reference department supplies and another for those of the circulation department. This year there was adopted a system of accounting for each department, identical in principle but with such variation in detail as was necessary for the peculiar needs of each. The stock of each department is kept separate on the shelves and in the records, but the methods of ordering, delivering, and handling are in general the same. A shelf list of the entire stock has been finished; frequent inventories have been taken; an index to the reference department stock was completed late in the year and is now in the hands of the printer.

During the year there were distributed 5,734 items of reference department supplies, issued on 4,500 requisitions. From the printing office were received 280 items and from outside sources came 341 items.

For the circulation department offices in the central building and for the circulation branches, there were distributed 8,602 items on 2,034 invoices. Supplies were delivered to the branch buildings in 2,488 packages. From the printing office the stock room received 1,223 items and from outside sources 120 items.

CENTRAL BUILDING

During the past year, the total cost of maintaining the building, including light, heat and power, cleaning and repairing, has been $101,776.31, of which the City provided $21,000.00, used exclusively for repairs. This total is $15,764.57 less than that for 1912, which was $117,540.88. The average number of employees on the mechanical staff has been 92 and the total pay roll for the year has amounted to $63,452.23.

A more detailed statement of the work of the janitor's, engineering, and repairs divisions is as follows: —

JANITOR'S DIVISION

The cost of cleaning for the year was $23,558.99, of which $22,153.74 was for labor, and $1,405.25 for material. The admirably clean condition in which the building has been kept has been the subject of much favorable comment from the public. According to the computation of the Building superintendent, the 500,000 square feet of floor space in the central building have been cleaned by 40 men at a cost of 4.7 cents per square foot per year.

Other expenditures chargeable to this division have amounted to $20,051.41. This account includes salaries of special officers, night watchmen, gallery and lavatory attendants, and all expenditures for public comfort.

ENGINEERING DIVISION

The funds for generating steam and electric current for light, heat, and power are supplied by the Board of Trustees; the repairs to the machinery and equipment outside of the electric power plant are paid out of funds provided by the City of New York.

The cost of operation during the past year for each of the three groups of apparatus has been as follows:—

Group 1: Apparatus requiring steam and a licensed engineer and fireman. The cost of operation was $15,160.00, of which $9,000.00 was for coal for power and heat, $400.00 for material, packing, repairs, etc., and $5,760.00 for labor and supervision. It is estimated that the building contains an equivalent of 87,038 square feet of direct heating surface for which both live and exhaust steam are used, and, making no allowance for depreciation of machinery, the cost of heating for the year has been 17 cents per square foot of direct heating surface. This rate compares very favorably with the cost of direct heating in ten buildings, both municipal and commercial, from which figures have been obtained, the average cost for these buildings being 30 cents per square foot of direct heating surface.

Group 2: Ventilating apparatus, motors, batteries, clocks, telephone and call systems, machine and carpenter shops, etc. The cost of maintaining this group was $5,665.65 (as compared with $8,602.87 for 1912), of which $2,881.36 was for labor and supervision, $2,407.05 for lamp renewals and material, and $377.24 for oil and repair parts.

Group 3: Electric generating plant. The cost of generating current and maintaining the apparatus was $13,674.06 (as compared with $14,390.00 for 1912), of which $7,582.83 was for coal and removal of ashes, $5,540.00 for labor and supervision, and $551.23 for oil and repairs. The power plant has generated 932,000 kilo-watt hours of electric current at a cost of 1.47 cents per kilo-watt hour, as against 787,000 kilo-watt hours at 1.81 cents in 1912. In this connection, it should be taken into consideration that the power plant of the Library is two-thirds larger than is necessary to meet all demands likely to be made upon it. Because of this fact, maintenance costs are higher and depreciation greater than would be the case with a power plant of lower capacity, but ample for the Library's needs. In the above estimate of cost no account is taken of depreciation, interest charges, or the rental value of space occupied by the plant. The cost of coal for the year was $15,682.83, as against $16,510.00 for 1912. The higher efficiency attained the past year is principally due to reducing the diameter of the cylinder of one of the large engines from 30 inches to 24 inches, and to improvements in the method of operating the ventilating system.

REPAIR DIVISION

According to the contract between the Trustees of the Library and the City of New York, the building is to be repaired at the expense of the City. For this purpose, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment provided $18,000 for the year 1913. In October, a special appropriation of $3,000 was made by the City for roof repairs.

MEDICAL OFFICER

In general, the work of the medical officer has consisted of the examination of all new employees, re-examination of all old employees, passing on requests for leave of absence, sanitary inspection of all buildings, passing on books and publications relating to medical and allied subjects, giving of advice and emergency treatment to ill or injured employees, and passing on the sanitary arrangements of new buildings.

The general health of the library staff has been good. There has been relatively little absence on account of illness; by far the greater part of the time lost by employees has occurred in the circulation department, but in many instances such absences have not been due to illness, but to extension of vacation one month or more, without pay.

About May 1, 1913, arrangements were made to provide the medical officer with an office in the central building for an hour each morning. This has proved to be advantageous in many ways.

The office is provided with necessary apparatus and instruments required for the examination of new or ailing employees. During the year a pair of scales was provided, also an emergency outfit for the dressing of wounds, etc.

From January 1 to December 31, 1913, the medical officer examined 350 new employees and 714 old employees (exclusive of those seen at the branches or at the annual re-examination). Of these, 202 new employees and 281 old employees were in the reference department.

Considerable has been done in providing emergency treatment for simple medical and surgical ailments, such as simple sore throats, cuts, etc. But wherever the ailment has been serious, the patient has been referred to his own physician. A number of visits have been made to the homes of employees to determine the nature of their illness, and when they would be able to return to work.

In accordance with the recommendation submitted by the medical officer October 1, 1912, the daily recess of employees in the circulation department was increased to one hour, every employee being required to take the full hour off duty and not permitted to make up lost time or do library work during that hour. This recommendation was put into effect the beginning of the year and the results have been carefully noted. It has met with the unqualified approval of the officers and the staff of the circulation department. Branch librarians unite in saying that not only have their employees been able to do better work, but they have also been absent from duty less often for trivial causes.

Believing that the continued lifting and exertion involved in the shelving of books was not good for young women, such as make up the general circulation staff, special study was made of the need of additional pages. As a result, recommendations have been submitted for an increase in the number of pages.

During the year each of the forty branches of the Library was visited at least once and the general sanitary condition of the building and the health of the staff inquired into. All buildings and offices of the Library, with but one or two exceptions, were found in excellent sanitary condition. The remodeling of the staff rooms has been further extended to a number of branches during the year, and now in nearly all the branches the kitchenettes have been removed from the staff rooms.

The plans of several of the new branch libraries have been examined by the medical officer, and several suggestions submitted, regarding the location and arrangement of staff rooms, locker rooms, the flooring in the children's rooms and halls, etc.

THE LIBRARY SCHOOL

Sixteen of the nineteen students who pursued senior courses in the Library School in 1912/13 received the diploma on June 13, and forty junior students the certificate. Of the seniors, four had come to this school as graduates of other library schools. Of the students receiving certificates, two secured them by part-time work during two years. All but three of the sixteen seniors held paid positions in the Library during their course, and to all appearance found no insuperable difficulty in carrying the work. The other three elected two senior courses in the School with fifteen hours' practice per week.

Twenty of the juniors of 1913 returned in September, 1913, for a second year's work, with five graduates of other library schools. These, with an entering class of forty-four and six part-time students, made an enrolment of 75 in October, 1913, equaling the seating capacity of the school-room.

The graduates of 1913 represented six states and Canada, the certificate-holders fifteen states. The entering class for 1913/14 comes from nineteen states, Canada, and Finland, and the senior class covers ten states, the geographical circumference extending somewhat each year.

Colleges represented by graduates in the senior registration of 1914 were Adelphi, Dartmouth, Oberlin, Simmons, Smith, and Wellesley, with Boston and Cornell Universities and those of Michigan, Nebraska, and Southern California. Among the juniors are graduates of the universities of Johns Hopkins, Leland Stanford, Oregon, Vermont, Washington, Western Reserve, Wisconsin, and Helsingfors (Finland), and of St. Elizabeth's (N. J.), Barnard, Smith, New Rochelle, and two normal colleges.

Libraries represented in the entering class of 1913/14 by actual or former assistants are the public libraries of Newark, Detroit, Braddock (Pa.), St. Louis, New York, Pottsville (Pa.), St. Paul, New Rochelle, and Hartford.

There has been no change in the regular faculty since the last report except the addition of Miss A. Marie Hardy, senior student, as teacher's assistant, though in the circular of information of 1913/14 the names of Théophile E. Comba, instructor in Italian, Adelaide R. Hasse, instructor in government documents, Rose Murray, instructor in book-sewing, repairing, and elementary binding, and Martha E. Buchanan, instructor in mechanical work with books, were printed as a supplementary faculty, with permission, thus recognizing a situation that already existed. Extended courses given in the senior year by lecturers might be thought to warrant the printing of a senior faculty list if it were not that the giving of their lectures from year to year is dependent upon the demand from intending students for given courses. The names of these lecturers are always given in the report printed by the School at the close of each school year.

To the equipment of the School have been added a museum-case for material illustrative of library economy, several bookcases, and a case for picture bulletins, charts, etc., with six sewing-benches and other tools necessary for the instruction in binding. The number of volumes and pamphlets entered to July 1, 1913, was 2,473.

The "school and library exhibit" which was described in the last report, continues to travel and to be in demand. It has been put into better shape and the material, so far as possible, kept up to date.

A course of lessons, with test, on periodicals, which will be extended the coming year, was added to the curriculum, also a series of practice lessons in book-sewing, the making of cloth and pressboard portfolios, and the binding of small books and single numbers of periodicals, with work in mounting and labeling.

The senior curriculum of 1912/13 was a matter of experiment. Four seniors applied for the advanced reference and cataloguing course, four for work with children, and the remainder for the course in administration. The work was given in lecture form, the lecture usually being followed by a seminar, the students doing assigned work which varied in kind and amount according to the nature of the course. The chief contents of each course were as follows:

In the Advanced reference and cataloguing course, practice in the order and cataloguing rooms of the reference department; problems in the divisions of economics, technology, art, and government documents, and in the children's reference-room; lectures in the history of printing; practice in cataloguing early printed books; lectures in subject bibliography, and in bibliographical Italian.

In the course in Administration, lectures on many topics and visits, with seminars and reports, occupied most of the time, with one course of lectures on civic questions. Practice was largely in the circulation department and its branches.

In the course in Library work with children, children's books, illustrations, picture bulletins, and story telling, with lectures on administration, furnishing, decoration, etc., occupied a large part of the schedule. Visits of observation to schools, etc., were required. Most of the practice of this class was obtained in the various children's rooms of the Library.

Fifty-six lectures were given to the junior students, of which twenty-three were by members of the library staff, and 109 to seniors, including thirty-four by members of the staff.

The usual round of visits to local libraries was made during the spring term, and a party of eighteen students, conducted by an instructor, visited the libraries of Philadelphia and Washington during the spring vacation.

The commencement exercises were held on June 13, 1913, the President of the Board of Trustees, Hon. John L. Cadwalader, presiding. Mr. Charles K. Bolton, librarian of the Boston Athenaeum, was the speaker of the occasion, his subject being "The Librarian in a Democracy."

In October, 1913, the publication of "Library School Notes," a monthly leaflet giving current news of the School, was begun, copies being sent to graduates and to students no longer connected with the School. An immediate response was forthcoming, showing there had been a need for some such medium for the conservation of school spirit among the alumni. Other schools and libraries have asked to be put on the mailing-list for this publication, of which ten numbers appear each year.

In place of the course in work with children, for which there was not sufficient demand this year, a senior course in school and college library work was given. Six students applied for this (all except one graduates of colleges), seven students for the advanced reference and cataloguing course, and twelve for that in administration. The principal change in the senior work has been the giving of fewer single lectures each by a different lecturer, and the arrangement of instruction in courses carried by one lecturer or instructor.

Graduates of the School are at present filling positions in the public libraries of New York, Trenton, East Orange, Queens Borough, Portland (Ore.), and the Wellesley College library.

Certificate-holders are placed as follows: public libraries of New York, New Rochelle, Passaic, Jacksonville (Ill.), Portland (Ore.), Stamford (Conn.), Lead (S.D.), New York Institution for the Blind, Wesleyan University (Conn.), Boston Museum of Fine Arts, Bethany College (W.Va.), Accounting department, American Telephone and Telegraph Co., New York; New York Times Index.

CONCLUSION

Three general meetings of the staff have been held in the central building during the year, as heretofore, at which problems connected with the work were discussed and addresses by various members of the staff were given. All these meetings, as usual, were closed with a social hour, when an attempt was made to have the members of the staff of the two departments become better acquainted with each other and with the work of each department.

In the reference department, beginning on April 10, the division chiefs have met frequently with the Director and the Chief Reference Librarian for the discussion of reference department problems.

In the circulation department, the Friday morning meetings conducted by the Chief of the department for the branch librarians and heads of offices were continued. At these meetings administrative matters connected with the branches and the purchase of new books were discussed. A valuable feature added to these meetings in 1913 was addresses by the division chiefs of the reference department on the resources of the special collections under their charge. The result has been a closer coöperation between the branches and the central building in meeting the demands of readers.

I cannot conclude this report without acknowledging my indebtedness to my distinguished predecessor from whose wise and faithful leadership, during the five years I was associated with him, I have profited much. I am also glad to avail myself of this opportunity to express to the Trustees my cordial recognition of their great service to the Library, and my deep appreciation of their assistance to me in the accomplishment of a difficult task. To them and to the staff is largely due such success as has attended the administration of the Library.

Very respectfully,

Edwin H. Anderson,

Director.

February 25, 1914.

HON. JOHN L. CADWALADER

JOHN LAMBERT CADWALADER, the late President of the New York Public Library, died at his home in the City of New York on Wednesday, the 11th of March, 1914, in the seventy-eighth year of his age. He had served as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Astor Library prior to the time of its consolidation with the Lenox and Tilden libraries, and as a Trustee of the consolidated Library from its formation until his death — covering a period in all of over thirty-four years. He became a Vice-President of the Public Library upon the death of Bishop Henry C. Potter, and President upon the death of John Bigelow. The time during which he held these two offices was relatively short, but it by no means measures the period of his active leadership in the affairs of the Library.

Mr. Cadwalader was born at Trenton, New Jersey, on November 17, 1836. His father was Thomas Cadwalader, a member of a very well known family of Pennsylvania and New Jersey, which has rendered many services to the nation from the time of the Revolution. His mother was Maria Gouverneur, of Huguenot descent, whose family has been equally well known in the annals of New York. One of the most recent benefactions of our late President — uncompleted at the time of his death — was a memorial to his native place in the shape of a handsome addition to the Trenton Public Library.

He naturally entered Princeton, and graduated as Bachelor of Arts in 1856. Four years later, he received from the Harvard Law School the degree of LL.B. Much later in life he was given the honorary degree of LL.D. by Princeton, and the University of Pennsylvania; and, in 1913, by Harvard University — a distinction he greatly prized.

Soon after leaving the Law School he came to New York to establish himself in practice, and was for a time associated with the late Dorman B. Eaton. In 1869 Mr. Cadwalader was one of those who were most active in founding the Association of the Bar of the City of New York. In 1874 he was selected by Mr. Fish to be Assistant Secretary of State of the United States in succession to Mr. J. C. Bancroft Davis — a post he held until the close of General Grant's term as President. Mr. Cadwalader not only discharged his regular duties in the State Department so as to deserve and receive the commendation of his superior officer, but he distinguished himself in a manner not very common among officials of the government by the preparation of a valuable digest of decisions upon international law, treaties, and kindred subjects.

When he left the State Department, Mr. Cadwalader, after a journey round the world, including a visit to some remote parts of China (much less accessible thirty-seven years ago than now), returned to New York and formed a partnership with the late Charles E. Strong — the surviving member of a highly respected firm of lawyers whose business had been established in this City for generations. Mr. Strong died in 1897, but the business was continued by Mr. Cadwalader and his younger associates, constantly developing, and absorbing to the very end a large part of his energies. He was not often to be seen in Court, but few men were better known to the Bar of New York. His swift and comprehensive mind, impatient of forms and details, was at its best in dealing with the larger aspects of a complicated situation, and especially in dealing with what may be called the human side of a legal problem. He served as President of the Bar Association for the customary two years (1906 and 1907) and brought his usual vigor and businesslike abilities to its service.

Mr. Cadwalader was never married, but for many years he maintained a house in this City where he received an exceptionally large circle of agreeable and distinguished people. With his discriminating taste for art, he had collected mezzotints, old porcelain, and old furniture, which lent the house a special charm; and his collection of old and warm friends was no less remarkable. A certain impatience of manner sometimes gave to those who did not know him well the impression of a coldness and harshness very far from his real nature. He disliked all exaggeration and all forms of speech not thoroughly genuine, and was never quite at his ease with strangers, so that he often seemed far more reserved and unemotional than in reality he was. He was, in fact, diffident, almost shy; but his unnumbered and unrecorded acts of kindness to those who were in trouble, sorrow, need, sickness, or any other adversity, were the true index to a very warm heart, which was only really known to those who were favored by an intimate acquaintance.

No portraiture of the man could be complete which failed to take into account his love of outdoor sport. For years his visits to the Cascapedia river for salmon fishing, and to a Scottish moor for grouse shooting, were as regular as the seasons. Even in the last summer of his life, when he was approaching his seventy-seventh birthday, he was no less keen than in his earlier days.

With all his busy professional life, Mr. Cadwalader found time to serve with exceptional efficiency in the management of many public trusts, among them the Zoological Society, the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the American Museum of Natural History, Princeton University, and the Carnegie Institution of Washington. But the institution to which he gave his best thought and devotion was the New York Public Library.

He was elected a member of the Astor Library Board on November 5, 1879. For the first ten years of his service, there were few opportunities for any except routine tasks. The means of the corporation were then too restricted to permit of expansion, and the readiness of Mr. John Jacob Astor (grandson of the founder) to make up all deficiencies out of his own pocket, rendered his colleagues chary of proposals which would make further demands on his generosity. Early in 1890 Mr. Astor died, and the Library entered upon a difficult period in its career, for in spite of a liberal legacy under his will, the income of the library was still very far short of enabling the Trustees to meet the just demands of a growing constituency; nor was there much hope of a successful appeal to the public for aid in conducting and enlarging an institution which for three generations had been intimately associated with a single wealthy family. But the time was at hand when larger opportunities for public service were to offer themselves.

The partial failure in the provisions of Mr. Tilden's will for the establishment of a popular library in New York, and the consequent reduction of the funds in the hands of his trustees to a sum then estimated at two million dollars, inevitably turned attention to the possibility of a consolidation of the Tilden Trust with one or both of the existing libraries. The idea found expression in an act of the State Legislature authorizing consolidation, which was passed at the instance of the trustees of the Tilden Trust; but nothing practical was done until Mr. Cadwalader's attention was directed to the subject more than two years after the passage of the act. With his usual energy and resource he helped to bring together representatives of the three library corporations, and himself took an effective part in the complicated task of reconciling the differing aims and ideals of the three bodies — bodies which had little in common, except a sincere desire to accomplish a great and useful public undertaking.

"Everyone," said President Taft at the opening of the new Library building, "who has had to deal with human nature knows the difficulty of securing from those who are independent in the control of any organization, however large or small, a willingness to subordinate their own importance and their own freedom by a union of that which is in their custody, with similar trusts in the custody of others. To have secured the consent of all the Trustees of the various Foundations, to have obtained the necessary legislation authorizing the union, to have secured from the City authorities the use of this magnificent site, and the appropriation of the money for this magnificent structure, required genius and statesmanship."

It is no disparagement to the efforts of the others who worked with him, to say that Mr. Cadwalader's share in these achievements was vital. Without his enthusiasm, his vision, and his resourcefulness through the whole period of development, it is hard to see how the final result could have been attained. In particular, the success of the negotiations with the City, and the success of the negotiations with the heirs of Miss Henrietta Lenox (who had certain rights in a part of the Lenox Library property) were chiefly due to his patience and tact.

The legal and financial problems, however, were not, by any means, the only ones to be met. If the enterprise was to be successfully carried through, it was quite as essential to select a fitting executive as to secure land and money. A man of broad views and extensive knowledge, accustomed to public affairs as well as to libraries, and with that practical experience in administration which is the chief qualification for conducting large undertakings, had to be found. Mr. Cadwalader, aided by his brother-in-law and life long friend, the late Dr. Weir Mitchell, made a successful search, and is entitled to the credit of bringing to the service of the Library and the people of New York our late Director, Dr. John S. Billings. Mr. Cadwalader had but a slight acquaintance with Dr. Billings when the latter first came to the Library; but they became close and even intimate friends, opposite as their tastes and characters were in many essential respects. A photograph which stands today in the Director's office at the Library, representing the two friends in confidential discussion over a book, delightfully typifies them in their almost daily task of watching over the institution to which they were both so deeply devoted, and to which — in very different ways — they gave so much.

Mr. Cadwalader was chiefly interested, as might have been expected, in the work of the Library as an instrument of learning and research. He had, indeed, been insistent from the first that it should be based upon the broadest popular foundation, and that it should be so administered as to contribute to recreation as well as to instruction. He was instrumental in arranging for taking over the work of the Free Circulating Library and the other smaller libraries which had received public moneys; and he diligently furthered the arrangements with the City consequent upon the great gift from Mr. Carnegie. But his heart and mind were devoted rather to the growth of the Central Library. One branch of that work in which he took a peculiar interest was the creation and development of a Print Department — following an example long since set by the British Museum. A collector of rare prints himself, he brought knowledge as well as enthusiasm to bear on the subject and enlisted the willing support of men highly expert; and he thus laid the foundation of what is already an important, and will doubtless become a great collection.

Mr. Cadwalader was always a generous benefactor of the Library. Probably no one but Dr. Billings was fully aware of his liberality, and perhaps even he was not fully informed. A gift of a collection of books on shooting and fishing, and a gift of money for the purchase of old prints, may be mentioned as characteristic. His will and codicils bear witness to his increasing interest in the Library and its work. He had begun by providing for a bequest of money and the gift of the whole of his valuable collection of engravings; but by his codicils he increased the pecuniary gift to four times what he had at first intended. The purchase of old prints and the increase of salaries in the reference department, were the particular objects for which he directed the money to be expended — objects which appealed deeply to his artistic taste and his quick and intelligent sympathy.

His death leaves a distinct void in the life of the City, for he occupied a unique position. He was the adviser and confidant of a number of persons and associations who relied implicitly on his judgment — not so much on account of extraordinary ability or learning, as because of a singular force of character. His energy and intelligence, his wide knowledge of the world, his independence of thought and speech, his unfeigned indifference to mere money and the outward marks of success, were characteristics that commanded confidence. He exhibited at times an almost feminine sensitiveness and delicacy of perception, but his unswerving fidelity to the standards of conduct in which he believed, were extraordinarily robust. He was never inclined to moral compromises. Right was right, and wrong was wrong, and there was an end of it; an unusual trait in an age of weak sentimentality toward sinners. He was deeply interested in large plans for the improvement of the City which had become his home, and his qualities made him one of the creators and builders of those things which adorn and vivify a metropolis. He was an energetic and efficient adviser for the many societies with which he was associated. And many men and women have lost in him a kind and helpful friend.

THE CADWALADER GIFT OF PRINTS AND BOOKS

A NOTEWORTHY addition to the print collection came to the Library by bequest of the late Hon. John L. Cadwalader, consisting of 360 engravings, mainly mezzotints. There are also a number of stipple engravings, noteworthy examples of that graceful art. Among these latter are plates by Bartolozzi, J. R. Smith, F. D. Soiron, and other noted stipple engravers, the "Tea Garden" and "St. James' Park" after Morland appearing both in black-and-white and in color. Some miscellaneous prints, notably seven etchings by Rembrandt and three by Whistler, and three engravings by Marc Antonio Raimondi, make up the rest of the donation.

The mezzotints include a number of the most noted examples of the art. T. Watson's "Lady Bamfylde" is here, and James Ward's "Mrs. Billington as St. Cecilia," J. R. Smith's "Mrs. Carnac," Dickinson's "Lady Charles Spencer" and "Mrs. Pelham," Valentine Green's "Lady Betty Delmé," and "Mrs. Tollemache as Miranda," by John Jones, all after Reynolds. And the other mezzotinters of late 18th century Britain are likewise worthily represented, — J. Watson, McArdell, Dean, Dixon, Dunkarton, Grozer, Young. In their works are reflected the life and taste of the time, with all that that implies of grace and dignity, as they were mirrored by Reynolds and Hoppner and other painters of the day. There are also a number of mezzotints in color, pictures of rural life and sporting scenes, by W. Ward ("Visit to the Boarding School"), Keating ("Party Angling"), S. W. Reynolds, Grozer and others from paintings by Morland, James Ward, Sartorius and Wheatley. These prints speak of British love of the domestic virtues and of out-door life, and in the latter respect they represent an interesting phase of the "sporting print."

The donation as a whole reflects the standpoint of a man of taste who acquired, not for the sake of completeness in any restricted specialty, but in response to the appeal of beauty, for the possession of choice specimens of workmanship. The result has given the Library a remarkable nucleus for a collection of mezzotints. It is by the coming of such gifts of prints discriminatingly collected that the Library will eventually have a collection worthy of its aims.

The interest in the arts of mezzotint and stipple engraving, and in the period of art and life of which they formed so characteristic an expression, is echoed and emphasized by various monographs on artists closely and prominently identified with these arts. Records of accomplishment in the reproduction of paintings of the time, by means of these processes are found in Davenport's book on "Mezzotints," in special volumes on McArdell, the Watsons, Elizabeth Judkins, V. Green, and S. W. Reynolds, and in others on painters such as Reynolds, Morland, and James Ward.

These came as a part of the gift of Mr. Cadwalader to the Library of such of his books as the Director might choose. They number about 1,000 volumes, and form an interesting and characteristic collection of books on engravings, porcelain, art in general, on fishing and shooting — two sports in which he took a keen and lively interest — and on other literary and historical lines that naturally appealed to a man of his character.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

READERS AND VISITORS

IN the main reading room of the central building 20,275 readers consulted 71,685 volumes. Special reading rooms in this building were used by 47,528 readers, making a total for the whole building of 67,803 readers.

Visitors to the building numbered 222,774.

GIFTS

THE material relating to Mexico received an important addition in March by the bequest of the late Thomas A. Janvier and the gift of his widow, Mrs. Catharine Ann Janvier. The books relate principally to Mexican topography and local history, and include numerous works relating to the history of various provinces and towns. The collection was brought together by Mr. and Mrs. Janvier during their travels in Mexico as an aid to the former in the preparation of his guidebook to that country, which was published in 1886.

From a friend of the Library came thirty-one volumes and four pamphlets relating to Christian Science, various works by Mrs. Eddy, including the first three editions of "Science and Health," as well as later editions; the Christian Science Journal, volumes 5-21, 1887-1903, "The life of Mary Baker Eddy," by Sibyl Wilbur, New York, 1907 and 1908, and other works.

From Mrs. Henry Draper the Library received a large framed photograph of a portrait of Aesop by Velasquez, and a fragment of an onyx vase bearing a quadrilingual inscription "Xerxes, the Great King," in Persian, Elamitic, Babylonian cuneiform and Egyptian hieroglyphic. In continuation of her previous gifts the Library also received numerous other works among which may be mentioned "Histoire de Château de Versailles: Versailles sous Louis XIV," by Pierre de Nolhac, two volumes, Paris, 1911, and "The story of George Crowninshield's yacht Cleopatra's Barge on a voyage of pleasure to the Western Islands and the Mediterranean 1816-1817, compiled from journals, letters and log-book by Francis B. Crowninshield," privately printed, at Boston, 1913.

Among the noteworthy gifts to the Art and architecture division was a collection of 458 volumes and 418 pamphlets presented by Mr. Victor G. Fischer. The material consists almost entirely of catalogues of art sales, many of them illustrated, and includes many catalogues of such noteworthy sales as the San Donati, Beurdeley, Georges Viau, and Tabourier collections. Other important additions to the collections of this division include the following: From Mr. Sam. P. Avery, "Turner's Liber studiorum: a description and a catalogue," second edition, revised, by W. G. Rawlinson, London, 1906; from Mr. John Woodbury, of Boston, an etched portrait of James F. Hunnewell, by O. J. Schneider (12th proof); from Mr. J. C. Cebrian, of San Francisco, "Historia de la Arquitectura Christiana Española en la Edad Media según el estudio de los elementos y los monumentos por Vicente Lampérez y Romea, Arquitecto. (Obra premiada en el V Concurso internacional 'Martorell' — Barcelona, 1906.)," tomo 1-2, Madrid, 1908-09, and one other work; and from Mr. James Loeb, of New York, "Die Bronzen der Sammlung Loeb herausgegeben von Johannes Sieveking," München, 1913.

Interesting miscellaneous gifts included the following: From Mr. J. P. Morgan, volume 9 of Curtis' "The North American Indian," 2 volumes of text and plates; the Department of Economy and Efficiency of the State of New York, "State budget report... Appropriations recommended for fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, 1914...;" from the Delta Upsilon Fraternity a collection of 141 volumes and 107 pamphlets, publications of various college fraternities of the United States; from Charles A. A. Düring, of New York City, twenty volumes, mostly musical works; from Mr. Daniel J. Ryan, nine volumes relating to the breeding and racing of horses; and from the United Typothetae and Franklin Clubs of America, nine volumes and two pamphlets, various publications relating to the printing trades.

The following authors presented the Library with copies of their works: Mr. Frank D. Andrews of Vineland, N. J., Mr. Hereward Carrington of New York, Mr. Isaac J. Cox of Cincinnati, Rev. Frank Everett Davison of West Rutland, Vt., Mr. Louis Marinus Dewey of Westfield, Mass., Miss Lizzie P. Elliott of Nashville, Tenn., Dr. Louis F. Frank of Milwaukee, Wis., Mr. Jacob Heffelfinger of Hampton, Va., Mr. Michael William Jacobs of Harrisburg, Pa., Rev. John Stockton Littell of Keene, N. H., Mr. Floyd W. Mundy and Mr. William J. Wilgus of New York.

Additions to the genealogical collection were received from the following: Mr. W. T. Ashbridge of Toronto, Miss Clara A. Avery of Chicago, Mr. Frederick W. Stevens of New York, Mr. George H. Budke of Jersey City, N. J., Mr. Clarence Monroe Burton of Detroit, Mr. Ira Broadwell Conkling of Washington, Dr. E. Alden Dyer of Whitman, Mass., Mr. Walter Geer and Mr. G. A. Maitland of New York, Mr. John B. White of Kansas City, Mo., and Mr. A. Lyman Williston of Northampton, Mass.

EXHIBITIONS

THE exhibition illustrating the "Making of an etching (room 321) — which attracted 5658 visitors during the month — the Brangwyn etchings, fifteenth and sixteenth century engravings, wood engravings by Henry Marsh, and the John Leech memorial exhibit in the Stuart gallery (room 316) and the selection of engravings by Faithorne in the print room (308) remained on view throughout the month. The exhibit of cartoons and illustrations by Sir John Tenniel (described in the March BULLETIN) and the color etchings by C. F. W. Mielatz also remained on view.

MARCH WORK

DURING the month of March there were received at the Library 36,749 volumes and 4,656 pamphlets, of which 5,592 volumes and 4,573 pamphlets were credited to the reference department and 31,157 volumes and 83 pamphlets to the circulation department.

Of the reference department receipts 2,993 volumes and 1,143 pamphlets were purchases, 2,595 volumes and 3,416 pamphlets were gifts, and 4 volumes and 14 pamphlets were exchanges. For the circulation department 30,921 volumes were purchases and 236 volumes and 83 pamplets were gifts.

The reference department catalogued 4,523 volumes and 3648 pamphlets; for this work were written 5,494 cards, 5,651 copy slips for the printer, and 262 slips for the duplicating machine. From these 262 slips 1,362 cards were manifolded. Cataloguing of 759 volumes and 754 pamphlets was completed by addition to 3,134 cards.

In the printing office 5,682 titles were set, from which 71,960 cards were printed.

The circulation department cataloguing force wrote 423 cards for the union catalogue, entered 10,285 volumes in the union catalogue and shelf list, and classified 584 volumes. At the branches 8,069 cards were written.

Through the interbranch loan system 10,070 books were asked for and 7,643 were supplied.

THE RURAL SCHOOL LIBRARY

ITS CONDITIONS, FUNCTIONS, AND POSSIBILITIES

By MARIE AMNA NEWBERRY

The New York Public Library, comprehending as it does collections for the scholar, books for the general reader, and books for children, having not only its central reference building but also its circulation centres in almost every part of three boroughs, in the suburbs and country districts as well as in the city, and a school in which it endeavors to give training for many types of work in libraries, can truly say that nothing that concerns libraries is alien to it and that the welfare and progress of libraries in general are therefore among its interests. For this reason it seems proper that it should publish the following paper, a thesis submitted for the diploma of the Library School in June, 1913.

THE purpose of this thesis is to set forth the present conditions of the rural school library and the influence of certain educational movements upon these conditions, to determine the function of the rural school library, and to discuss possibilities open to it and the means of realizing to the fullest extent these possibilities.

The value of the school library was early recognized, but while there has been no doubt as to this value, the efficiency of these libraries has varied greatly and the vicissitudes of their fortunes scarcely bear out the optimistic prophecy of Horace Mann's entry in his diary February 19, 1843. "It (the school library) now needs discreet and energetic management; it will then be able to take care of itself."[1] How this "discreet and energetic management" has changed in adapting itself to changed conditions, changed ideals, and acknowledged failures in administration is nowhere better shown than in the article on "School libraries in New York State"[2] by

[1] Mann. Life of Horace Mann. p. 173. Boston, 1865.
[2] New York Libraries. 2: 192. Jan. 1911.

L. O. Wiswell, which may well be taken as a typical history of the school library movement in general.

Interest has been widespread; from Maine to California, from Oregon to Georgia, we find state education departments, library commissions, teachers' associations, normal schools, public libraries, associations of school officials preparing lists for school libraries, instituting reading circles for both teachers and pupils, and setting aside for due celebration a library day. This campaign for the betterment of school libraries, having passed through the process of filtration which seems to be necessary before any educational movement penetrates to the common or rural school, is at last directing attention toward the rural school library: its conditions, its needs, and its possibilities.

Let us see what the actual conditions are. Since few reports give the exact number and character of the books in the rural school library, these are difficult to ascertain. At first thought, it might seem possible to determine the character of the books by examining the various lists selected for school use; but until as much care and thought have been exercised in the circulating of these lists as jobbers and publishers use in the sending out of their catalogues, we must expect to see the school libraries selected from the latter. The enriched course of study has affected the lists, but it is a debatable point to what extent the actual libraries have been affected.

Wisconsin reports that "few books in the one-room schools have ever been rebound,"[3] and the consequent physical condition of the volumes is typical.

The maintenance of the libraries is also very uncertain, ranging from state aid, irregular incomes from penal fines — too often misapplied by the local authorities — and school district taxes, to the ever popular social and school entertainment.

In many schools no provision is made for the care of books, not even a shelf being provided. Under such circumstances as these, is it remarkable that the rural school library fails in its work? Fortunately, these conditions are on the wane and with the coming of inspection of rural schools now advocated in many states, bookcases, shelves, and library rooms may prove to be the rule rather than the exception. In Illinois a good collection of books, including juvenile books, maps, and dictionaries, is among the requirements for a standard school. Books on rural school management devote chapters to the library and its use and frequently give plans for library rooms or alcoves.

The effect on the library of consolidation of schools is most excellent. Its increased size, made possible by the combination of funds, demands better care and quarters, and the better trained teachers make more efficient use of the books. In Minnesota a library room in consolidated schools is required by law and thirty-nine such library rooms were reported in 1912.[4]

State, county, and township library extension is also affecting vitally the school library problem, both in increasing the efficiency of the libraries by setting up standards and in supplementing school collections. In some cases, as in Indiana, the stock of books belonging to the school, with the exception of reference books, is often turned over to an existing township library and the school becomes a distributing agency rather than an administrative head. The library of Pomfret, Vermont, is an excellent example of a strictly rural community working out its problem in this way. The Brumbaugh Free Library of Van Wert, O., is a good example of county library extension. In California this system won praise from a county superintendent of schools;[5] the value of expert advice in the guidance of the reading of the children being especially mentioned and appreciated.

State extension work is carried on through field workers, organizers, and travelling library systems. "In twenty-nine states books are made more easily accessible by means of traveling libraries designed especially to reach the rural population."[6] At comparatively small cost in these states a fresh stock of carefully selected books is available to keep alive the interest in books, once it is aroused. Several of these state libraries or allied agencies also send out pictures for school decoration and study. "The travelling library did four things for the township," says a school man, "it furnished a high grade of supplementary books; it provided free many books before they could be purchased; it brought to the farmer's door some of the standard works on agricultural subjects; it offered a variety of material and authors from which to select for permanent libraries."[7]

The principle is much the same whether the unit of extension be the state, county, township, or consolidated school district, but it needs a strong, forceful personality on the spot.

"Better country school conditions and better general conditions go together. The improvement of the country schools keeps pace with, but can not greatly outrun, other sorts of general improvements."[8] Therefore parcel post, rural free delivery, better roads, telephone, farmers' clubs, institutes, Granges, Hesperia, Men and Religion Forward movements, Chautauquas, agricultural trains, rural life conferences, as factors in rural progress, have a wholesome effect upon the rural school library.

Businesslike methods should prevail in the ordering of books and recording their purchase, history, etc. Just as the country merchant needs to keep track of his stock and of those indebted to him, so is it necessary that there be an accurate record of all the books belonging to the rural school library, of those loaned, and by whom borrowed. The accession record answers very well for the list of books and should contain such items as number, author and title of book, publisher and price, of whom purchased, and a space for remarks as to the subsequent history, i. e., "sent to binder," "destroyed because of disease," "worn out," etc. From this record it is possible to tell the total number of books in the library, and if one is lost, to charge a proper amount for its replacement. A new teacher is enabled to tell from this record what books should be in the library. An annual inventory, at least, should be taken to keep this record up to date.

A slip system of charging is used with great success by many school libraries. A slip or receipt for the book is signed by the borrower and this is filed until the book is returned. It may then be destroyed. Entry is usually made of the author, title, and number of book in addition to the name of the borrower. In larger libraries or where a community is served, it is best to install one of the regular charging systems. It is necessary that the record be kept, but ease, simplicity, accuracy, and effectiveness are desirable qualities. In many schools pupils are given or make neat little booklets in which they may record their own reading from year to year.

A catalogue is most useful and in large libraries an absolute necessity; but if choice must be made between the catalogue and a teacher wise in the lore of books and child life, the choice would be for the latter. It must be remembercd that these records are a means, not the end.

In the narrowest field of activity the rural school library must serve as a tool for teachers and pupils and should therefore contain reference books, such as dictionaries, books of facts, atlases, etc., which will aid in the regular school work and which will permit of training in the use of books as tools. While these books should be of the first rank and both teachers and school officials warned as to the worthlessness of many of the subscription books, too often found in these collections, their attention should also be directed to the many aids, catalogues, and pamphlets which can be procured at small cost or none at all.[9]

Instruction in the care and use of these same books as tools is a necessity. Pupils should know how to care for a book, how to open it properly, how to protect it; they should be able to tell where to find an index, a table of contents, the names of the author and publisher, when the book was published and where; they should know the resources of that valuable tool, the dictionary. With this knowledge the pupil will be able to use other books and other libraries. To use other libraries, however, the pupil must know where they are located and upon what terms he may use their collections. Knowledge of what the state library is willing to do and upon what conditions should be his. In giving such information, the rural school library is fulfilling its function as a tool in the same sense as a mitre box guiding the saw, or as a signboard serving the automobile tourist. It directs him to libraries already existing in school district, township, county, and state.

A disturbing factor is the crowded programme of the rural school. Even a model programme lists thirty classes daily, and the larger the school, the more difficult is the situation. Fortunately this work of instruction in the care and use of books correlates easily with the regular school work, and so this objection is partly met.

[8] Preliminary report of the committee of fifteen. Madison, Wis. 1912.

[9] A list of such material will be found in Appendix A.

Secondly, the rural school library may contain reading to supplement the work of the school but still closely related to the curriculum. This means a well-selected stock of books which treat of the subjects taught, in a manner which interests and appeals to boys and girls. In this, teachers will find at hand many aids, such as lists of books tried by other teachers or librarians. Even the lack of funds need not necessarily cramp this work, as there is available a vast amount of supplementary material put out by manufacturing concerns, railroads, publishers, and the like, which is absolutely free or obtainable at slight cost.[10]

But there is open a much wider field of activity than either of these. It is possible for the rural school library to take an active part in the movement for the betterment of rural conditions. In fact, as far back as 1897, a committee of the National Education Association on rural schools reported: "To carry good reading material, whether of science, literature or fiction, prose or poetry, into the schools and homes of the rural districts must be a part of any educational scheme which has for its object making country life more endurable or more attractive,"[11] and again in 1905 before the same association C. P. Cary says, "If we can, however, broaden the scope of the school library in hamlets and districts where the schools have been consolidated, to include something of the work done by the public libraries of the cities, we can not only magnify the work of the school, but we can make it in the best sense the intellectual center of the community."[12] The Country Life Commission of 1908 speaks of the rural library interested in its community as "one of the most promising of these newer agencies."[13]

To do this work effectively, the rural school library must contain the right books and have as administrative heads teachers who are familiar with books as literature and books as tools and who can pass on this information to patrons and pupils.

The problem of books may be, indeed will be, solved by a live teacher. "Such teachers would find a way to get books, and what is better, would make such good use of them that the children's lives would be enriched."[14] The great need is a leader who knows the books, the community, and the means of bringing them together; one who understands the advantage of co-operating with existing agencies, such as Grange, rural improvement and school patrons' associations, farmers' clubs and institutes, and of utilizing the corn, agricultural, nature study, and Audubon clubs already formed; one who appreciates the value of the old-fashioned singing school, the spelling-bee, lyceum, rhetoricals, literary societies, reading and debating clubs. As Mr. Bailey says, "Books are not the only means of developing the reading habit; with the great majority of people they are not the first means used... The library should organize clubs until it becomes an organism with its organs entrenched in the community and all of them responsive and alive... It must have a progressive, constructive, and dynamic program."[15]

This need is general. President Butterfield says, "The key to the solution of the country life problem in America is adequate leadership... In the last analysis everything goes back to the development of leaders who understand the problem of rural life; who can voice the real needs of the people and who can apply the constructive program."[16]

Perhaps no other field has a brighter outlook for the development of leaders than that of the rural teaching profession. First, because qualifications are steadily being raised.[17] "Under normal conditions, it is now possible to maintain a teaching standard that is reasonably satisfactory and to enforce laws that would have been impossible even ten years ago, so rapidly has the improvement progressed."[18] Secondly, there already exist so many agencies which may be used to give teachers the necessary knowledge and inspiration. Such, for instance, are the universities and colleges, normal schools, training classes, teachers' associations, institutes, and reading circles.

Now, how may these agencies serve in preparing the teacher to use to the greatest advantage the school library in community work? The average rural teacher does not know how to use books. "But few of the rural teachers know how to study or how to get the most out of books which fall into their hands."[19] The movement now widespread for the instruction in the use of books and libraries in the high schools cannot but influence the library and its work in the rural school, as many of the high school graduates enter the ranks of the rural school teachers.

The average rural teacher lacks knowledge of literature, either juvenile or adult. Probably the teachers' reading circles offer the best opportunity of giving teachers a knowledge of the content of books, and it is encouraging to see that books on general literature, the reading of children, the value and methods of story-telling are finding their way onto these reading circle lists. The plan as applied to teachers has proved so successful that a pupils' reading circle has been modeled upon the same lines and it, too, has proved a great help in the raising of the standards of reading of the boys and girls.

Again, the teacher does not know how to select books for school or community use, or how, once selected, to order and care for them, and is not informed about the many aids and facilities at her service or to whom to turn for help. While much can be accomplished at county teachers' institutes by state library organizers and field workers giving practical talks on rural school library organization, book selection, library aids and facilities, and through exhibits of books, pictures, and other suitable material, these questions seem to demand a more formal presentation, such as courses in library methods in normal schools and training classes. Such instruction in universities and colleges affects only indirectly the rural school library by giving proper standards to inspectors and county superintendents; but the normal schools which have a rural department, as Kalamazoo, Mich., or those which have summer sessions devoted to the needs of rural teachers, as in Missouri, present an excellent opportunity for organized work in such instruction. The head of the department of library science of the Kansas State Normal School at Emporia reports her entire time given to library instruction, a course of twenty lessons required of all freshmen, and elective courses in children's literature, story-telling, and book selection. The round table held there in the summer of 1912 was most successful. The work of the state normal at Geneseo, N. Y., is excellent and the teacher-librarian offers a solution of the school library problem in many a small town. Why not in the rural library?

The ideal place for the dissemination of such technical knowledge is the county normal training class, because it will react upon the community in the shortest time and because here the very people who need the instruction in the care and use of books, in the selecting and ordering of a library, and the information as to the library resources of the state, are brought together under the most favorable circumstances. "After two years of training in the very earnest atmosphere of a training school they make splendid country teachers... They come from the country, they are in sympathy with country life."[20] Here certainly is an opportunity for the development of rural leaders which deserves wide use by those interested in the rural school library problem.

The National Education Association and several state teachers' associations, notably Maine, Michigan, and New York, with library sections, have published a valuable body of literature on school library questions and are doing an important work. Joint committees of the state teachers' association and state library association could co-operate in investigating conditions, applying remedies, and arousing public sentiment.

There also exists an educational press, planned to meet the needs of the rural school teacher, which has a wide circulation among them — such, for instance, is the local state education organ. Extensive use should be made of this in printing lists designed for rural school use and in giving in full or condensed form the literature referred to above.

An active public sentiment as to school libraries is an invaluable aid in their development and may be aroused by library days, library programmes, and best of all, perhaps, by the successful functioning of the rural school library as the book center of the community. Here as elsewhere, "Nothing succeeds like success."

Having attempted to set forth the deplorable conditions of the rural school library with respect to book stock, maintenance, and care, having discussed certain influences now at work, having outlined a plan for the administration of the rural school library, having stated its functions and determined the greatest need — adequate leadership — I have endeavored to show that by using agencies already at hand, such as high schools, teachers' institutes and reading circles, normal schools, county training classes, state library organizers and field workers, and by a judicious use of the educational press, it is possible to develop these leaders, and by library days, programmes, and exhibits to arouse a public sentiment which will sustain an effort to vitalize the work of the school by making it the book center of the community.

SHAKESPEARE EXHIBITION

AN exhibition of Shakespeareana is being held at the Central Building in honor of the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Shakespeare's birth, April 23. Two cases of books and other material are on view.

In the first case are the four First Folios bequeathed the Library by its three founders. Following, in chronological order, are five copies of the Second Folio, three of the Third, and two of the Fourth.

There are numerous examples of the Quartos, including "The Merchant of Venice," 1600; "King Lear," 1608; "Richard III," 1612; "Henry IV," 1613; as well as the pseudo-Shakespearean plays, "The London Prodigall," 1605; and "The Puritaine Widdow," 1607. The poems are represented, among others, by the "Sonnets," 1609; and "The Rape of Lucreece," 1616.

Examples are shown of the nine Quartos — "Merry Wives of Windsor," "Pericles," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Merchant of Venice," "Life of Sir John Oldcastle," "Henry V," "King Lear," "The Yorkshire Tragedy," and the second part of "Henry VI," which, issued in one volume in 1619, form, so it is claimed, the first collected edition of Shakespeare.

The exhibition also includes a copy of Sanford's translation of Cornelius Agrippa, lent by the Author's Club of New York. This volume is from the Richard Henry Stoddard bequest, and Mr. Stoddard believed the writing on the title-page to be an autograph signature of Shakespeare.

Another case is devoted to curious and interesting books about Shakespeare.

THE FIRST FOLIO

The items of greatest general interest in the Shakespeare exhibition are the four First Folio editions. It is a pleasing fact that the first collected edition of Shakespeare's plays is a book of supreme interest to the collector and to the popular imagination.

This is not due to the mere accident of rarity. Sir Sidney Lee found one hundred and sixty copies of the First Folio to describe in his "Census," published in 1902. Four years later he was able to add fourteen copies more to the list, and five further copies within the next two years. In fact, instead of being a very rare book, save in a perfect condition, it is probable that there are more copies of it in existence than of the original edition of most of the important literary productions of its period. It is thought that a third of the whole edition may now be extant.

Nor is it a matter of dollar value. The declaration of the bibliographer Dibdin that one hundred and twenty one pounds and some odd shillings, paid for a First Folio in 1818, "was the highest price ever given or likely to be given for the volume" is better history than prophecy. In spite of the fact that the market value has soared far above that, and that no one can say what might not happen at an auction where rival collectors were present, still, the First Folio by no means holds the record in book prices.

The book is not sought because of its early date — printing was an art already venerable when the First Folio came from Jaggard's press. We certainly do not esteem it because of its typographical excellence, for it abounds in misprints. Mr. Alfred W. Pollard writes of its printers: "They seem to have left the proofs of the text to take care of themselves, while they tinkered at stage directions and inserted not always accurate divisions into acts and scenes. In the end, either from anxiety to get the book finished, or because they grew tired of an unaccustomed task, they passed some plays for press with the barest minimum of revision, and others with only a little more, and allowed their arrangement of the plays to be influenced by a tradesmanlike desire to put their newest and showiest material in the best positions. In a word, they were very human persons, soon weary of well doing, and with not a conception that they were dealing with the greatest of all English books."

The last clause is the key to the value of the First Folio. In spite of its misprints and errors, the volume, when it came from the press, contained between its covers "the greatest contribution yet made to English literature." That gives the book a dignity which no accident of rarity, no typographical peculiarity could ever bestow. The bibliomaniac sees it as a first edition; the commercialist thinks of the thousands of dollars it would bring. Better than either is the view of the lover of literature who knows that its contents make it the most wonderful book ever written in the English tongue — perhaps in any tongue.

The care with which all known copies of the First Folio have been traced, the skill with which their history has been learned, constitute a romance of bibliography. A Shakespearean scholar, speaking of "Hamlet," said that upon no real throne of this earth had beat so fierce a light as upon that "airy fabric reared at Elsinore." It is possibly true that no book — with, it may be, one or two exceptions — has been the subject of so much study and speculation, has been so carefully investigated from every point of view, as the Shakespeare Folio of 1623.

Of all the existing copies, scattered about the earth in private libraries or public institutions, at least something is known of the history and condition. Many of them have been subjected to the most thorough expert examination; of some the history is known for more than a century. In a few cases the history and ownership of the book has been traced since it first issued from the press. Still others exist only in tradition, and these untraced or lost copies, from that purchased in the year of publication by the Spanish Ambassador to England and carried to the Casa del Sol at Valladolid, to that which sank in the steamship "Arctic," and that said to have been burned in the Chicago fire — all have added to the interest and charm which surround the First Folio.

A BABYLONIAN VASE WITH A QUADRILINGUAL INSCRIPTION

THROUGH the generosity of Mrs. Henry Draper, the Library has come into possession of two fragments of a marble vase, about 13½ inches in height, dating from the fifth century B. C., and evidently discovered in some Babylonian mound. (They were mentioned, briefly, in the April number of the BULLETIN.) The interest of the fragments lies in the fact that there is incised upon them one and the same inscription in four different languages. The words are "Xerxes, the Great King." The three horizontal lines are in the various forms of cuneiform writing current in the lands on both sides of the Tigris River. The first is in the Old Persian. The second is in what is now called Elamitic; but which, in the course of the last few years has also been styled Scythian, Anzanian and Susian: the language used by the ancient population of South-western Persia before the Indo-European invaders seized the country. The third line is in the ordinary Semitic Babylonian of the day. The vertical column contains the same legend in Egyptian hieroglyphics, reminding us of the large territory under the sway of the Achämenian Kings, from the confines of India almost up to the sources of the Nile.

FRAGMENTS OF BABYLONIAN VASE WITH QUADRILINGUAL INSCRIPTION

A number of whole vases and numerous fragments have been discovered from time to time and are now in the great European and American museums. This type of vase has also an additional interest, as the first one of its kind ever discovered was used as part of the material for fixing definitely the methods of deciphering the cuneiform inscriptions. In the year 1762 the first account of such a vase was published in Paris by the Comte de Caylus, who had discovered it and deposited it in the National Library (Cabinet des Médailles) of that city. When the key to the cuneiform system of writing was in process of discovery during the early years of the nineteenth century, the vase of the Comte de Caylus was frequently studied. At the same time the mysteries of the hieroglyphic script were yielding to the labors of Champollion. It was rightly supposed that the one might be helpful to the other; and an agreement was made that the Abbé St. Martin should study the cuneiform and Champollion the hieroglyphic text and that they should then compare their results. The comparison showed that both were evidently on the right track.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

READERS AND VISITORS

DURING April the total number of readers in the Central Building was 58,242. They consulted 189,185 volumes.

Visitors to the building numbered 214,592.

GIFTS

REV. RODERICK TERRY of Newport, R. I., gave the Library an interesting and valuable collection of 42 volumes and 348 pamphlets, among which were the following: "The remedy for duelling, a sermon delivered before the Presbytery of Long Island at the opening of their session at Aquebogue, April 16, 1806, by Lyman Beecher...", N. Y. 1809; "An oration upon the death of General Washington by Gouverneur Morris, 31 Dec. 1799." N. Y. 1800; a collection of Messages of the President of the United States, 1797-1809; early Journals of the House and Senate, etc.

From the Walpole Society of Providence, R. I., came No. 324, of 506 copies printed, of "The old silver of American Churches by E. Alfred Jones... Privately printed for the National Society of Colonial Dames of America at the Arden Press, Letchworth, England, 1913."

Interesting miscellaneous collections were received from the following: From Mrs. A. Beekman Bergen of Tarrytown, N. Y., 14 volumes; from Mr. Dwight S. Mallett of New York, 330 volumes and 6 pamphlets, all of which were State documents which belonged to the late Corporation Counsel, George L. Sterling; from Mrs. Dessie E. Norton, Mrs. Augusta Norton Simpson, and Mrs. Olivia Norton MacGregor, 648 volumes and 194 pamphlets, also 89 boxes of newspaper clippings collected by the late Frank H. Norton; and from Miss S. Rieser of New York, 54 volumes, 7 pamphlets, and 300 pictures of historical interest.

From Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild of Cazenovia, N. Y., came Lord Byron's Armenian exercises and poetry, "The Pali manuscript written on papyrus; preserved in the library of the Armenian Monastery St. Lazaro," translated by J. F. Dickson, and other works relating to the Turkish and Armenian languages all of which were printed at the Armenian Monastery of San Lazzaro, Venice; from Mr. Charles R. Heins of New York we received a collection of amateur papers published from 1875 to 1885, about 700 in all; the Stewards of the Jockey Club gave the Library ten volumes of "The American Stud Book" by S. D. Bruce, New York, 1882-1910; Captain William McDonald, U. S. Marshal, First District, Texas, gave two copies of the special subscription edition of "Captain Bill McDonald, Texas Ranger; a story of frontier reform by Albert Bigelow Paine ...with introductory letter by Theodore Roosevelt," New York, 1909; from Mr. X. A. Macropoulo of New York came a collection of 20 volumes and 36 pamphlets in the Greek language; from Prof. John A. Mandel two additions to the collection of works on Emperor William II; from Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, volume four of the "Corpus Nummorum Italicorum," Rome, 1913; from Mr. W. EXHIBITIONS

THE exhibition illustrating the "Making of an Etching," in the Print Gallery (321) remained on view. In the Stuart Gallery (316) about the middle of the month, all the exhibits were removed to make place for the usual spring show of "Recent Additions to the Print Collection." This review of the year's accessions is unusually large, and there is offered a noteworthy diversity in printing methods, in nationality, in periods of time represented, in individual expression. There are additions, as always, to the S. P. Avery Collection, among them etchings by Roussel. From various donors have come prints by Whistler, Short, Mielatz, Mrs. M. N. Moran, Timothy Cole, J. H. E. Whitney and others—comprising etchings in black-and-white and in color, wood engravings and lithographs. Numerous additions to the Keppel Memorial Collection include many presentation copies by modern etchers (Buhot, Pennell, Bejot, Storm van 'sGravesande, Van Mayden, etc.), drawings, a noteworthy set of a dozen progressive proofs of a line engraving by Lecomte after Raphael, and some lithographs by Whistler and Pennell. Original copper plates by Leech and Cruikshank call attention to the collection of such plates given to the library by the discriminating friend from whom come the water-color illustrations for Dickens by Pailthorpe, which are also shown. There are a caseful of bookplates, and a selection from the J. Harsen Purdy gift of engravings by Faithorne. Finally, there is a group of 15th and 16th century prints by Lucas van Leyden, H. S. Beham, Pencz, Lautensack, Marc Antonio Raimondi, Van Vliet, Berghem, Naiwincx and others.

Toward the end of the month, a selection from the prints bequeathed to the Library by John L. Cadwalader was placed on view in room 322. The noted British mezzotinters of the latter part of the 18th century, T. and J. Watson, McArdell, J. R. Smith, Green, Jones, Dean, Dixon, and the rest—are brilliantly represented in a large group of famous portraits. Morland, and other painters of genre pieces and sporting subjects, are represented in both mezzotint and stipple. Many of the prints are in colors. The whole collection, which was described in the Library's Bulletin for April, reflects in a remarkable way the taste and life of the land and period which produced these prints.

APRIL WORK

DURING the month of April there were received at the Library 36,663 volumes and 5,579 pamphlets, of which 5,234 volumes and 5,148 pamphlets were credited to the reference department and 31,429 volumes and 431 pamphlets to the circulation department.

Of the reference department receipts 1,677 volumes and 565 pamphlets were purchases, 3,539 volumes and 4,562 pamphlets were gifts, and 18 volumes and 21 pamphlets were exchanges. For the circulation department 30,763 volumes were purchases and 666 volumes and 431 pamphlets were gifts.

The reference department catalogued 3,507 volumes and 3,864 pamphlets; for this work were written 7,107 cards, 5,100 copy slips for the printer, and 221 slips for the duplicating machine. From these 221 slips and 600 slips written for special catalogues, 4,216 cards were manifolded. Cataloguing of 787 volumes and 650 pamphlets was completed by addition to 2,806 cards.

In the printing office 10,181 titles were set, from which 107,364 cards were printed. These figures constitute a record in the output of the Printing Office, and illustrate the ever-increasing activity of that department.

The circulation department cataloguing force wrote 552 cards for the union catalogue, entered 5,887 volumes in the union catalogue and shelf list, classified 520 volumes. At the branches 6,397 cards were written.

Through the interbranch loan system 8,973 books were asked for and 6,817 were supplied.

THE SPENCER COLLECTION

BY HENRY W. KENT

Secretary, Metropolitan Museum of Art

THE Spencer Collection of modern book-bindings is now displayed at the Central Building of The New York Public Library. It consists of one hundred and fifty eight titles (two hundred and three volumes) by twenty six different binders, and illustrated by more than two hundred artists. A descriptive catalogue of the books appears in the following pages.

The donor, William Augustus Spencer, was the son of Lorillard Spencer, of New York City, and his wife, Sarah Johnson Griswold of Lyme, Conn. He was a grandson of Captain William Augustus Spencer of the United States Navy, and great-grandson of Judge Ambrose Spencer of the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Mr. Spencer was born in New York City, and was educated in Europe, partly in Geneva. He made his home in Paris, frequently visiting the United States. He began book collecting as a diversion, many years ago, making a specialty of modern French bindings and illustrated books.

On his last visit to New York he inspected the Central Building of The New York Public Library, not then entirely finished. He was greatly interested, and declared his intention of leaving his books to the Library. Mr. Spencer perished in the sinking of the "Titanic," April 15, 1912.

Even a hasty glance at the books named in the following pages will disclose the fact that nearly all are the product of the latter half of the nineteenth century. With few exceptions, the authors, the publishers, the printers, the engravers, and the bookbinders are all representative of what is modern in their several spheres. Taken together, they present material for a study of bookmaking in France during a period, which, though short when compared with its whole history, has been long enough to be full of vital and lasting results.

The story of the Book, with all of its chapters on printing, illustration, binding, publishing, and collecting, is one in which the French people have had a larger and more important share than any other; indeed, they may be said to have made the fields of book collecting and binding their own.

Fine bookbinding more than anything else depends upon patronage for its existence. Its history is inseparably linked with the social history of the countries where it is practised. The covers of the books of French binders reflect in their polished sides as vividly as literature does in its pages the story of society in France. Johannis Guigard in his "Nouvel Armorial du Bibliophile," (Paris, 1890) says: "The love of books has always been the special domain of the kings of France; all have formed collections of considerable merit for their times." We have to-day the evidence of the aristocratic taste of a long line of kings, emperors, and princes, beginning with Louis XII and Anne of Brittany, in the bindings from the princely libraries of Louis XII, covered with decoration in the fashion of the architectural ornament of his time — diapers and stripes of repeated forms interspersed with coats-of-arms; of Francis I, with their strong feeling for the bindings done in Italy, but with the king's crowned shield or cypher; of Henry II, reflecting the Italian influence also, but with French innovations; of Francis II, with a series of cyphers and fleurs-de-lis; of Charles IX, Henry III, Henry IV, Louis XIII, down to the last Emperor, in all, we may trace the history of book-collecting in its wisdom and its vagaries.

That the love of books and their suitable care were not kingly prerogatives alone, we learn from the recital of the long list of distinguished collectors whose names add lustre to the chapter. Jean Grolier, Viscount d'Aguisy (1479-1565), Treasurer-General of the Duchy of Milan, friend of Francis I, and his ambassador to Pope Clement VII, Treasurer-General of France, friend of Aldus, most lavish patron and promoter of the art of collecting and of binding books, heads the list. To him is accorded the first place among all the names in the history of bibliophilism, and to him, more than to any other one person, we owe not only the dignified position that book collecting occupies among the gentler arts, but also the most important, fundamental style in the decoration of book covers. A worthy successor to Grolier was the celebrated historian of his times, Jacques Auguste de Thou, or Thuanus, as he is more often called, a statesman of repute and a distinguished character. Coming upon the scene at a time when bookbinding was in the golden age of its development, he played an important part — how important, the volumes of his library show — if not as the originator of a new style of decoration, as some writers would have us think, certainly as a lavish and discriminating patron.

The importance of the lay-collector in the book arts is amply illustrated by these two men, but there were many others of their time each distinguished in his way. There was, for instance, Jean Baptiste Colbert, the statesman, and minister of finance, under Louis XIV, an encourager of commerce and the industries, and the founder of the Academy of Inscriptions. Nor may we fail to mention Mazarin, the Italian and French cardinal and statesman, and the founder of one of the great libraries of the world, which bears his name.

The lives of such men as these, "standard-bearers of culture in the citizen-army," covered the period of the French Renaissance, and, as Sidney Lee says, in his "French Renaissance in England," "help to indicate the alluring versatility of the culture" of the period.

To what extent the patronage of kings, princes, and the great ones of the earth is responsible for styles in binding would require nice discrimination to determine, because into such a discussion must enter the consideration of the interdependence of the arts, great and small; the subtle influence of the grand styles of the different periods; the question of tools and of materials; the economic and commercial conditions affecting the uses of leathers, papers, gold; and a knowledge of the associations of binders, or guilds, with their laws, masters, and apprentices. The guilds cannot be overlooked, not only because of their immediate influence, but also because of their later effects upon styles. Last, but by no means least, we should be obliged to consider the influence of the individual binder, with his taste and inventive faculty.

The first of the bindings made in France, like the products of the other arts, show the signs of forms transplanted from Italy, but with certain changes in design and in handling of materials strongly tinged with the individuality of the race, and of the royal and noble patrons. The unsurpassed books bound for Grolier in Italy by unknown workmen, like the first fruits of Gutenberg's press, although the genesis of them all, are among the most perfect examples of the art of book-ornamentation ever produced. In their strongly designed and painted interlacing bands, and gold-tooled arabesques of graceful lines and fleurons, may be found the reflection of the absorbing interest felt by Venice for the decoration of the East, — especially for the painted manuscripts and lacquered covers of the Persions, introduced by Aldus, the Printer, — together with the technique of the goldsmith's art of her own Renaissance. Thereafter, little influence from the outside seems to have affected the binders of France, except, when, the Revolution having laid its ban on all symbols or tools suggestive of the past, they turned to England for help from Roger Payne (the only great binder that country ever produced), and when, later, in our own day, they once more adopted a style of English manufacture.

The effects of the other arts upon binding design is not difficult to unravel. To the early binders of the printed book typography gave of its ornament which it in turn had received from the illuminations on the manuscripts and from the lovely rolls and stamps of their pig-skin covers. We see in successive periods the influence of architecture, of iron-work, of lace-work, of the Chinese porcelains and stuffs, of Boule's inlays in wood, brass, ivory and lacquer, his designs for his cabinet-work, of many things, monumental, grave, and dignified, or, again, flippant and even silly.

During the whole of the period from Louis XII down to the beginning of the nineteenth century, leather was the material chiefly used for the bindings of printed books, with ornamentations in gold stamped on with many little tools or rolls brought to a heat, or with small pieces of varicolored leather, inlaid to form the pattern with the gold. Other materials had been used before and our binders could not have been entirely ignorant of them, — like the ivory covers of the Romans, the enameled metal covers of the Byzantines, the jeweled gold and silver covers of the Italians, the lacquered paper of the Persians, as well as the stamped pig-skin and vellum of the Middle Ages and the painted leather of the Italians.

So early as 1401, the binders of books were granted a charter by Charles VI to form a guild, which continued in active operation until 1791, although the gilders and forwarders separated, the gilders to form an association of their own in 1686. And even after the disruption of guilds, the encouragement to the art of binding was continued by the State after 1798, through what have been called "Assises industrielles" or Expositions. Napoleon himself issued the order for the second exhibition in 1801.

The first important name in the list of French bookbinders is that of the Eves, — Nicolas, who was binder to Henry III; Clovis, binder to Henry IV and Louis XIII; and Robert, son and successor of the latter. These men appeared upon the scene when the style of binding had already assumed racial characteristics in its natural development from the bindings of Italy introduced by Grolier, those adopted from manuscripts, and the early books of the first French printers. Their names are associated with the intricate and graceful branches of foliage, spirals, and flowers, evolved quite naturally from the curved lines and graceful fleurons of the earlier styles, which were interspersed on the field in the spaces between the interwoven curved and straight lines of the bands which now extended across the cover forming irregular shaped panels. Such designs are called "fanfare." Many of the most beautiful bindings of this kind are said to have come from their hands, just as the duplicating of the design of the front on the back cover and the harmonious designing of the back of the cover are ascribed to them.

Another name of importance, belonging to the latter half of Louis XIII's reign, is that of Le Gascon, a binder about whom almost nothing is known. To him are ascribed bindings with designs based upon the earlier forms, but executed with tools having dotted outlines, thus producing an effect that seems to show that their originator was strongly influenced by the laces of the day — and it was the day of wonderful laces. The finest bindings of this kind are those in which the field — the spaces between the bands — is filled quite solidly with filmy patterns, leaving the fillets themselves as if in relief. It is the custom of writers on this subject to call Le Gascon the greatest of binders.

A large family bearing the name of Padeloup became famous through the admirable work of Antoine Michel of the name, who lived during the first half of the eighteenth century, and who, with the Derômes, may be said to represent the best of the art of binding in the reign of Louis XIV. In Padeloup's bindings appear a new set of tools, quite different in character from those which preceded them. A new arrangement of the ornament, of the division of the space to be decorated, a freer use of leathers and colors, and, perhaps, most noticeable of all, an entire departure from the older forms of bands and fleurons characterize his work. It is customary to recite at this point a story of the appearance of a volume of Daphnis and Chloë by Longus, published in 1718, having on its covers a diaper formed of a mosaic of small pieces of varicolored leather, which marked an epoch in bookbinding. These diaper patterns in mosaic were favorites of Padeloup and his followers, many of them recalling the delightful volumes bound for Margaret of Valois in which the tooled branches of leaves divide the cover into panels, which have in their centres the daisy and lily emblems of this princess.

If Le Gascon may be called the finest of binders, Padeloup may be safely characterized as the most individual. He was an innovator, and he is distinguished for his departure from the conventional. Many bright-colored bindings ascribed to him, some bearing his name, with large conventionalized flowers, leaves, and other ornaments suggestive of the study of Chinese porcelain and stuffs, were as far as possible from what had preceded, and furnish the excuse for much of what has been done in the nineteenth century.

While adhering to the older styles in the main, Jacques Antoine Derôme, most distinguished of a long line of binders of this name, by his perfection of workmanship, his adaptation of the lace-like patterns of the previous century, made heavier and stiffer, and by his application of his ornament as a border to his covers, takes rank among the most important in the history of the art.

Many other names exist, some attached to the bindings which their bearers executed, but by far the greater number without such identification. Among them are Badier, Bradel, Boyer, Dubuisson, Duseuil, Le Monnier, Piqué, and Ruette, all following the styles of the times in which they lived.

In the reign of Louis XVI, prettiness was the key-note of the binder's art, exaggeratedly charming and graceful sometimes, in the hands of the best men, working in the traditions of Padeloup and Derôme, but like all of the arts of the period, rapidly declining from the beginning furnished by Padeloup's art. Inlays of lace, miniatures, colored paper, and tinsel covered the little almanacs and frippery diaries. In a period of decadence, these volumes, like the frivolities of the last years of the tottering monarchy, came to an abrupt end.

With the nineteenth century came the rise and fall of styles in quick succession, following daintily in the footsteps of the more serious realities of political events. The styles of the Empire, the Restoration, the Second Empire, and the Republic crowded close upon one another. Napoleon's adoption of the classical style of decoration in his architecture and decorations, was followed by all of the arts and crafts, bookbinding among them, and the borders of frets, palmettes, garlands, trophies, and other Pompeian things, as translated by the architects, Percier and Fontaine, found their way, in the hands of the Bozérian brothers and their followers, to the covers of books. This was done, however, after a timid dallying with the graceful dots and floral sprays of the one really great English binder, Roger Payne, whose designs proved then, as ever since, tempting, but baffling of reproduction. Most of the bindings of the period are characterized by their straight-grained moroccos and their thin and careless tooling when compared with the work of Derôme and of the following decade.

Under the Restoration, Thouvenin, Purgold, and Simier were the most important binders. With heavier tools, more solid gilding, bastard fleurons, the wheel and heavy stamps, they produced original combinations of some merit, in which the predominating motives were adapted to the cover spaces with ingenuity. The culmination of their style expressed itself in architectural forms, Gothic traceries and rose windows, "à la cathèdrale," a sympathetic expression of the Romantic literature of the time.

There came, about 1830, a reversion to type, in the hands of the most impeccable of binders, Trautz-Bauzonnet, and the tools of the Eves, Le Gascon, Padeloup, and Derôme once more found their way to the covers of books with a splendor of the most accomplished tooling, in the richest gold, the most sumptuous leathers and doublures (the insides of the covers) which have ever been seen. It was what Marius Michel has called it, a period of "archæological zeal." It was a period also of a new kind of collector-patron, of the societies which were now formed to print books, and to collect them. There sprang up a furore for collecting, for binding, and especially, for the bindings of Trautz, prices of which soared to fantastic figures, a furore which assumed such proportions that it has been characterized by the name of "Trautzology."

BINDING BY MERCIER

It was but natural that an episode like this should come to an end. The younger men, from 1870 to 1885, under the influence of the new art, "art nouveau," which had its inception in England, began their struggle against the "archæological," raising the standard of individualism — the expression of themselves and of the subject of their books. Now for the first time was heard the plea for the characterization of the book in the design of its cover.

We have said that fine bindings depend upon patronage for their existence. With the fall of the Empire, patronage in its old sense died, but a new kind arose with the formation in 1874 of an association of collectors calling themselves "Les amis des livres," who determined to produce books in which authors, artists, printers, and binders were to collaborate in obtaining harmonious results.

Publishers, also, like Couquet, C. Lévy, P. Dauze, A. Ferroud, Romagnol, and others, were quick to follow in the new development, associating with them the best artists and illustrators of the day, like Félix Bracquemond, Adolphe Lalauze, M. Leloir, A. Lepère, and many others.

With the movement, the binders were intimately associated, and very important factors they were. Entirely new relations between the contributors to the production of the book came into existence. The binder from being a workman, became a person, an "artist;" he began to write books; to exhibit in salons of his own; and, generally, was one to be reckoned with. The whole period is distinguished by his ambition to surpass and to obtain recognition. Men trained in the rendering of the archæological styles, pastmasters in the art of gilding, like those whose works are in the Spencer Collection, Gruel, Canape, Capé, Chambolle, Cuzin, Lortic, Mercier, and Marius Michel, broke away gradually but surely from the traditions, to make and execute their own designs. The desire for harmony between the cover and the book extended even to materials and methods of workmanship, as for instance — an extreme one — in the "Aurora Australis" of the Spencer Collection, for which the wood of a packing case which contained provisions for the British Antarctic expedition of 1907, is used.

Mosaics, in the richest of leathers, crushed and plain, cover the sides, backs, and doublures of these books, while the richest of silks, satins, and other stuffs are often added to give greater luxuriance. New methods for the treatment of the leather, unheard of before, are adopted, such as modeled leather to produce the effect of sculpture in relief; chiseled leather, to produce the effect of etching; and material other than leather, such as porcelains, metals, and enamels.

Many of the designs made under the influence of these new conditions are varied and striking, having no suggestion of anything which had gone before, with the possible exception of some of Padeloup's most extreme mosaics in the Chinese style. They range through the conventionalized renderings of motives, the partly conventionalized to the naturalistic, and they embrace all forms of ornament, animal, vegetable, and human. The influence of the Japanese method of ornamentation, for which a craze had been worked up, and the influence of the picture-poster, are strongly felt.

Perhaps the most striking thing about these modern bindings is the large size of the lines with which the design is constructed, epecially when compared with the delicacy of line of the older forms of decoration. This is due to the bigness of the design itself, — large wreaths of flowers and leaves, large birds, or butterflies, large pictures covering the whole of the boards, and not to any lack of skill in the rendering of this part of the binder's art. Skill was never more in evidence, it had never been called upon to such an extent, and technical difficulties hardly seem to exist except to be played with. Largeness is the keynote to the whole movement.

Of the individual binders, Marius Michel may be said to be the dominating spirit, the most original and important name today. While master of the older styles, thére is no method of the new styles that he does not essay with an individuality which may easily be distinguished from those of his competitors. Although thought so revolutionary at first, his designs have come to be accepted as the best examples of the search for a new style. In the twenty-five books collected by Mr. Spencer, the range of Michel's work in mosaics is well shown, especially his fondness for partly conventionalized flower motives. Illustrations of five of his bindings are given herewith.

In the twenty-seven examples of Émile Mercier's work collected by Mr. Spencer may be seen the perfection of gilding by this "impeccable" master of that art, one who has never advanced so far afield from the traditions as Michel, but whose designs are always characterized by elegance and taste. One of the illustrations herewith shows his binding for Gautier's "Jean et Jeannette."

Léon Gruel, while not so strongly individual in his designs as Michel, is yet as versatile in his methods of expressing them. His chiseled bindings, like the "Imitation of Christ" here shown, is a good example of his work.

To be convinced of the consummate workmanship of the French binders, to see the extent of their manual dexterity, one has but to examine the gilding and the inlaying of these men, and of Lortic and Joly. Theirs is the skill of the goldsmith and the enameler. Whether or not the art of their designs is as great as that of the older binders, it is idle to discuss at this time. Decorative art is good if it serves its purpose well, is appropriate, and is well done. It is certain, however, that the best of the work of the present-day binders, like that shown in the Spencer Collection, will take its place in the history of book-binding, together with the work of the Eves, Le Gascon, the Padeloups, and the Derômes.

NEWS OF THE MONTH

GIFTS

Of the gifts received by the Library during the month of May the two following are especially worthy of mention:

From Mrs. Hiram Lake of Conneaut, Ohio, came two manuscripts of interest in connection with the history of Mormonism — an agreement between Solomon Spalding and Henry Lake, dated Conneaut, Ohio, 8 March 1811, and an unsigned letter dated Conneaut, 31 December 1833, relating to the recognition by the writer of the identity between entries of the Book of Mormon and the Solomon Spalding manuscript.

From Mrs. Benjamin S. Church of New York came 15 volumes and 35 pamphlets, among which were the following: Minutes of the Aqueduct Commissioners, vols. 1-5 (1883-1889), N. Y. 1889-90; Report to the Aqueduct Commissioners by the President, James C. Spencer, containing reports of the Secretary, John C. Sheehan, and of the Chief Engineer, Benjamin S. Church; "Reports on researches concerning the design and construction of high masonry dams, in view of the proposed building of Quaker Bridge Dam," by B. S. Church, Chief Engineer, 1889; and other reports on the construction of Quaker Bridge Dam, the Washington Bridge over the Harlem River, Boston Water Works, etc.

Among the interesting miscellaneous gifts were the following: From the Bahai Assembly of New York City, 8 volumes and 44 pamphlets relating to the Bahai Movement; from the Metropolitan Opera Company, the opera programmes for the season 1913/1914; from Mr. Louis Marshall of New York the "Proceedings of the Court for the trial of Impeachments — The people of the State of New York by the Assembly thereof against William Sulzer as Governor, held at the Capitol in the City of Albany, New York, Sept. 18, 1913 to October 17, 1913" (Volumes 1 and 2); from Mr. Joseph H. Fussell of Point Loma four pamphlets on theosophical subjects; from the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., New York, 172 volumes and 86 pamphlets (43 sets) of the "Brief of Arguments against public ownership," vol. 1-3; and Supplements No. 6, 8, 9 for "Brief of Arguments against public ownership."

Additions to the Library's collection of genealogical works were received from the following: Mr. William N. Barrows of New York, Mr. J. W. Hull of New York, Mr. John N. McCue of Crystal City, Mo., Mr. William Nelson of Paterson, N. J., Mrs. Caroline Gaylord Newton of New Haven, Conn., Mr. W. B. O'Connor of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mrs. Henry C. Swords and Miss Grace C. Clarkson of New York, and Miss Florence Whittlesey Thompson of Portland, Maine.

The following authors presented the Library with copies of their works: Mr. John Rutledge Abney of New York, Mr. William Edward Barry of Kennebunk, Maine, Baron de Borchgrave of Brussels, Sr. Coll y Toste of Santurce, Puerto Rico, Mr. Frederick L. Hoffman of Newark, N. J., Mr. Robert C. James of Albany,

MAY WORK

DURING the month of May there were received at the Library 15,050 volumes and 3,745 pamphlets, of which 4,185 volumes and 3,543 pamphlets were credited to the reference department and 10,865 volumes and 202 pamphlets to the circulation department.

Of the reference department receipts 2,167 volumes and 768 pamphlets were purchases, 2,016 volumes and 2,768 pamphlets were gifts, and 2 volumes and 7 pamphlets were exchanges. For the circulation department 10,478 volumes were purchases and 387 volumes and 202 pamphlets were gifts.

The reference department catalogued 3,326 volumes and 2,999 pamphlets; for this work were written 2,983 cards, 4,526 copy slips for the printer, and 226 slips for the duplicating machine. From these 226 slips, and 100 slips written for special catalogues, 1,971 cards were manifolded. Cataloguing of 1,002 volumes and 564 pamphlets was completed by addition to 2,608 cards.

In the printing office 6,463 titles were set, from which 68,818 cards were printed.

The circulation department cataloguing force wrote 652 cards for the union catalogue, entered 3,354 volumes in the union catalogue and shelf list, classified 588 volumes. At the branches 7,729 cards were written.

Through the interbranch loan system 8,050 books were asked for and 6,096 were supplied.

EXHIBITIONS

THE exhibition illustrating the "Making of an Etching" in the Print Gallery (321) has been replaced by the Library's collection — one of the few large and notable ones — of etchings and mezzotints by Sir Francis Seymour Haden. With the exception of a few later additions, the prints all form part of the S. P. Avery collection of prints, which latter forms the very backbone of the Library's portfolios of 19th century etchings. The collection offers a complete view of the various manifestations of Haden's art. The dominant note in his work was expressed with much diversity of method; now in unhesitating vigor — almost austerity — of line, and again with the delightful freedom of drypoint or the richness of mezzotint; now with a calm serenity, and again with quick, spontaneous seizure of picturesque effect. A number of portraits of Haden and the usual caseful of literature add their part in the explanation of a most vigorous personality in the annals of etching.

The "Recent additions" in the Stuart Gallery (316) and the Cadwalader prints in gallery 322, remained on view.

READERS AND VISITORS

DURING May the total number of readers in the Central Building was 51,924. They consulted 169,192 volumes.

Visitors to the building numbered 183,560.

ALEXANDER E. ORR, ESQ., a trustee of The New York Public Library from its incorporation until his resignation May 10, 1911, died at his home in Brooklyn, June 3, 1914, in his eighty-fourth year.

Renouard, Paul. La danse; vingt dessins de Paul Renouard, transposés en harmonies de couleurs. Paris: C. Gillot, 1892. 4 l., 20 pl. f°.

The work consists of 20 numbered plates, the title, the printer's mark, the publisher's note, and the table of the harmonies. The former owner of the above copy, finding the size of the book inconvenient (51½ x 37 centimeters), had reprinted the title, the publisher's note, the account of the impression, and the table, and the plates mounted on Japan paper (32 3/10 x 25 3/5 centimeters), so as to make the book easier to handle; for this reason, the leaf with the printer's mark is now at the end of the book. The copy thus altered was originally no. 123 of 275 copies on India paper.

History and Description

Ecclesiastical History

The following outline of the ecclesiastical history of Scotland is inserted in order to make clear the relationship of the different church bodies to each other.

Although Christianity was preached in the south of Scotland as early as 397 A.D. by St. Ninian, yet the introduction of the new faith is generally ascribed to St. Columba, since his conversion of the Picts in 563 A.D. "may fairly be regarded as the governing fact in Scottish history." Notwithstanding the fact that his work of conversion was carried out independently of the Church of Rome, the doctrines of the ancient Church of Scotland were those of the rest of western Christendom. Only in points of ritual were there some slight differences, but these, by the twelfth century, had been smoothed out and the Church of Scotland had become identical with the church of western Europe.

As early as the year 1400, if not indeed earlier, the opinions of Wycliffe had penetrated into the south of Scotland, particularly into the south-eastern counties, where his followers were known as "Lollards" (i. e., mumblers, from the middle Dutch lollen, to mumble). These teachings prepared the way for the doctrines of Luther, which indeed had made such headway in Scotland that in 1525 the importation of Lutheran books was prohibited by an act of the Scottish parliament. The piety and virtues of Patrick Hamilton, abbot of Ferne, "the protomartyr of the Scottish Reformation," who was burned in 1528, encouraged many others to follow his teaching and example. By 1559 the new faith had made such rapid progress that its followers were actually in the majority, and in the following year (August 8th, 17th and 24th, 1560) they were able to pass several acts of parliament whereby the Pope's jurisdiction in Scotland was abolished, the mass proscribed, and the Reformers' Confession of Faith ratified.

The new Confession of Faith adhered in all essentials of belief to the ancient creed of the church but differed widely in regard to the administration of the sacraments and the details of church polity. The First Book of Discipline, drawn up by Knox and his associates, was published in the following year, and supplied a scheme of church government though never approved of by the Estates. Finally the assembly of the Reformed Church which met in Glasgow in 1581 established the Presbyterian form of government as we now know it, and gave formal sanction to the Second Book of Discipline.

On his accession to the English throne King James VI. endeavored to bring the Church of Scotland into conformity with that of England, and in 1610 began by introducing Episcopacy into Scotland as the legal church system. This and other acts in favor of the new communion introduced by him and his son and successor, Charles I., caused much dissatisfaction and bitter persecution during the following eighty years. In 1690 Presbyterianism was again re-established and the Westminster Confession of Faith was ratified as the national standard of belief. At the same time the right of patrons to nominate ministers to vacant churches was taken away.

In 1712 an act was passed in the British parliament restoring the law of patronage in Scotland. This statute caused much discontent among the members of the Established Church and led, in 1733, to the formation of a separate communion which took the name of The Associate Presbytery, but was more commonly known as Seceders. This body shortly afterwards divided into the Burgher and Anti-burgher Synods. In 1761 there was another secession from the Established Church when the Presbytery of Relief was formed. Meanwhile the Church itself was divided into two parties, the Moderates and the Evangelicals, the former of whom were favorable, the latter hostile, to the law of patronage. In 1834 the Evangelical or popular party succeeded in carrying an act of Assembly known as the Veto Act, which declared it to be a fundamental law of the church that no minister should be "intruded" on a congregation contrary to the will of the majority of the flock. The legality of this act was doubted by many, and in connection with the celebrated "Auchterarder case" (1838), the doubt was confirmed by the Court of Session — the highest judicial tribunal in Scotland. The outcome was the great Disruption of 1843, when 451 ministers withdrew from the Establishment and formed The Free Church of Scotland. Patronage in the Established Church was finally abolished by an act of Parliament in 1874, and the right of choosing the minister again restored to the congregation.

The Burgher and Anti-Burgher Seceders were reunited in 1820 under the name of the Associate Synod of the Secession Church, and twenty-seven years later the Associate Synod and the Presbytery of Relief were united under the name of the United Presbyterian Church. In 1876 the greater part of the Cameronian communion, an elder sister of the Church of Scotland, formally united with the Free Church. An attempt was made in 1873 to unite the Free and United Presbyterian Churches, but the union was not completed till 1900, when the United Free Church of Scotland was established.

Incomplete, last leaf wanting.
The author was the father of Robert Leighton, archbishop of Glasgow.
Leighton returned to England from Holland, where he published this book, and copies of it falling into the hands of the authorities, he was tried by the star chamber court in 1630. He was sentenced "to pay a fine of £10,000, to be degraded from holy orders, to be then brought to the pillory at Westminster and whipped, to have one of his ears cut off, one side of his nose slit, and his face branded with S.S., for sower of sedition...to have his other ear cut off and other nostril slit, and then to be imprisoned for life." The first part only of this barbarous sentence seems to have been executed, and he was released in 1640.
